7-Masted Schooner To Nuclear And Super Ships

Quincy Shipyard: Thomas Watson's Other Invention

It began with a 50-horsepower marine engine painstakingly constructed by the new firm of F.O. Wellington & Co. for a small passenger steamer out of Damariscotta, Maine, in the early 1880s.

In the 1970s, the yard produced 939-foot super tankers built by General Dynamics Quincy Division for Burmah Tankers Ltd of England, capable of transporting 125,000 cubic meters of liquefied natural gas across the Atlantic Ocean. In the intervening 90-odd years, more than 1,000 ships, including one of the mightiest battlewagons of them all, USS Massachusetts, were built at what was known locally as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy, with its more than 27 miles of waterfront and deepwater channels, had been in the forefront of American shipbuilding since 1696 when the ketch "Unity" was built at Ship Cove, the site of the present shipyard.

The 116-foot "Massachusetts," in its time the largest merchant vessel built in North America, was launched for the China trade in 1789 at the shipyard of Daniel Briggs in Philip's Head at Germantown.

Unfortunately, she started a life as a jinx ship when a soothsayer, Moll Pitcher of Lynn, forecast that the ship and all her crew would be lost. It took three tries to fill her complement for her maiden voyage.

Massachusetts reached Canton without mishap, Moll Pitcher notwithstanding, and was sold for $65,000 to the Danish East India Co.

Deacon George Thomas turned out 32 clipper ships over 23 years from this shipyard at Quincy Point, the last of them the graceful 2,200-ton "Red Cloud," launched in 1877 when Thomas was 82 years old.

It was in the early 1880s that Thomas A. Watson, relaxing from his labors with Alexander Graham Bell on the telephone, began making marine engines in a little machine shop on the Fore River in Braintree in partnership with Frank O. Wellington.

It was struggling along as the Fore River Engine Co. until the USS Maine blew up in Havana Harbor and the Spanish-American War of 1898 placed a premium on naval vessels.

Fore River Engine Co. landed contracts to build the torpedo boat destroyers "Lawrence" and "MacDonough" and, late in 1899, the 3,100-ton cruiser "Des Moines."

In order to launch "Des Moines," the Fore River Engine Co. moved two miles north on the river to Quincy Neck where the stream was wider and deeper. That's where the shipyard remained until it closed in 1986.

It became the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. in 1901, the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. in 1904, and a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co. in 1913.

Bethlehem's first great vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946. She had to be sunk by naval gunfire.

At the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. during World War I, the Yard and its affiliate, the Victory Plant in Squantum, turned out more destroyers than all the other shipyards in the country combined.

But it was in World War II that the Fore River Shipyard won its international spurs.

On a visit to Quincy in the summer of 1941 as war clouds gathered on the Atlantic and Pacific horizons, Admiral Ernest J. King exhorted workers at the Yard: "You build 'em and we'll fight 'em!"

And build 'em they did!

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), the Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena," were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944). HMS Reynolds was built in a record 24 ½ days.

At its peak of wartime employment on Jan. 15, 1943, the shipyard employed 32,000 men and women in Quincy and its auxiliary yard in Hingham. The U.S. Navy gave it five consecutive "E" (for excellence) awards.

Among the ships launched at Fore River:

The battleship Massachusetts, 35,000 tons, launched Sept. 23, 1941, a full 15 months ahead of schedule; sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

The aircraft carriers Lexington II, Wasp II, built in 20 months from keel to launch; Bunker Hill, John Hancock, built and delivered in a record 14 ½ months; and Philippine Sea, which went to Antarctica with Admiral Richard E. Byrd in 1947.

The cruiser Quincy II launched June 26, 1943, which supported the invasions of Normandy on D-Day, 1944, and southern France, and transported President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the summit conference at Yalta in 1945.

The Yard also claimed to have originated that most mysterious of World War II graffiti, "Kilroy was here!"

Seems there was a checker named Jim Kilroy, whose job it was to go around and count the number of holes filled by each riveter, who was paid by piece work. Each rivet Kilroy counted was checked off so that it would not be counted twice.

Some wily riveters discovered that if they erased Kilroy's check mark, the counter on the next shift would credit them again. So, instead of a mere check, he would scrawl on the ship "Kilroy was here!"

The Yard was turning out ships so fast that there was no time to paint over the words and Kilroy's name began popping up in the most unlikely places all over the world, to the delight of soldiers and sailors everywhere.

After the war, the Fore River Shipyard turned out an amazingly diverse number of ships.

BETHLEHEM'S FIRST GREAT vessel was the battleship Nevada, launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946.

There were the twin passenger and cargo vessels, Constitution and Independence, for American Export Lines; the nuclear subs Sunfish and Whale; the Apollo tracking ships Vanguard, Redstone, and Mercury.

There was the world's first nuclear-powered surface vessel, the Long Beach; and the 108,500-ton super tanker, SS Manhattan, the largest merchant ship built in the United States, capable of carrying 38 million gallons of oil at 18 knots.

The Shipyard was purchased by General Dynamics in 1964 and, after a brief slump in the shipbuilding market, began a comeback with the recent launching of the first LNGs designed to transport liquefied natural gas from Algeria to the States.

General Dynamics ceased shipbuilding operations in the mid-1980s and closed the yard in 1986. Today, several non-shipbuilding businesses operate at the location which is still referred to as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy Won Bet

Shipyards in Quincy and San Francisco made a $10,000 bet in 1918 on which could build the most destroyers in that year.

Quincy not only won, building 18 destroyers to San Fran's six, but added 10 submarines and six merchant vessels as well.

A President Visits 'The City of Presidents'

Truman's Appearance 69 Years Ago Last Visit Here By Sitting President

It's been almost 70 years since a sitting U.S. president has visited Quincy.

But President Harry Truman's message to an estimated 2,500 citizens from the steps of United First Parish Church on Oct. 28 1948 – just five days before he won the Presidential election that year – still resonates as an impassioned plea to put people ahead of politics.

The nation's 33rd President was locked in a tight battle with Republican Presidential Nominee Thomas Dewey. Truman arrived in Quincy near the end of a 30,000-mile whirlwind whistle stop train tour.

After he was introduced by Quincy Mayor Charles Ross around 7:30 a.m. that morning, Truman called his visit to the birthplace of two U.S. Presidents – John and John Quincy Adams – a "high honor." He then told the assembled mass that the nation's leaders must work together for the good of the country.

"I have known about Quincy all my life, of course, because it is and has been the home of two great men. I am very glad to be here in this historic site this morning, and it is a very high honor to be presented to you on the steps of this church where two great men and their wives are buried.

"You know," Truman continued, "John Adams and Thomas Jefferson were political enemies, but they became fast friends. And when they passed away, on the same day (July 4, 1826), the last words of one of them was, "The country is safe. Jefferson still lives.' And the last words of the other was, 'John Adams will still see that things go forward.'

"You can't beat that in a republic like this, my friends," Truman said. "That is was makes this country great. We can have our political fights, but we understand that the other fellow has a perfect right to his views no matter what they may be, and he has a right to express them.

"That's what makes the Constitution of the United States the greatest document of government in the history of the world."

Little did anyone know at the time but Truman's visit here 69 years ago this fall is the last time a sitting U.S. president has made a public appearance in the "City of Presidents."

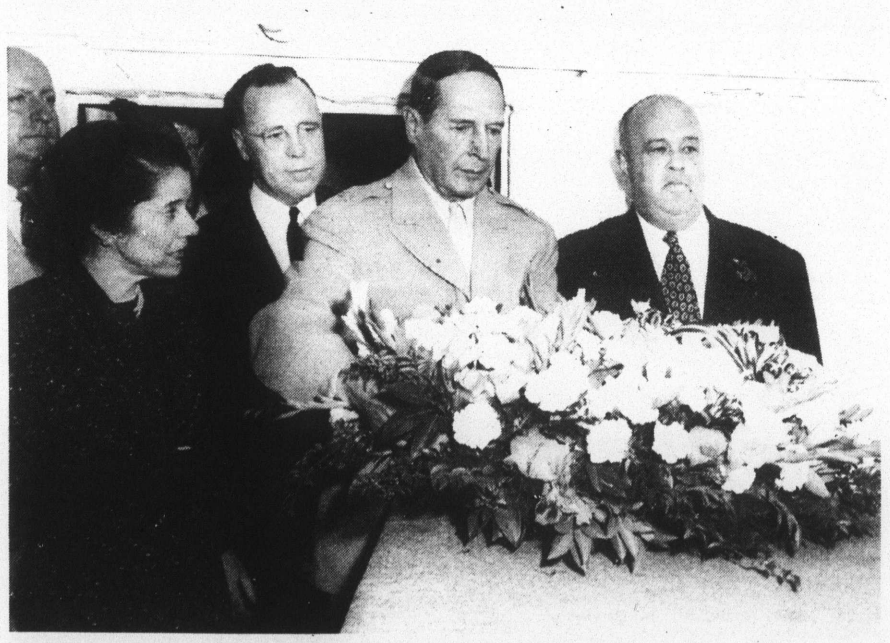
Also on the steps of the church with Truman that day was seven year-old Katie Concannon, daughter of David Concannon, a candidate for Congress. Katie presented the President with a colorful bouquet of yellow and maroon chrysanthmums. But that heart-warming scene nearly never happened.

When Truman arrived, cute little Katie was told she could not approach the President with her flowers. But word quickly traveled that the young girl was heart-broken and soon enough she was allowed on the steps just behind the President.

Among the crowd that morning were 75 Quincy police officers. The president's motorcade was escorted through Quincy by a squad of state and Quincy motorcycle officers. Also part of the procession was a large detail of Secret Service men.

Some estimates put the crowd number as high as 10,000. Some school children expressed disappointment that the motorcade from the train depot located behind the Adams Academy building traveled too quickly to get a good glimpse of the commander-in-chief.

Another Notable Church Visitor



UNITED FIRST PARISH Church has attracted visitors from all the world, including historical figures. On July 25, 1951, General Douglas MacArthur visited the church and placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. With him are Mrs. MacArthur, Mayor Thomas Burgin and City Historian William Edwards. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine." Charles Flagg Photo

1625 And All That: Approaching 400

By EDWARD FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

This year, Mayor Tom Koch launched a planning effort to prepare for Quincy's 400th anniversary in 2025. With the countdown to the big birthday underway, it may be worth considering the other anniversary dates Quincy has commemorated, how we've celebrated historical anniversaries, and the significance of 1625.

Quincy has at various points celebrated three other landmark dates in the evolution of the community. The incorporation of the original town of Braintree in 1640, was celebrated in 1840 with a procession, ceremonies at First Parish Church, a dinner, comments from two Josiah Quincys, and a grand ball. Quincy held a somewhat more modest commemoration in 1940. While the area that is now Quincy formed the major part and the heart of the original Braintree, the present Town of Braintree made more of the 1940 anniversary, as it did again for the 375th in 2015.

In 1988, Quincy marked the centennial of Quincy's move from town to city government with speeches and fireworks. Four years later it celebrated the bicentennial of the 1792 establishment of Quincy as a separate town, with a parade and fireworks and an event at which the city councilors donned 18th century garb to re-enact the first meeting of town selectmen. The one significant year that appears never to have been commemorated is 1634, when the colonial legislature voted that Boston have "enlargement at Mt. Wollaston," thereby establishing the permanent English settlement here.

There seems always to have been this urge to note significant anniversaries of historic years. The earliest such commemoration here was a centennial in the mid-1700s. But this was not a 1740 celebration of the 1640 town incorporation, and it did not involve parades or fireworks. True to the town's Puritan nature, it was a September, 1739 service at the Hancock Meetinghouse to mark the centennial of the first gathering of the congregation, some months ahead of town incorporation. At the service, Rev. John Hancock delivered his "Centennial Sermons," which—while placing their main focus on the history of the congregation—inevitably also dealt with town history and thus became an invaluable source for our knowledge of Quincy's earliest history.

Big-time historical celebrations seem to really have taken off, however, in the late 19th and the 20th centuries. And this may be due to both an increased appetite for spectacle and an increased self-awareness about historical heritage. In 1892 Quincy fused celebration of the centennial of its emergence as a separate town with that year's July 4th festivities. There were orations by Mayor Henry Fairbanks and Charles Francis Adams, Jr. But there were also a parade of "horribles," a bicycle race, and a giant fireworks display. The immediately ensuing years saw a burst of historical preservation activity —including the founding of Quincy Historical Society, creation of the Miles Standish and Abigail Adams cairns, and preservation of the Adams Birthplaces.

MAXINE SWINGLE unveils commemorative Granite Ball next to City Hall as part of Quincy's Tercentennial celebration in 1925. The 11-ton Quincy-granite polished gazing ball was a gift from the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association to commemorate the city's 300th anniversary as a settlement on June 12, 1925. Today, the ball is located just a few yards from this area in front of the adjacent City Hall annex building.

By far Quincy's biggest historical party, though, was the 1925 Tercentennial. This week-long extravaganza featured, along with much else, a mammoth parade, the unveiling of the granite ball next to City Hall—a 300th birthday gift from the Granite Manufacturers Association—and a 3-hour long historical pageant of Quincy, staged and performed by city residents, with a cast and crew numbering far into the hundreds. There were 5 performances over 4 days at—where else?—Pageant Field.

The Tercentennial appears to have been the first occasion on which the 1625 date was celebrated. Why was it previously downplayed and why now highlighted? The urbanization of Quincy may have provoked a longing to recapture the ultimate origin of the community. It is significant that the 1888 Quincy City Seal, with its motto "Manet"—"it remains"—depicts the 1625 arrival of Captain Wolllaston. Urbanization of course also brought social and cultural change. By 1925, Quincy was no longer the Puritan town that it was in 1739 and largely still was even in 1840. It was a prosperous, forward-looking, multi-ethnic city. There would be few qualms about emphasizing the 1625 story and its distinctly un-Puritan elements. Indeed, Thomas Morton, a main character in that story, had gone in the decades prior to 1925 from being regarded as an agent of the devil to being seen as something of a hero.

The story of Richard Wollaston and Thomas Morton and the 1625 settlement is detailed in an article elsewhere in this issue. In 2017, although we know a bit more about those two men and that venture than people did in 1925, much about the story remains sketchy. But sketchiness only adds to the sense of mystery and Romantic adventure that is part of the story's appeal. Everything we do know about Wollaston and Morton confirms that they would fit right in as characters in one of those mini-series on premium cable about skullduggery, intrigue, and naughtiness in Renaissance England.

What has become the standard version of the Wollaston-Morton story was written by Governor William Bradford of Plymouth: Captain Wollaston establishes a trading post colony staffed with a company of men; Wollaston departs for Virginia and Morton subverts Wollaston's designated second-in-command, becomes the leader of the company of men and leads them into all sorts of mis-

Flag Day: Quincy's Grand Old Tradition

In 1948, the City's future Park Director Richard J. Koch started a small intramural men's softball program league that played weekends at Cavanagh Field in North Quincy.

Soon after, a bowling league formed, followed by youth baseball and the City's first girls softball league in 1952 that was led by Richard Koch's wife, Simone. In the decades that followed, what became known as the Koch Club became a thriving recreational and charitable organization that touched tens of thousands of lives across the City.

One of the many lasting legacies of the Koch Club is the City of Quincy's annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration. It started in 1952, with Richard Koch handing out small American flags to his youth baseball players and leading them on a short march through North Quincy, ending with a flag-raising ceremony at Cavanagh Field

As the Koch Club grew, the Flag Day Parade grew with it. The parade expanded to include Koch Club participants from other areas of the City and invitations to march ultimately included every youth organization in the City at the time – including the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, church groups and others. As the number of marching, flag-holding youngsters ballooned to the hundreds, the parade route was changed in 1964, stepping off in Quincy Square and marching to Veterans Memorial Stadium in Wollaston – where the flag-raising was held for many years.

Bands, honor guards, and grand marshals continued the parade's growth, and the event became of the City's largest annual community events throughout the 1960s, 70s and 80s. Honored guests during those years included General George S. Patton, Jr. – the son of the legendary tank commander and a himself a distinguished commander in the Korean and Vietnam wars -- and Richard Stratton, a Quincy native held as a prisoner of war in Vietnam for 2,251 days.

What we know as today's huge Flag Day Parade and Celebration – including fireworks and expanded parade participants and ceremonies, had its origins following the passing of Mr. Koch in 1987. The event was taken over by Mr. Koch's son, Thomas, but it faced an uncertain future and there was talk that it may have run its course.

In the early 1990s, a group of businessmen led by Edward Keohane of Keohane Funeral Home, Bob Curry of Curry Hardware and Michael McFarland stepped in to help bring new life to the event. They understood the value of the event in creating a sense of pride in the City and the sense of patriotism it instilled in its young people. Working with Mayor James Sheets and the younger Koch, who was an aide to the Mayor at the time, they together created an event sponsored by the City and business community that would ultimately become one of the largest of its kind anywhere in America and Quincy's most anticipated event of the year.

While most communities point to Independence Day as their patriotic summer kick-off complete with parades and fireworks – Quincy does Flag Day. And it's worked out pretty well for what's now approaching almost 70 years.

Through all the additions over the years – the bands, the floats, the music, a fireworks display widely considered the most spectacular anywhere outside of Boston – the Flag Day Parade and Celebration has maintained its most important feature: Hundreds of the City's young people, from every walk of life, marching up Hancock Street and proudly waiving American flags.

Honorees who have attended in recent years include General Joseph Dunford, a Quincy native who became Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and General James McConville, nominated in 2017 to Vice Chief of Staff for the United States Army.

Mr. Koch's decades-long contribution to the community and particularly its young people lives on at the event every year with a special award given out at the ceremonies. The Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award is given to a Quincy citizen who has given of themselves to better the lives of Quincy's young people, and past honorees have included youth sports coaches, teachers, business leaders and other mentors.

Thomas Koch, the city's Mayor since 2008, remains as chairman of the Flag Day Committee.

chief. Things get so bad that Plymouth has to send Myles Standish to bust the company and ship Morton back to England.

Yet, it's far from clear that events happened quite that neatly. The possibility remains that the Wollaston colony and the Morton episode were two entirely separate sequences of events. Richard Wollaston now looks far less respectable but far more interesting than the shadowy figure in Bradford's account. He was, in the words of historian Hobart Holly, "a soldier of fortune type." He probably came to New England not as captain of the ship but as the captain, i.e. the boss, of the group of indentured servants being sent here. At various other times in his life, he did captain a ship, fight as a soldier in various armies, become a pirate, and cross paths with Captain John Smith and Sir Walter Raleigh. Thomas Morton, having been in the century since 1925 the subject of extensive scholarly research and analysis, remains a perplexing figure. He probably did have more than a touch of the con man in him, and he certainly was an inveterate intriguer.

But because he was able to write his own story, people have seen in him other qualities that often seem lacking in Bradford and other early New Englanders. He had come to be seen as at least a bit of hero by 1925 because writers had begun to depict him as a symbol of freedom against Puritan repression. In recent years, scholars and writers have enlisted him as a forerunner of other contemporary concerns: as someone who saw Native Americans as human beings, not savages, and appreciated their culture and as a proto-ecologist who saw New England not as a frightening wilderness, but as "a paradise."

Despite, or perhaps because of, its ambiguities, the 1625 story is richly evocative, a history with dramatic events that also provokes ideas and discussion. Fittingly, the City has framed the lead-up to 2025 as a time not just for the planning of a celebration but for a consideration of where we have been as a city and where we want to go.

Marathas New QHA Director

$20 Million In Energy-Efficiency Work, Other Improvements Set

By SCOTT JACKSON

James Marathas has been selected to serve as the new executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority as the agency prepares to undertake $20 million worth of energy-efficiency work and other capital improvements throughout its properties.

Marathas, 49, was unanimously selected on May 24 by the authority's board of commissioners to replace James Lydon as the leader of the agency. Lydon was executive director for four years prior to his retirement in May. Marathas received a five-year contract.

"I'm very excited about the opportunity to lead the organization forward," he said in a recent interview.

"Over the last two years I think we have built an extremely solid foundation with all of the work that has been done to really move the organization forward and to deliver the best possible service that we can to the residents."

Marathas has spent the last two years as the Quincy Housing Authority's director of facilities, where he was

Hazardous Household Waste Drop-Off, Shredding Saturday

The City of Quincy Department of Public Works will host the spring Hazardous Household Waste Drop-off Day on Saturday, June 3, in the rear of the DPW at 55 Sea St.

The expanded drop-off event will begin at 8 a.m. and end promptly at 11 a.m.

This year the event will also feature paper shredding provided by Bay State Shredding and dehumidifier recycling sponsored by Mass Save. While there is no charge for residents of Quincy, participants in the dehumidifier recycling will receive a rebate form worth $30 from National Grid.

Residents should arrive early as the line often wraps around Sea St. onto Southern Artery. Proof of residency is required with a valid MA Driver's License. The City of Quincy provides this free service to assist residents in the proper disposal of hazardous waste and protect the environment.

Some of the eligible items for disposal are oil based paints, thinners, strippers, oils and varnishes, all household cleaners including drain and plumbing cleaners, automotive fluids including oil and gasoline, chemical fertilizers and insecticides, polishes, ni-cad and lithium batteries, roofing tar and driveway sealants.

Of the utmost importance is all mercury containing products such as thermostats, thermometers, fluorescent tubes, CFL (swirly) light bulbs, button batteries and mercurochrome. Once released into the environment, mercury persists for long periods of time and

DEP Recognizes DPW For Outstanding Performance

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection has recognized the DPW Water Operations for its outstanding performance and achievement and for its "robust lead (water) service line replacement program."

The Public Water System Awards Program selects one Public Water System (PWS) in their region that has performed an exemplary job running their public water system in calendar year 2016. Specifically, the DPW is being recognized for its comprehensive Lead Service Replacement Program.

Under Mayor Thomas P. Koch's commitment to infrastructure investments, and with the support of the City Council, the city has experienced a steady replacement of lead services over the years while keeping the water system in good repair for residents and for new businesses.

"One of the primary goals of the Department is to provide safe, clean water to all residents and businesses," said DPW Commissioner Daniel G. Raymondi. "The Department of Public Works prides itself in having maintained a collection of excellent records of their underground infrastructure, including lead water service connections.

"When the news of lead in the drinking water broke in Flint, Michigan I knew we were in a much better position regarding lead water services than most other cities our size. That is why our Lead Service Replacement Program is so important. This program protects our children and improves the health of our community."

With the support of Mayor Koch, the City Council approved a plan to replace all the lead water services and to fund the project through the MWRA's 0 percent interest loan program. This timely action, outreach and education resulted in a better than 90 percent participation in the program.

"This important Public Works initiative, which is unmatched in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is a great opportunity to educate the public about the dangers of lead and to eliminate lead from all water service lines," Raymondi said.

Quincy consumes approximately 10 million gallons of water per day from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). The City of Quincy owns and maintains about 228 miles of water main piping and 23,500 service connections. While properly treated water limits the dangers of lead pipes, lead service lines, lead solder used in plumbing and some brass fixtures in homes can increase the risk of exposure to lead through drinking water. Corrosion of lead-based materials can add lead to tap water, especially if water sits for a long time in the pipes before it is used.

The DPW reached out to all residents impacted by lead water service pipes, mailed educational materials to homeowners, conducted home inspections and on-site water sampling, documented specifics about each individual service replacement and updated its progress on the DPW website. At the same time, DPW engineers developed plans and specifications for the work. In addition, the DPW held public and private meetings with affected homeowners to educate them and also acquired the necessary Right of Entry agreements so that we could perform the private property portion of the work.

Mayor Koch commented, "I am very appreciative and grateful for the hard work of our Department of Public Works and for the DEP's recognition of the enormous success of our comprehensive Lead Service Replacement Program."

DPW Water Operations also received a Citation from Gov. Charles D. Baker and Lt. Gov. Karyn E. Polito on the same day recognizing the Department's dedicated service to maintaining a safe, abundant supply of clean water and in appreciation of its commitment to protecting this valuable natural resource.

Just last month the DPW Water Operations also received a "Stormy Award" for its work in stormwater management from the New England Stormwater Collaborative.

does not degrade into harmless chemicals. Mercury can damage the nervous system, brain, kidneys, liver and immune system. Developing brains and nervous systems of children are very sensitive to mercury.

When gathering products for the drop-off event leave materials in original containers and tighten all caps and lids. Sort and pack items separately in sturdy upright boxes. NEVER MIX CHEMICALS. Pack your car the morning of the event and drive directly to the DPW. Do not smoke while handling hazardous material and do not bring children in the car with you.

Items not accepted at the hazardous materials drop-off day are latex paint, tires, ammunition, fireworks and explosives, commercial/industrial/biological waste, prescription medicine and radioactive waste. For the proper disposal of these materials visit the City's website www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/Trash.cfm, and scroll down to "How can I get rid of..."

Cahill President Quincy Chamber Of Commerce

Tim Cahill, past state treasurer, longtime city councillor and former local small business, has been named the new president and executive director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber's Board of Directors announces.

Cahill also served as a former Norfolk County treasurer before being elected state treasurer. As a public servant, Cahill was responsible for overseeing large fiscal budgets, hiring and managing staff, and working with other elected officials on policy measures to improve the business climate in the Commonwealth and the City of Quincy.

Prior to holding these governmental positions, Cahill owned and operated Handshakes Café, a small business located in Quincy Center. At Handshakes, Cahill experienced firsthand the challenges faced by small businesses and learned how to overcome these challenges to become successful. He is also the author of Profiles in the American Dream: The Real-Life Stories of the Struggles of American Entrepreneurs, which details the ups and downs of four of Quincy's

Fifth Resident Pulls Papers In Council At-Large Race

By SCOTT JACKSON

Five residents are now circulating papers to run for the three at-large spots on the City Council in this fall's municipal election.

Robert Ross of Howe Street is the latest resident to enter the field. He pulled nomination papers Tuesday.

Four residents had already pulled papers to run for an at-large seat, including incumbents Noel DiBona of Chickatabot Road and Nina Liang of Williams Street, who will both be seeking a second term; Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest of Rock Island Road, who is giving up the ward seat to run at-large; and Domenic Papile of Ridgeway Drive.

Four of the five candidates reside in Ward 1; Liang is the only one who does not.

The third incumbent, Joseph Finn, is not seeking reelection this fall. Finn was first elected to the council in 2001 and is its longest-serving current member.

Residents running for the at-large seats need to collect signatures from 50 registered voters before July 25 to secure a spot on the fall ballot.

A preliminary election, if necessary, would be held on Sept. 12. Seven or more candidates would need to qualify for the ballot in the at-large race to trigger a preliminary election for those seats.

The final election is Nov. 7.

Flag Day Parade Honors Korean War Vets June 10

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, chairman of the Quincy Flag Day Parade Committee, announces Quincy Korean War veterans will be the grand marshal for the 66th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration set for Saturday, June 10.

"The Flag Day Parade and Celebration has always been about 'Old Glory.' There is no 'Old Glory' without our veterans," Koch said. "Last year we were proud and humbled to honor Quincy's World War II veterans. This year, we honor our Korean veterans.

"Many of these men lived through some of the most horrific battles in history. It's certainly befitting that they serve as this year's grand marshall, collectively," the mayor added.

All are invited to attend the parade which steps off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field.

Several bands will join in the procession, including the Boston Crusaders, Waltham American Legion Band, The New Magnolia Marching Band, and the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School band.

In addition to the bands, honor guards representing the Massachusetts State Police, Quincy Police Department and Quincy Fire Department, fire engines from the Bare Cove Fire Museum, a host of specialty units including the Sons of the American Revolution, National Guard Armored Vehicles, various floats and, the parade highlight, nearly two thousand flag-waving youths from several youth organizations citywide will participate in the 1.5-mile march.

The parade will culminate into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of a 30-foot by 60-foot version of "Old Glory", a patriotic performance by Sgt. Dan Clark "The Singing Trooper," and presentation of the Grand Marshal award and Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award. The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration, that began 66 years ago.

The evening is capped off by a fireworks display over Black's Creek, that will be shot off at approximately 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

Korean War veterans who would like to be a part of the parade and/or be on the float, should contact Quincy Veterans Services at 617-376-1992.

For information on the Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

FASCINATING COLOR DISPLAY

When emerald miners in Russia's Ural Mountains first saw alexandrite, one of the birthstones for June, the gemstone appeared to be green by the light of day. However, they soon discovered that this fascinating gem variety of the mineral chrysoberyl shone a brilliant shade of red by the campfire. We now know the gemstone that became the national gemstone of tsarist Russia (because it displays its military colors) actually changes color from green in daylight to red in incandescent light. When evaluating alexandrite, pay particular attention to the color change. The more dramatic and complete the shift from red to green (without the bleeding through of brown from one color to the next), the more rare and valuable the gemstone.

Although chrysoberyl is hard and durable, it can be easily scratched by harder gems such as sapphire and diamond. For simple maintenance, you can wipe your gemstones down using a soft cloth or brush and plain soapy water. For the latest trends in jewelry, please visit our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center or call 617-773-3636. THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On June 13, 1381, a large mob of English peasants marches into London and begins burning and looting the city. The Peasants' Revolt began when Parliament restricted voting rights by raising the poll tax.

• On June 17, 1579, during his circumnavigation of the world, Francis Drake anchors his ship, the Golden Hind, just north of present-day San Francisco and claims the territory for England's Queen Elizabeth I. Drake called the land "Nova Albion."

• On June 14, 1777, during the American Revolution, the Continental Congress adopts a resolution stating that "the flag of the United States be 13 alternate stripes red and white" and that "the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field." The "Stars and Stripes" are commemorated every June 14 on Flag Day.

• On June 15, 1877, Henry Ossian Flipper, born a slave in Georgia in 1856, is the first black cadet to graduate from the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York. Flipper was appointed a second lieutenant in the all-black 10th Cavalry.

• On June 12, 1920, Man O' War wins the 52nd Belmont Stakes, and sets the record for the fastest mile ever run by a horse to that time. "Big Red" was the greatest thoroughbred of his generation.

• On June 16, 1961, Rudolf Nureyev, the young star of the Soviet Union's Kirov Ballet, defects at an airport in Paris. Nureyev broke from the company and threw himself into the arms of airport security, screaming, "Protect me!" The high-profile defection was a blow to Soviet prestige.

• On June 18, 1984, talk-radio icon Alan Berg, the self-described "man you love to hate," is shot and killed in his driveway. The 50-year-old host had stirred up controversy with his outspoken personality, abrasive approach and liberal views. His story provided inspiration for the 1988 film "Talk Radio."

City Remembers, Honors The Fallen On Memorial Day

By JOE REARDON

Speaking from the podium in a spitting rain while a chilly breeze snapped the hundreds of American flags to attention at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Vietnam veteran and North Quincy High graduate Thomas Kiley told the crowd gathered at Monday's Memorial Day services that fighting for his country was not a question of 'why,' but rather 'why not?'

Kiley, who was wounded in action in Vietnam in 1969 and was awarded two Bronze Stars and a Purple Heart, came from a family with a long tradition of serving in the military and the belief that it was an honor

All are welcome to attend.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A June 1, 1941 real photo postcard view of a Boston Elevated Railway trolley heading down Babcock Street through The Willows in Houghs Neck. Sea Street is just out of sight on the right. The trolley, leased for the day from the Boston Elevated Railway, was on a rail-fan trip sponsored by the Boston Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society. They were exploring the trolley tracks of the Eastern Mass Street Railway Company throughout Quincy and the South Shore. The destination sign on the trolley reads Boston Limited, but the car is going the other way. Note the El ad for Suffolk Downs on the front of the car. The old single-track trolley line in Houghs Neck ran the length of Sea Street except for a half-mile stretch along Babcock Street from here to Manet Avenue where it rejoined Sea Street. Buses replaced trolleys in Houghs Neck on July 1, 1946. There was a grocery store and bakery in the building shown here for over 25 years. The Brown family first operated it in the 1920s and then the Stokoes ran it until World War II. The building is still standing although it has had some architectural changes and is now number one Babcock Street. Today, there is a large boulder inscribed "Welcome to Houghs Neck" near where the man is standing. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

DOVE Summer Peer Leadership Institute Aug. 8-10

DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended), Inc. announces its annual summer Peer Leadership Institute.

Students from communities across Norfolk County will train to become Peer Leaders in DOVE's Youth-Speak program, which provides prevention and education about violence and abuse in teen relationships.

This three-day training is open to rising high school sophomores, juniors, and seniors. It will take place on Aug. 8-10 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Quincy High School. The cost is $15 for all three days; accommodations can be made if the fee is a barrier to participation. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

One in four teens experience abuse with a dating or romantic partner, yet many teens are unsure about how to spot abuse in their relationships.

The Institute accepts about 40 students who come together over three days to learn about the complex issue of abusive relationships. Students explore topics including jealousy and privacy in relationships, gender stereotypes, media influences on sex and dating, and barriers to ending unhealthy relationships. Throughout the Institute, students discuss how to intervene safely and help friends who are experiencing abuse.

Participating students earn 15 community service hours to add to their resumes and college applications. After the summer Institute, Peer Leaders bring the information back to their school communities through peer-led workshops and presentations to their classmates.

For questions, or to register a student, email doveoutreachandeducation@gmail.com, or call (617) 770-4065 extension 114. Space is limited.

Thanks City For Crosswalk Repainting, New Crosswalk In WQ

I want to take this time to thank the following city employees for the help and work they did for me and my neighbors of Willard Street in West Quincy.

One, to Commissioner Dan Raymondi, for putting me in touch with Mike Coffey of the Traffic Department, regarding crosswalk repainting in the area of West and Willard Streets in West Quincy.

Two, to Jack Gillon, former Quincy traffic engineer, for putting up with my hounding him for a crosswalk at Hayden and Willard Streets, where there is a lot of neighbors crossing to get to and from Hayden Street to catch the bus on West Street. Not only did Mr. Gillon give us a crosswalk, but he also had signs placed to warn speeding traffic of this crosswalk.

Thank you, gentlemen, for doing such a great job for my neighborhood of West Quincy.

No, I do not plan on running for any office in this city, now or in the future.

Fore River Low Bidder On Export Line Contract

The Fore River Shipyard is the low bidder on two passenger vessels for the American Export Lines.

The local bid, submitted to the Maritime Commission by the Bethlehem Steel Office in New York, was the lowest of bids from three yards opened by the Commission in Washington.

News of Fore River's low bid was received from the national capital by Alexander Purdom, executive vice-president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. The Fore River bid was $27,991,000 for one ship and $26,113,000 for each of two ships.

Estimated construction time for the first ship was 760 days and 850 days for the second ship.

EASTERN MASS DENIES WAGE PROPOSAL

New wage proposals, which averted a strike of 2,100 AFL bus drivers of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway serving 50 communities, came from the union and not the company, management said.

The company said in a statement that, "it made no offer to the unions except a willingness to go to arbitration."

The union contended that the company had proposed a 7-½ cent hourly increase for a 48-hour workweek until January 1, 1949 and an additional 7-½ cents on a 40-hour workweek after that date.

According to the company's figures, the proposed wage scale would cost the Eastern Mass Street Railway $975,000 in 1949 when the full 15-cent an hour raise would be effective.

Historic Josiah Quincy House Opens For Season Saturday

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 3, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

WEST PARLOR and Hall at historic Josiah Quincy House.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The Quincy House recently underwent a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators reinstalled rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The house, located at 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Library In June

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children during the month of June.

Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston

Drop by the Wollaston Library with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11 a.m. on Thursday, June 1st to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child. This program does not require registration

This month we'll be learning about Vehicles - Take a look at things that go! We'll be making parachutes, helicopters and airplanes as well as looking at wheels that spin and boats that float - and sink!

Concert with Liz Buchanan

Join us at 10:30 on Saturday, June 3rd for a special concert with Liz Buchanan. Families with young children are invited to sing and dance with Liz in this highly interactive program especially suited to toddlers.

Science Saturday – Construction Zone

The large meeting room at the Main Library will be turned into a Construction Zone on Saturday, June 10th from 10 to 11 a.m. Children of ages are invited to stop by and test their engineering skills by building with blocks and other construction materials.

Tuesday Storytimes at the Wollaston Beach Playground

Join a children's librarian at 3 p.m. at the Wollaston Beach Playground Park on the corner of Sachem St. next to the Clam Box across from Wollaston Beach on Tuesday, June 13, 20 and 27 for stories, songs and more.

Saturday Storytime with Denise Shaver

Join Denise Shaver for a family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes all about building and construction. This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, June 17th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required.

Book Clubs

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 will meet on June 8th at 7 p.m.

This month we will be discussing Terrible Two by Mac Barnett.

Miles Murphy is not happy to be moving to Yawnee Valley, a sleepy town that's famous for one thing and one thing only: cows. In his old school, everyone knew him as the town's best prankster, but Miles quickly discovers that Yawnee Valley already has a prankster, and a great one. If Miles is going to take the title from this mystery kid, he is going to have to raise his game.

It's prankster against prankster in an epic war of trickery, until the two finally decide to join forces and pull off the biggest prank ever seen: a prank so huge that it would make the members of the International Order of Disorder proud.

Pick up your copy of the book in the Children's Room to read before the meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 will meet on June 13th at 7 p.m.

Our theme will be Oversize books. The Oversize collection is a group of books that are too tall to fit comfortably on our regular shelves so we need to put them in a special collection with extra tall shelves. Because they aren't with the rest of the fiction collection they get over looked. Take some time this month to look through this collection for something you may never have noticed before.

The Harry Potter Book Club @ Wollaston is for all ages, children, teens and adult. Are you a Harry Potter fan? Have you read the books several times or are you just discovering Harry for the first time? Harry fans of all ages are invited to join us from January to July at 7 p.m. on the third Wednesday evening of each month at the Wollaston Branch Library as we discuss each Harry Potter book in turn. We will be discussing Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince on June 21st at 7 p.m. Stop by the main library to pick up a copy of the book to read before we meet.

Dungeons and Dragons Encounters

New and experienced players ages 10 and older are invited to join us on Tuesday, June 20th at 7 p.m. in the Main Library Children's Room for this introduction to D&D 5th edition game play. Take on the role of a fantasy hero in this monthly Dungeons and Dragons game. We will help you customize an Adventurer's League D&D character you can use both in our monthly adventures and at other D&D Organized Play.

Your group of adventurers will start out at level one and take on the module from the 5th Edition D&D Starter Set. Unravel the mysteries of the Lost Mine of Phandelver and what monsters and treasures lie within!

Harry Potter Movie Matinee @ Adams Shore

Join us on Thursday, June 23rd at 1:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore branch for the fifth in our Harry Potter film series, The Half Blood Prince.

In the sixth year at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft, and in both wizard and muggle worlds Lord Voldemort and his henchmen are increasingly active. With vacancies to fill at Hogwarts, Professor Dumbledore persuades Horace Slughorn, back from retirement to become the potions teacher, while Professor Snape receives long awaited news. Harry Potter, together with Dumbledore, must face treacherous tasks to defeat his evil nemesis.

Rated PG-13 Runtime 153 minutes.

Saturday Storytime @ North Quincy

Join children's librarian Cathy deVeer and Quinn Z. Bear at the North Quincy Branch, on Saturday, June 24th at 10 a.m. for Construction Stories.

This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult No registration required.

All programs sponsored and supported by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Quincy Girl Scout Katherine Page Elected To Eastern MA Board Of Directors

Quincy Girl Scout Katherine Page was elected to serve a one-year term on the Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts Board of Directors as one of four girl board members.

Voting members of the council gathered at its annual meeting on May 10 to elect four new adult board members and four girl members, who had previously been selected through a rigorous application process.

KATHERINE PAGE

Page is a high school junior at Weymouth High School and third-generation Girl Scout. She has a passion for science and serves as Safety Captain on her school's FIRST Robotics Team. She is a former member of the Weymouth Middle School's Invention Convention Team and Weymouth Girls Soccer. Katherine earned the Girl Scout Bronze and Silver Awards, and serves as a volunteer for the Standish Humane Society. She plans to study engineering and hopes to collaborate on groundbreaking projects.

"We are delighted to welcome Katherine Page as a girl member of our Board of Directors," says Patricia A. Parcellin, Chief Executive Officer of Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts. "Her leadership experience, commitment to community service, and vision for the future of Girl Scouting impressed our selection committee. We look forward to her unique insight as we work together to ensure Girl Scouting is available to all girls well into the future."

Captain Fishbones Holds Grand Re-Opening

NEW OWNERS of the well-known Marina Bay establishment Captain Fishbones were joined by representatives from Mayor Thomas Koch's office and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce to officiate the grand re-opening of the restaurant May 23. Over 250 people came to celebrate the new ownership, sample the brand new menu and enjoy the beautiful view of Boston Harbor. Since the change in ownership, Captain Fishbones has added a new executive chef, revamped the entire menu and enhanced both interior and exterior areas of the restaurant. From left to right: Owner Pino Maffeo, Owner Donato Frattaroli Jr., Ward 6 City Councillor William Harris, Owner John Carlino, Mayor Koch's Chief of Staff Lisa McBirney and Owner Donato Frattaroli.

Easy Breakfast Biscuit

By MARIE

Almost every recipe I find for biscuits have yeast in them. I found this great recipe for a breakfast biscuit that does not need yeast.

It can go well with a stew or just with breakfast. No matter when you choose to serve them you will find they will get rave reviews!

Preheat oven to 400 degrees
Grease muffin tins

RECIPE

2 cups of flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon of salt
4 tablespoons of butter
1 cup of milk
1/3 cup of sugar

Sift together flour baking powder and salt. Cut in the butter and the fold in the milk and add the sugar. Mix well together.

Spoon mixture into greased muffin tins filling each cup at least half full.

Bake in 400 degree oven for 20 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

They are delicious!

Edamame Hummus

By SUSIE

This is a delicious recipe made with edamame. Edamame is versatile and very mild tasting. It is packed with protein and fiber as well. Make sure you purchase the 12 oz frozen bag of the organic variety. This is a great appetizer to bring to a spring/ summer shindig!

INGREDIENTS

1 12 0z bag of edamame, cooked and cooled according to package directions.
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove minced
1/2 cup parsley chopped
1 tablespoon sweet white miso (available everywhere now, in refrigerated section of supermarket next to tofu)
1 tsp red chili paste
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tsp sea salt
1/4 tsp pepper
5 tablespoons olive oil

Simply mix all in a high speed blender, vitamix, or ninja until creamy and smooth. That's it! Serve with crackers, chips, or vegetables.

Bowling Event Raises $7,000 For Autism

We wanted to take this opportunity to thank everyone who came out and supported our Bowling for #ALEC (Autism Law Enforcement Coalition) Fundraiser on April 22nd at Olindy's. With your generous support, we were able to raise over $7,000 to support #autism.

We would be remiss if we did not personally acknowledge and thank Officer Roger White and his family (Andrea, Roger, Roger Jr, and Julia) for all of their hard work and dedication in making this event soo successful. If you are fortunate enough to know any one of the Whites, you know how dedicated they are to making the world a better place, especially for those with autism. So for that we say - THANK YOU!

We would also like to thank the following individuals / businesses for their sponsorship of items donated to support our event:

Mayor Thomas Koch, Ramona Chapin and George Greene, Mary and David Coletti , Alicia and Bill Gardner, Kimberly Gillis, Councillor Margaret McLean Laforest, Donna Noble, Kevin and Laura Ross, Officer Jim Sullivan, Claddagh Fund Boston, Coop's Bar & Grille, Cucina Mia Cafe & Deli, Everyday Cafe, Gennaro's Eatery, Ginger Betty's Bakery, Helen Shiner at The Shiner Group, Just Breathe Art, Maria's Restaurant, Braintree; Salon Sorella, Toodies Fine Jewelry.

Thank you Mark, Jimmy, and Tommy from Olindy's Bowling Lanes for being such gracious hosts.

Discover Quincy Pop Up Art Gallery At Woodward School Wesnar Hall

By SCOTT JACKSON

Discover Quincy's Pop Up Art Gallery will return this summer as part of the group's 50 Days of Freedom promotion.

The Board of License Commissioners on May 23 approved four one-day wine and malt licenses for the event, which will take place on June 16, 23, 30 and July 7 at the Woodward School's Wesnar Hall, 20 Greenleaf St. in Quincy Center from 6 to 10 p.m. each night.

The galleries will feature the work of local artists, plus crafts and other artisan wares for sale from vendors, Discover Quincy Vice President Amy Huber told the board. Admission will be free with light refreshments available. The event will also feature a cash bar, operated by Craig's Café.

Huber said this will be the third year the pop-up gallery has been offered. The event started in 2015 inside the now demolished Woolworth's Building on Hancock Street.

In other business, May 23 the board granted the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., an alteration of premise, which allows the service of alcoholic beverages on the lodge's 2,970 square foot patio.

Frank Bertoni, the lodge's representative, said the Elks don't plan to sell alcohol on the patio, but the board's action will allow members to take drinks outside with them and also allows for outdoor service during weddings and other events.

The Elks will be allowed to use the patio space from Patriots Day in April to Columbus Day in October, from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. each day. No outdoor music is permitted.

Also on May 23, the board approved the request of LD's Deals on Wheels d/b/a Prestige Auto for a motor II used car license at 147 Coddington St. Larry Allen, the new owner, will be taking over the used-car business that moved there in the fall of 2015. He will be licensed to sell up to six cars at any time on site and would have to go back before the board to increase that number.

The board also approved the name change for the Tedeschi's at 751 E. Squantum St., which will now operate as a 7-Eleven; 7-Eleven purchased the Tedeschi's chain in 2015 and has begun converting the stores. The board's approval does not change the hours the 7-Eleven is open; that would require additional approval.

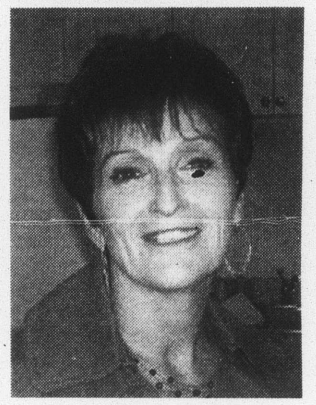
Itching For Summer To Arrive? - Poison Ivy FYI

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-F



RUTH JONES

If you spend time outdoors, chances are you have been pestered by poison ivy at some point.

It starts innocently enough. You chop down a scraggly shrub while doing yardwork. Then, your arms and legs begin to tingling and turn red. Before you know you are covered with an itchy rash. Much too late you realize that shrub was actually poison ivy. Most people are sensitive to the plants' oily sap. The sap is in the root, stems, leaves and fruit of these plants. If it gets on your skin, it produces a blistering skin rash.

Problems can also arise if the plants are burned. Airborne sap-coated soot can get into the eyes, nose, throat and respiratory system.

Poison ivy is a plant indigenous to North America. The ivy is a climbing vine linked to the cashew family. Poison ivy produces an oily chemical called urushiol onto the surface of its leaves. When people come in contact with poison ivy, the urushiol can trigger an allergic skin reaction that produces dermatitis, a reddish, itchy, and painful inflammation of the skin. Close relatives of poison ivy plants that produce comparable dermatitis symptoms are poison oak and poison sumac. The poison ivy rash is an allergic reaction to the oily urushiol chemical from the leaf surface. This is an individual's allergic response to the chemical and is thus not considered to be contagious.

Nevertheless, if a person comes in contact with the oily chemical from an affected person's skin or clothing, then the urushiol could be transferred and a poison ivy rash may develop in a second individual. Direct contact with the oily chemical causes the symptoms and signs attributed to poison ivy.

Symptoms of poison ivy are:

- Localized mild skin redness (erythema)
- Itchy skin

More severe symptoms may include the following:

- Diffuse skin redness
- Edema
- Severe pain and/or itching
- Blister (bullous) skin lesions
- Secondary skin infections

The primary treatment for someone who has recently been exposed to any of these plants includes rinsing the affected area with ample amounts of warm water within 20-30 minutes of exposure to remove the oily plant resin. The usefulness of rinsing decreases with the passage of time, because the oily plant resin is quickly absorbed into the skin. Some experts advocate rinsing with rubbing alcohol, commercially available poisonous plant washes, or degreasing soaps and detergents. Cortisone preparations and antihistamines may help reduce the symptoms and signs.

Dermatologists imply that the first exposure to poison ivy has an incubation period of about five to 21 days before the rash appears. However, repeated exposure to poison ivy results in the rash appearing more rapidly, typically in about 12-48 hours. The diagnosis is formulated utilizing the patient's history and physical exam, likeliness of exposure to poison ivy and the appearance of the rash symptoms and signs described previously. Usually no further tests are required.

Poison ivy is not contagious and is not spread like an infectious disease from person to person. Nonetheless, it can spread if the oily chemical on one person's skin is touched by another person. Even if the oil is on a person's skin or clothing, anyone who comes in contact with the irritant may develop symptoms. Additionally, if the person who has poison ivy touches clothing or other areas of his body that has the irritant on the skin surface; it can spread to other parts of their own body.

Consequently, it is very important to clean off the skin and clothing that has been exposed to the oil and to not scratch or touch the developing rash area if it has not been washed off as this could transfer oil to the eyes, mouth, or other areas of the body. Washing the exposed area within 20 minutes after exposure diminishes the symptoms and signs of poison ivy rash. Once the oily irritant is removed, spread of the rash is prevented, although itching and some pain may take a few days to fade.

Individuals with a poison ivy rash usually do not require medical care. The majority of individuals with poison ivy will have the rash and other symptoms gradually resolve over a period of about one to three weeks. Home care may include cool showers, cool compresses, calamine lotion, and/or hydrocortisone cream. If any blisters develop, it is advisable to leave them alone and refrain from scratching the irritated skin area.

However, some individuals may be extremely sensitive or allergic to the oily chemical produced by poison ivy. If any of the following symptoms or signs arise after being in contact with the irritant produced by poison ivy, the individual should seek immediate medical care:

- Difficulty with breathing or trouble swallowing
- Swelling, especially around the eyes
- Fever
- A rash develops on the face and/or genitalia.
- A rash covers most of an individual's body.
- Nothing relieves the discomfort (itching, pain) of the rash

To outsmart poison ivy:

- Wash your garden tools and gloves routinely. If you think you may be working around poison ivy, wear long sleeves, long pants tucked into boots, and impermeable gloves.
- Wash your pet if it may have brushed up against poison ivy, oak, or sumac. Most pets are not sensitive to poison ivy, but the oil can stick to their fur and cause a reaction in someone who pets them.
- Wash your skin in soap and cool water as soon as possible if you come in contact with a poisonous plant. The sooner you cleanse the skin, the greater the chances that you can remove the plant oil or help prevent further spread.

Here's wishing you a scratch-free summer!

BID Hospital – Milton Community Walk, Health Fair

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) will hold its eighth annual Community Health Walk and Health Fair on Saturday, June 10, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the hospital, located at 199 Reedsdale Rd., Milton.

The family-oriented, health and wellness event starts at 9:30 a.m. with registration for a 5-kilometer (3.1 miles) or a one-mile walk which will start at 10 a.m. from the hospital's Highland Street Parking Lot.

The walks will be followed by family-oriented events including face painting, children's obstacle course, tours of several emergency response vehicles and DJ entertainment. A free barbeque lunch will be available starting at noon.

Boston Red Sox mascot Wally the Green Monster will stop by and be available to meet and be photographed with kids of all ages from 11 to 11:45 a.m.

Returning this year will be the Teddy Bear Clinic, a hit at the event last year. Children can bring their sick or injured bears to be evaluated and treated by BID-Milton Emergency Department staff.

A community health fair in the hospital's main lobby will begin at 11 a.m. Health screenings, including hearing and vision tests, will be available. Funds raised at the event will go towards the hospital's Cardiac Rehabilitation Program. Visit the hospital's website at www.bidmilton.org/walk to download registration forms. Registration is $5 per walker, except children under the age of 12 who are free.

Selecting The Right Sunscreen

Fun in the sun should always include sun protection, and at the top of that list is sunscreen.

With hundreds of sunscreen brands available, it may be difficult to know what to look for when shopping. Before heading off to celebrate the unofficial start to summer, Dr. Mark P. Seraly, MD, chief medical officer for DermatologistOnCall, one of the largest teledermatology networks in the U.S., has compiled a few purchasing tips to help navigate the sunscreen aisle.

1. Look for "broad spectrum" coverage. You want a sunscreen that protects you from UVA and UVB rays, and contains a minimum of SPF 15.

2. Don't be fooled by the numbers. An SPF (sun protection factor) of 15 means it blocks 93 percent of UVB rays. SPF 30 blocks 97 percent of UVB rays, while SPF 50 blocks 98 percent of UVB rays. Double the number DOES NOT mean double the protection.

3. Water resistant is not waterproof. Water resistant means the SPF level stays effective after 40 minutes in water. Very water resistant means the sunscreen will stay effective after 80 minutes in water.

4. People with skin sensitivity should look for sunscreen designed for children. This type of sunscreen tends to be free of fragrances, alcohols or preservatives, and favors minerals over chemicals as the active ingredients.

5. Oily or acne-prone skin? Look for water-based sunscreen.

Sunscreen only works if it is used, so select what you will use and make sure to apply and re-apply throughout the day, especially the highly visible areas of the head, neck and back of hands. "One in five Americans will get skin cancer during their lifetime, so it's critical to not only protect yourself from the sun's rays, but also be aware of any changes to your skin," explains Seraly. "All suspicious spots, non-healing lesions or changing moles should be checked by a dermatologist."

Councillor DiBona Running For Re-Election

Councillor at-Large Noel DiBona announces his campaign kick-off for re-election will be held Wednesday, June 7 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at Alba Restaurant, 1464 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The public is welcome to attend.

In making his announcement for a second term as a city councillor at-large, DiBona said:

"I'm in my 21st year as a small business owner at Russ DiBona & Son Landscaping, Inc., specializing in overseeing landscaping and snow removal services. I reside in the Merrymount section of Quincy with my wife Niamh and three young children Tyler, Aidan and Nora. We are members of the Merrymount Association.

"I was educated through the Quincy Public Schools and graduated Quincy High School in 1993, where I captained varsity football and baseball teams. I furthered my education with a bachelor's degree at the University of Massachusetts Boston.

"I'm a former a Quincy School Committee member, where I served as the chairman of the Health, Transportation and Safety Subcommittee, as well as a board member on the Sterling Middle School Building Committee. I served on Quincy's Park and Recreation Board as a board member in 2012 and 2013. I was a former president of the Ward 2 Civic Association in 2013.

"I take great pride in being the Junior Vice Commander of the Sons of American Legion at Morrisette Post 294. I joined the S.A.L. in 2012 in honor of my father, Russ DiBona, a U.S. Air Force Vietnam veteran and grandfather, Thomas DiBona, a U.S. Navy World War II veteran. On the city council I am the chairman of the Veterans Services Committee. I help maintain and oversee the Flags for Veterans Island at Fort Square in Quincy. I recently brought forth a resolution for a First-Time Home Buyer Program to allow closing costs to be paid for veterans.

"I continue to volunteer my time as the varsity head coach of the Quincy Point Panthers Youth Football team since 2011. I enjoy mentoring and coaching 7th and 8th grade student athletes. I continue to coach my childhood team because I value giving back to the community.

"Some of my main priorities as a councillor at-large have been education, public safety, supporting commercial real estate, and combatting the opioid epidemic. I also serve as the chairman of the Education Committee where I have put forth a resolution to educate with open communication from the Mayor's Substance Abuse Task Force, Quincy Police, Quincy Fire and Brewster Ambulance. My first Substance Use Meeting specializing in the opioid epidemic will be Monday, June 5th at 6:30 p.m. in the City Hall Chambers.

"I have worked on a resolution involving the underground economy and misclassification of employees on construction sites. This resolution is to make sure contractors are abiding by the rules and paying into worker's compensation.

"I'm a member of local organizations: at the Quincy Lions Club, Quincy Knights of Columbus, Quincy Sons of Italy, and Quincy Lodge of Elks.

"Finally, I will continue to apply my business background, community activism and family experience to the City Council in order to keep a balanced approach when making decisions. I take great pride in continuing to serve and protect the citizens of Quincy.

"If you would like to keep up with my run for re-election, please "Like" my website page at facebook.com/NoelTDiBona," DiBona said.

Houghs Neck Garden Club Plant Auction June 7

The public is welcome to attend the Houghs Neck Garden Club's Annual Plant Auction to be held on Wednesday, June 7th, at the Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street, Quincy.

The meeting starts at 7 p.m. with refreshments and a brief business meeting followed by the auction at 7:30 p.m. Everyone has a lot of fun at this lively event to which members bring plants or cuttings from their gardens to share and raise funds for the club's community beautification efforts.

A few days later, on Saturday, June 10th, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., another community event takes place, the Springtime by the Sea Garden Tour. The tour will feature a variety of beautiful gardens and spectacular views of Quincy Bay, Hingham Bay, Boston and the Boston Harbor Islands. There will also be light refreshments and a local artist in each garden.

Guidebooks can be picked up from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the MWRA Community Room at Nut Island. Tickets are $20 in advance or $25 on the day of the tour. For more information or tickets, call 617-472-2800.

The plant auction is the last monthly meeting of the 2016-17 garden club year but throughout the summer Houghs Neck Garden Club members will be working at sites planted and maintained by the club at Leo Kelly Park, the Welcome Rock, the rose garden at Wall Street, and elsewhere.

The Club is a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts and National Garden Clubs, Inc.

Social Security Matters

Raiding The Trust Fund

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I would like to know how much money has been taken out of Social Security by presidents, and was any paid back with or without interest on the withdrawal? Signed: Wants to Know

Dear Wants to Know: The idea that any President or Congress has taken money out of the Social Security Trust Fund is simply not an accurate description of how the Social Security system works. I know these accusations abound on the Internet, normally promoted by someone or some organization trying to further a political agenda. But the reality is that the Social Security program has, since its inception in 1935, been a "pay as you go" system where current workers pay Social Security taxes to fund benefits for current beneficiaries.

Over the years, when there were many more workers than beneficiaries, considerably more was taken in than was paid out in benefits and the surplus each year is placed in the Social Security Trust Fund, which as of June 2016 had a value of 2.81 trillion dollars. By law, Social Security is required to invest that surplus in special issue U.S. Treasury securities, not unlike those available to private investors, which are backed by the "full faith and credit of the U.S. Government," but these special issue securities are redeemable at any time at face value. These securities typically yield interest of about 1.5 - 2.375 percent (2016 rates), and this interest aids in growing the value of the trust fund.

Now, yes, investing in those securities is technically loaning money from the Trust Fund to the U.S. Treasury, where the money can be used for any purpose the Government sees fit, just like all other revenues the Government collects from anywhere. But that loan and those securities can be called for payment at any time by the Social Security Administration when it needs money to pay benefits to Social Security recipients. So when you read or hear something about Congress or one or the other President "raiding" the Social Security Trust Fund, it is simple hyperbole designed to stir emotion and promote an agenda. The reality is that Social Security must, by law, invest surplus funds in interest-bearing special issue Government securities, essentially loaning money to the U.S. Treasury which must be repaid upon demand.

It's worthwhile to note here that there are actually two parts to the "trust fund"; one for Old Age and Survivors Insurance (OASI) benefits and another for Disability Insurance (DI) benefits. Although there is now 2.8 trillion dollars in both of these funds, the current lower ratio of workers to beneficiaries means that both of these funds either already are (as with DI) or soon will (as with OASI) start to be depleted to pay benefits. This is why you are now hearing concerns about Social Security's financial solvency. Current projections by the Funds' Trustees are that the Disability Insurance fund will be depleted by about 2022 and the OASI fund will be depleted about 2034. If Congress does not act before then to reform the program, benefits at that time would be limited to paying out only as much as was received in Social Security revenue, which could mean about a 21% reduction in benefits. However, given the intensity of the spotlight on this issue today, it's probable that Congressional action will be taken in sufficient time to ensure the program's solvency for the foreseeable future.

School, Assessor's Office, IT, Park Budgets Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved more than a dozen departmental budgets at its most recent session, including the $101.66 million the Quincy Public Schools will receive in the upcoming fiscal year.

Also approved that night were new positions in the city assessor's office and the IT and Park Departments.

The finance committee met May 24 to vet the departmental budgets as part of its ongoing review of Mayor Thomas Koch's $299.43 spending plan for fiscal year 2018. The council made no cuts during the meeting, and each budget voted on was approved without opposition.

The largest budget the council reviewed is the $101.66 million the Quincy Public Schools will receive, up from $98.75 million in the current fiscal year. Under state law, the council sets the bottom line for the school budget, with the School Committee responsible for allocating those funds. The school board held a public meeting on the school budget at 6:30 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) in the Coddington Building.

The total school system budget for FY18 will be $105.9 million – including both the city appropriation and about $4.2 million in funds from the state's circuit breaker program – an increase of $3.3 million over the current fiscal year.

James Mullaney, the school system's business manager, said the budget includes $2 million in contractual increases, giving the schools about $1.3 million extra to allocate. That money will go towards six new teachers: two at the elementary level, two English language learners teachers, a special education teacher, a part-time engineering/technology teacher at the middle school level, and part-time music teacher. The budget also provides for a pair of middle school library/media specialists, an elementary nurse and ELL aide and ELL translator, all full-time.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the priority is keeping class sizes in check.

"We build from the inside out," he said. "We focus on our students first and significantly on class size."

Also approved May 24 was the budget for the city assessor's office. The assessor's budget provides funding for a dedicated commercial assessor, but the overall departmental budget will drop by about $30,000 in FY18 to $1.07 million because of decreases in contractual and software line items.

The budget for the IT Department, which includes money for a new technician, was likewise approved. The technician will be tasked with training city employees on financial and other software, according to IT Director Chuck Phelan. The IT budget will increase from $2.5 million $2.65 million, which will also cover rising costs of various software programs the city uses.

The Park Department budget, which will increase from $2.35 million to $2.48 million, was approved as well on May 24. The department's budget includes money to hire a new laborer.

The council approved several budgets falling under the purview of City Clerk Nicole Crispo, all of which are either level funded, save for the 2 percent salary increases given to all city employees, or a decrease from the current budget year. They include the $382,056 budget for the clerk's office; the $700,0172 budget for elections, $117,000 less than this year; $71,865 for the licensing board; and $25,000 for the city census.

Other departmental budgets approved, all level funded except for the 2 percent salary increases, include Public Works ($5.15 million). Inspectional Services ($1.49 million), Recreation ($706,038), and Council on Aging ($679,549).

The council also approved the $788,738 budget for the mayor's office and the $620,647 budget for the council office. The mayor and councillors are the only city employees not scheduled for raises in the upcoming fiscal year; other personnel in those offices will get raises.

The city's celebrations budget, which will increase by $5,000 to $132,500, was approved as well.

Police Recover Stolen David Ortiz Painting

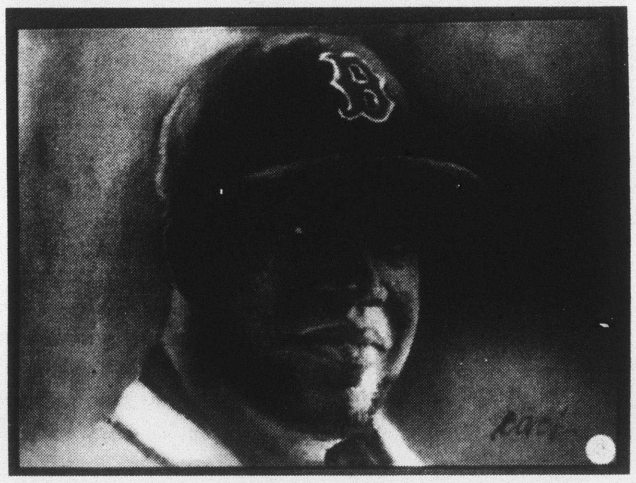
By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy police recovered a stolen painting of retired Red Sox slugger David Ortiz valued at $1,000 that was taken from the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The painting, by local artist Edwina Caci, had been on display at the library and gone missing sometime after May 7. On May 24, a security guard at the library notified police that he had found video footage of the painting being stolen, adding that the suspect had also just entered the library.

Police responded to the scene and spoke with the suspect, identified as Dana Bognar, a 37-year-old homeless man. Bognar told police that a friend of his, James Perkins, asked him to steal the painting and offered Bognar $20 to do so. Police said Bognar admitted taking the painting on May 16 and later gave it to Perkins.

Bognar was arrested and charged with larceny from a building and conspiracy to commit larceny. He appeared in Quincy District Court May 25 and committed to a drug treatment program at the Massachusetts Alcohol and Substance Abuse Center in Bridgewater for up to 90 days.



A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Perkins, age 48, of Broad Street, for receiving stolen property and conspiracy to commit larceny.

Officers were able to determine who was in possession of the painting and recover it from that person. Police do not believe the person found in possession of the painting knew it was stolen.

Two Residents Graduate WPI

Two students from Quincy recently earned degrees from Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Eric Huang was awarded a master of engineering degree in electrical and computer engineering.

Bryan Manning was awarded a master of science degree in mechanical engineering.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open House Saturday

By CATHY EBLING

The Quincy homestead, the beautiful, yellow Georgian mansion, backing on Furnace Brook still sits on the original 1635 land grant accorded to Edmund Quincy I.

The land and the evolving architecture of the Homestead tell the story of a family who, over five generations, played a significant role in Colonial and American history.

Please join us for a free tour on Saturday, June 3rd to learn more about this fascinating family. As an added attraction, the Quincy Art Association's Plein Air Artists have been invited to set up their easels and capture their favorite images of the house and gardens in springtime. We hope you will take a moment to enjoy and encourage them in their work!

While the house of Edmund Quincy I was taken down in 1893 to make way for the Central Middle School, the nearby 1686 Homestead, built by Edmund Quincy II and expanded in 1706 and 1737 by Edmund Quincy III and IV, was continually lived in until 1904 when the Homestead was purchased and restored by the National Society of Colonial Dames in The Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It is currently owned and operated in partnership with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. Located at 34 Butler Rd. on the corner of Hancock Street, the Homestead is easily to find – it is just south of Furnace Brook parkway and the Armory.

Madison Barnwell Assumption Grad

Madison Barnwell of Quincy recently graduated from Assumption College in Worcester with a Bachelor of Arts degree.

Marathas QHA Director

responsible for overseeing maintenance, modernization and inspections; Marathas will remain as director of facilities for the near future. Before coming to Quincy, he served as the director of facilities management for the state's Department of Housing and Community Development, and worked closely with QHA as the housing authority addressed numerous maintenance deficiencies at its properties that were found during inspections in the spring of 2014.

Marathas planned to meet with his entire staff on Tuesday to outline goals for the Quincy Housing Authority. He and his staff are dedicated to providing the best service possible to residents.

"It's real important to note the team that has now been put together at the Quincy Housing Authority, they're extremely dedicated and we all share the same goal at this point, which is to provide the best possible service we can to residents with the budget that we have," Marathas said.

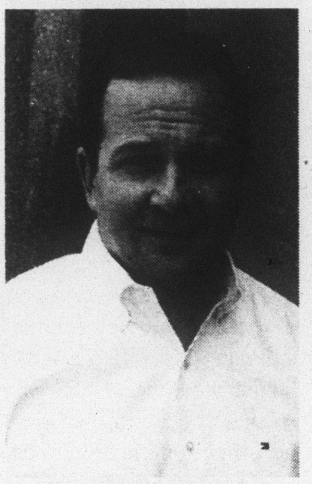
"We're all working really hard to get out of what was in the past, and really move forward with the entire organization."

The Quincy Housing Authority is set to begin $20 million worth of capital projects, including work meant to boost energy efficiency at several properties, all funded by grants.

"We're undergoing an extensive energy-modernization project," Marathas said. "It's a massive project."

Marathas said he wants Quincy residents to be proud of the properties the authority maintains.

"Our goal is to make Quincy Housing Authority an asset for all of the people in the community and to have a housing option available to the residents of the city that they can be proud of," he stated.



JAMES MARATHAS

"It's going to incredibly increase the level of our housing stock. The housing that we're now going to be offering to residents is going to be far superior to what we were before."

As part of the project, the electrical heating systems at O'Brien Towers, Pagnano Towers, Sawyer Towers and Tobin Towers will be replaced with high-efficiency heat pumps, which will be able to provide heat and air conditioning. The electrical heaters being removed are original to their buildings, Marathas said, and can be dangerous because they have glass panels.

The project will also include new insulation at all QHA buildings in Snug Harbor; high-efficiency boilers and domestic hot water at Crowley Court; a high-efficiency domestic hot water system for O'Brien Towers; and new boilers and hot water systems for all of Riverview.

Marathas said the energy-efficiency work would reduce the Quincy Housing Authority's energy usage by more than 70 percent.

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies are scheduled for June 22 to usher in the energy-efficiency projects. The first will take place at 9 a.m. at O'Brien Towers, with another at 10 a.m. at Pagnano Towers.

The housing authority has also received grants worth $2 million for modernization work at Crowley Court and Tobin Towers. The kitchens and bathrooms at Crowley Court will be replaced, including walk-in showers for the residents and new windows; the buildings there will be re-sided as well. At Tobin Towers, the sliding doors and windows will be replaced, and new flooring will be installed throughout common areas.

A $400,000 flooring replacement project is also planned for O'Brien Towers; one-and-a-half-miles of flooring in the common areas there will be installed.

QHA has also entered into an energy-performance contract with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under that contract, all buildings in the authority's federal portfolio – Pagnano Towers, Drohan Towers, O'Brien Towers and Riverview – will get new roofs and low-flow toilets.

The housing authority has several other projects underway. They include a $700,000 site-work improvement project at Tobin Towers, which will raise the site by three feet to enhance drainage and create another 15 parking spaces; a $1 million project at West Acres on Sullivan Road to build four new handicap-accessible units; and the conversion of five units at Pagnano Towers to make them handicap accessible.

Marathas said the work will be done by the end of fiscal year 2018 in June of next year. Residents living at QHA properties will not be displaced by the work.

Additionally, the housing authority's modernization staff will move from Bicknell Street in Germantown to Tobin Towers at 80 Clay St., where QHA is headquartered. Marathas would also like to move the finance department, now located at Sawyer Towers on Martensen Street, to Tobin Towers as well.

Alie Shaugnessy Announces Candidacy For Ward 6 Councillor

Alie Shaughnessy, Crane Operator and business owner, announces he is a candidate for Ward 6 city councillor.

In his announcement, Shaughnessy said:

"I've always been proud of Quincy's patriotism and contribution to American history. I consider serving on the council a public service and a privilege rather than politics. I will do all I can to preserve all that's great about Quincy. I will be your voice on many critical issues." Those issues, he said, include aging infrastructure, economic development/redevelopment, supporting city services, ensuring economic strength of our community and quality of life.

"I stand committed and seek the input of more citizens in the decision process," he said.

Shaughnessy said he also recognizes the need for a balance of smart growth for proposed developments in Quincy. He said his chief desire is to "encourage businesses to make Quincy their headquarters thus increasing tax revenue helping to relieve tax burdens on you, the citizen. By maintaining control and caution we can ensure Quincy remains a vibrant and desired community.

"Traffic is a major concern, the planned development of the North Quincy MBTA station beginning in the winter of 2017/2018 at the same time the MBTA is closing the Wollaston station for A.D.A. (American with Disabilities Act) modification will require incredible coordination.

"I believe we need both projects," he said. "However, I question the timing of doing both major projects at the same time."

A deep-seated family, Shaughnessy said: "My grandfather settled here to raise a family and be close to his business. My ancestors began Shaughnessy and Ahern Truckmen and Riggers of Boston in 1916. The Shaughnessys were always involved in their community. My father told stories of the mayor's official reviewing stands for Merrymount's 4th of July Parade in their front yard, and my Grandfather's own run for City Council many years ago."

Shaughnessy has worked on sites such as Father Bill's, Quincy City Hall's renovation, the Town Brook Project, and Quarry Hills. He said he has devoted personal time, labor skills and equipment to over three decades of Quincy's parades, playgrounds and social service buildings. "I will continue on to serve the city that gave my family so much," he said.

Shaughnessy also announced his campaign team. Patrick Morrissey, a third-generation Quincy resident, father of three and career Union Teamster Rigger, will serve as treasurer. Also on the committee is Tina Giambro Dell'Orfano, a former Local 33 Carpenter who during 25 years of residency has managed commercial property, a marina, and her own business all within Ward 6.

Councillors Voice Concerns Over Traffic, Parking

By SCOTT JACKSON

Several councillors criticized the city department responsible for traffic and parking for not having a better plan to deal with those issues throughout Quincy at a recent finance committee meeting.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain – who asked that the committee's vote on the Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department budget be put on hold during the May 24 meeting – said in a phone interview he was concerned the department does not have any solutions to several major issues the city is facing in terms of traffic and parking. The council will consider the department's budget again on June 5.

Cain noted there are numerous new developments under construction in Quincy, which will increase the number residents in the city. In the coming months, the MBTA will begin work at all four stations in Quincy, including Wollaston, which will be shutdown for renovations for 20 months during which one-quarter of the 550 parking spaces on site will be lost, and North Quincy, where construction of a mixed-use development on site could commence as soon as next January. Cain added that neighborhood parking has been a problem in several areas he represents and he has asked city officials about neighborhood parking programs.

"I just want to have an idea someone is taking a look at these macro traffic issues and looking at solutions," he said.

Cain pressed the administration for a pedestrian safety master plan in the spring of 2016. Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed a $2.3 million citywide traffic, parking, pedestrian and bicycle study as part of his latest $25 million capital improvement plan, now pending before the council. Cain said the TPAL Department, which the city launched last July, should be able to look at issues facing the city before the study takes place.

"The department should be doing the front-end work in identifying these problems before bringing in outside consultants," he stated.

The TPAL Department would see its budget increase to $2.8 million in fiscal year 2018 under Koch's proposal, which would allow the department to hire a second junior traffic engineer. The department presently has a budget of $2.5 million.

Michael Coffey, who oversees the department, came under criticism at the budget hearing for saying TPAL alone would not be able to solve the city's traffic and parking woes. He said a collaborative effort, undertaken as part of the traffic and parking study Koch has included in his latest capital plan, is needed to do so.

"Many of the issues that we're facing today are a reflection of growth and change over the last 30 or 40 years. I would like to give you a plan that says we're going to fix everything in the next fiscal year, but that's unrealistic," Coffey said.

"It's going to take a very good plan, put together with a lot of input from community members and a lot of experts…It will take your involvement and your support. It will need funding. This is not the responsibility of the TPAL Department to fix all the traffic and parking issues. It's your responsibility. It's my responsibility. It's the mayor's responsibility. It's the community's responsibility."

Cain, at the meeting, said he understands Coffey might not have all the answers to the traffic and parking problems, but said the department should have at least some solutions.

"The most pertinent issues we have right now are Quincy as a whole is under construction and families have four and five cars, so what are we going to do to alleviate some of that problem? You're not going to solve it, but I can't believe you didn't have anything," Cain said.

"There's no idea, no concept…That's crazy. That's disturbing, because these are some of the greatest issues we have. If we don't have the faintest idea how to solve them, then we're in deep, deep trouble."

Other councillors raised concerns about traffic and parking at the meeting as well.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said he would oppose the $2.3 million traffic and parking study the mayor has proposed and would rather give TPAL more funds to hire additional traffic engineers. The department currently has a traffic engineer and one junior engineer, and the budget proposal would allow for the hiring of a second junior engineer, which Palmucci called a baby step in the right direction.

"I think we need more

Council Commends Quincy College

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently honored Quincy College in recognition of the school being given the ability to award its graduates four-year degrees.

Gov. Charlie Baker in January approved a home rule petition that allows the 5,000-student school the ability to confer baccalaureate degrees. The school could begin offering four-year degrees in select programs as soon as September 2018.

Councillor Noel DiBona, an alumnus of the school, presented the commendation at the council's April 18 meeting.

"Since its inception, Quincy College has continued to give access to an affordable higher education that prepares their students to enter the workforce. By offering four-year degrees, they continue to enhance their mission and meet the challenging needs of the community," DiBona said.

"Congratulations, Quincy College, on this momentous event in the history of the college. We wish you continued success."

Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras accepted the commendation on behalf of the institution. He thanked Mayor Thomas Koch, the City Council and Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation for their support of the home rule petition and of the college itself.

"Much like a crew team rowing on the Charles River, you can see at Quincy College the effect of what happens when everyone is on the same page and working toward a common goal," Tsaffaras said. "It seems like we've been riding a wave of good fortune lately.

"I like to say sometimes that we're like the little engine that could. We're succeeding at doing things that are counterintuitive to what's happening in higher education today. We're experiencing, as I think you know, unprecedented growth."

"It is my firm belief and something I've said since I've became president that education is the passport that allows one to travel through and navigate our society," Tsaffaras added. "I'm very proud to say that our graduates are earning their passport.

"It our students, staff and faculty, as well as our administrators and board working together with the city of Quincy and our colleagues up and down the Route 3 corridor as one large community, that has ensured that Quincy College now more than ever is an institution that is on the move."

Teaching Grandchildren About Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

One of the greatest gifts you can give a grandchild is the gift of financial literacy. Helping them save money early in life and showing them how to make wise spending decisions goes a long way toward a bright financial future. As they get older, they may want to save for special purchases or their college education. You can encourage them when they get their first job to begin saving for the future, including their retirement.

Securing today and tomorrow

Planning for the Future with my Social Security

When you celebrate their graduation from high school, you can also remind them to set up a my Social Security account. They need to be age 18 or older, have a U. S. mailing address and a valid email address, and have a Social Security number. And while their retirement is many years away, you can explain the importance of reviewing their earnings record each year since Social Security uses the record of earnings to compute their future benefits. As they start their first major job and begin saving, they'll be able to monitor the growth of the estimates of benefits available to them. You can access my Social Security at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Saving For Retirement with myRA

The U. S. Treasury recently introduced a retirement savings account for a simple, safe, and affordable way to save for retirement. It's perfect for people whose employer doesn't offer a savings plan. There are no costs or fees to open and maintain a myRA account. The account won't lose money and is backed by the U. S. Treasury. The individual chooses the amount to save. The account is portable and moves with them from job to job. The account owner can withdraw the money they put in without tax or penalty. You can learn more about myRA at www.myra.gov.

Share How Social Security Works

You can share your knowledge about Social Security with your young savers by explaining how the program works and how it has worked for you. About 96 percent of all Americans are covered by Social Security. Social Security is financed through workers' contributions , which are matched by their employers. We use the contributions to pay current benefits. Any unused money goes into a trust fund. Nearly all working people pay Social Security taxes and about 61 million people receive monthly Social Security benefits. About 42 million of those beneficiaries are retirees and their families. Encourage them to watch our Social Security 101 video at www.socialsecurity.gov/multimedia/webinars/social_security_101.html.

Share Your Retirement Stories

Social Security replaces about 40 percent of an average worker's income, but financial planners suggest that most retirees need about 70 percent to live comfortably in retirement. Americans need more than Social Security to achieve that comfortable retirement. They need private pensions, savings, and investments. That means starting to save early and monitoring your Social Security record for accuracy. You can share lessons from your own life about saving and planning for retirement. Remember, the best place anyone of any age can visit for quick, easy information about Social Security is www.socialsecurity.gov.

Your personal stories about how you prepared for retirement and what role Social Security plays can help them see what is needed for a secure financial future. Give them the gift of financial literacy today.

Customer Service Center Available At Norfolk Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers the Customer Service Center is available to answer questions by calling (781) 461-6101.

The department is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30PM.

"The Customer Service Center is a one-stop shop for Norfolk County homeowners and institutional users who have land related document questions," said O'Donnell. "These questions can vary such as confirming the current ownership of a particular property, or verifying if a discharge of a property's mortgage has been filed after the loan has been paid off. We are glad to help with any inquiry, whether you come through our doors or call us by phone.

"The department can also inform customers about the various cost for filing and receiving land documents. Upon a customer's request -whether it's by visiting us here at the Registry or by a direct mail request - we can provide copies of documents to you for a fee of $1 per page, plus an additional $1 per document to cover the cost of postage."

The Registry only accepts cash or check payments. In addition, the Customer Service Center staff is happy to answer questions about the Homestead Act, a law which provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"For many, trying to ascertain information about land documents can be a very frustrating and intimidating experience," O'Donnell said. "Please know our trained customer service staff is well-versed in all areas of land document research. By utilizing our state-of-the-art land document research system, which is also available via www.norfolkdeeds.org, people can get answers to their property questions."

Notary services are also offered by the Customer Service Center.

Councillors Voice Concerns Over Traffic, Parking

traffic engineers in the city. I don't think we need a citywide traffic study," Palmucci said.

"I think that's great when we're all out there campaigning this election we can say 'we're going to take a look at everything – citywide traffic study,' and then in two years nothing will change. We're going to know what the problems are, but we're going to have no plan to fix them and even if there is a plan to fix them in that citywide traffic study, you don't have the resources currently to do it."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest voiced her support for the traffic study, but said its recommendations need to be implemented in a timely fashion.

"The citywide traffic study is something I do support because I see the resources are not available in house and we've been making these one-off, squeaky-wheel requests," she said.

"I do see that as a necessity for the community, but to Councillor Palmucci's point, let's not put together a binder on the shelf…let's get these things implemented because we can't afford to wait."

Coffey said the department would not wait until the study is completed to move forward on recommendations, but would move forward with them as soon as possible.

Councillor Noel DiBona questioned why Coffey – who was previously the business manager for the Department of Public Works – was not joined by Deborah Finnigan, the city's traffic engineer, at the May 24 meeting or a previous budget session on May 12.

"Where is the traffic engineer? Why isn't she right next to you answering some of these questions? She's the expert," DiBona said. "I would like to have asked her what kind of proposals did she have to make traffic better, what kind of studies has she done, is she traveling around the city."

Coffey said she was unavailable for the May 24 meeting because of a family commitment.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, May 19, at approximately 10:45 a.m., Lt. Daniel Guarente was working a detail at the intersection of Hunt and East Squantum Street when he was approached by a male in a frantic state. The male said that his house on Hunt Street was just broken into and provided a brief description of the male suspect. Lt. Guarente informed Communications of what transpired and Officers Paul Matthews and Mike Sullivan were dispatched to the area to look for the suspect.

Lt. Guarente informed dispatch that his detail was only 75 yards south of the victim's home and the suspect did not come past his location. Officer Matthews headed straight for the North Quincy T station platform in hopes of searching the area before a train arrived. As the Officer walked the platform of the train station, he came across a male standing in one of the enclosed seating areas. The male appeared nervous on the sight of the officer approaching and his t-shirt was soaked in sweat. As the officer approached the male, he noticed that there was a black back pack in between two females sitting on the bench.

The male started to walk away northbound on the train platform. Officer Matthews asked the females if the back pack was theirs and they said no. The officer noticed that the male was now walking very fast so he ran up to him and asked if he could speak to him. At first the male ignored the request and then he took off running.

Based on the male's close proximity to the crime scene, his evasive movements on the platform, and his physical description closely matching the one Lt. Guarente had provided dispatch, Officer Matthews ran off after him while radioing for assistance.

The male suspect ran out of the station and into a nearby electrical room. Using caution that the suspect could be armed, Officer Matthews made entry into the building and noted that a door on the other side was open. He then asked two passerbys if they saw a man running and they said he ran out the other side of the building.

LT. DAN MINTON

Construction workers then pointed out to the Officer that the suspect ran into an adjacent shipping container and shut the door. At this time, Officer Michael Sullivan arrived on scene to provide back up for Officer Matthews. The officers made a gradual approach to the container and saw that the suspect was inside, so they drew their duty weapons and instructed the suspect to exit with his hands high in the air.

Despite instructing the suspect to exit the container four or five times, he still refused to comply with the verbal instructions. Officer Matthews then warned the suspect that a Quincy Police K-9 unit was en route and would be released into the trailer. Upon hearing this, the suspect came out and was immediately handcuffed. The back pack was retrieved from the station platform and inside was a large black handled screwdriver.

Sgt. David Pacino arrived on scene and was advised of what occurred. Officer Michael Sullivan put the suspect in his cruiser while Sergeant Pacino made contact with the reporting resident and his roommate. He learned that they were both asleep in the second floor bedroom when one of them heard someone attempting to open the bedroom door. Initially the resident thought that it was his roommate and went back to sleep, but a few seconds later he heard a loud thud/bang emanating from the direction of the other bedroom. He exited his room and found his roommate standing in the hallway in a panicky state.

He was told that a male broke into her bedroom while she was in bed. He said after learning this, he ran to the kitchen to grab a steak knife as he feared for his life. He then went outside looking for the suspect. He didn't see him but saw the detail officer and told him what occurred. The female victim/roommate said that she initially heard scraping at her door and moments later her door flung open and a male holding a large silver screwdriver in his hand entered her room, but immediately fled the building.

Sgt. Pacino asked the female victim if she could identify the suspect and she said yes. Officer Sullivan then brought the suspect to where Sgt. Pacino was and after looking at him, she stated she was very sure he was the same male. Sgt. Pacino examined the damage to the locking mechanisms, on the front door, (pry marks) and also to the female's room door. There were small indentations on the door frame and around the door's lock which were consistent with the recovered screwdriver.

The suspect, a 55-year-old Boston resident, was charged with breaking and entering in the daytime, possession of burglarious tools and defacing property.

Nice Work!

Community Development Week Supported Efforts To Protect CDBG Funds

The City of Quincy recently joined other communities across the nation in celebrating "National Community Development Week."

The annual weeklong celebration provided an opportunity for Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) communities across the nation to showcase CDBG-funded projects and programs, and to educate residents, community groups, and legislators about the program administered by the U.S Department of Housing & Urban Development's (HUD's) Office of Community Planning & Development.

President Donald Trump proposed to zero out CDBG in the Fiscal Year 2018 budget, and cut in half for the Fiscal Year 2017 budget, a move that bi-partisan support and the CDBG Coalition – led by the National Community Development Association and the U.S. Conference of Mayors – advocated against.

Cong. Stephen Lynch provided comments at a NeighborWorks of Southern Mass ribbon cutting for a federally funded Veteran's Home in Weymouth saying, "Let me just say a few words about the President's budget. He zeroed out everything we're doing here. He's new and I don't think he understands the ramifications of what he's suggest-

Salvation Army Honors Two Leaders At Civic Dinner

ANOTHER COMMUNITY LEADER honored by the Quincy Salvation Army was local businessman and community activist Frank Trainor (second from right). Trainor received the Bruce E. Wood Community Partner Award named in memory of the late Bruce Wood for his civic spirit and service given to both the City of Quincy and The Salvation Army. Peter O'Donnell, Frank Trainor Praised For Dedicated Service

The Salvation Army, Quincy Corps, recently held its fourth annual Civic Dinner at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Some 170 guests were welcomed to The Neighborhood Club by a brass ensemble from The Salvation Army Quincy Corps. Highlights of the evening included a silent auction and children from The Salvation Army's character building programs singing "God Bless America" and "This Land Is Your Land."

A testimonial video was presented to highlight the story of Jennifer and Jimmy Pinn, beneficiaries of social services at The Salvation Army, who not only received emergency services but now choose to give back by preparing and serving meals to children throughout the week at The Salvation Army.

Two awards were then presented to two people in honor of their service to The Salvation Army and to the city of Quincy.

The William Booth Award, named in honor of the founder of The Salvation Army, is one of the highest awards conferred upon an individual by The Salvation Army. It is given as recognition for outstanding service to the community through their donation of time, talent and energy, as well as their dedication to The Salvation Army's goal of service.

"This year's recipient is a man who has shown tremendous care for the Quincy community as well as for The Salvation Army," said Capt. Timothy Ross, Quincy Salvation Army. "Peter F. O'Connell is a lifetime resident of the City of Quincy and is a man well known by many. Many know Peter as a partner in the real estate business but many at The Salvation Army know Peter as a partner in our mission. Peter has been a strong supporter of the work of The Salvation Army over the years."

The second award presented was the Bruce E. Wood Community Partner's Award.

"The award has been named by The Salvation Army's Advisory Board this year in memory of Bruce Wood for his civic spirit and service given to both the city of Quincy as well as The Salvation Army," said Captain Nicole Ross, Salvation Army of Quincy. "This award is given to an individual who has long served and who has identifiable valuable service to the City of Quincy and to The Salvation Army. The first recipient went to Frank Trainor, CEO of Commonwealth Building, INC., and longtime friend of Bruce Wood as well as great supporter for The Salvation Army and to the City of Quincy."

Presentations were also made to O'Connell and Trainor by Mayor Thomas Koch, state Senator John Keenan, and state Representative Bruce Ayers for their outstanding service to the city of Quincy.

This year's civic dinner was sponsored by Mountain One Bank, George C. Burke, Esq., Keohane Funeral Homes, Mayor & Mrs. Tom Koch, Dr. John Pasciucco, Montilio's Baking Company, NorthEast Community Bank, Phyllis P. Godwin, Rotary Club of Quincy, and Quincy College.

The Civic Dinner raised more than $30,000 to date and the funds used from the dinner go to support the social services of The Salvation Army in Quincy as well as camperships for Camp Wonderland.

Wine Tasting Fundraiser

Port 305 and Mix 104.1's Kennedy Elsey will host a wine tasting fundraiser Thursday, June 1 for South Shore Mental Health.

ing. But fortunately, Congress is aware. That part of his budget, it's dead on arrival." Lynch continued. "I can say on behalf of my Republican colleagues and my Democrat colleagues in the House, that's just not going to happen."

At the ribbon cutting, Weymouth Planning Director Robert Luongo shared the history of NeighborWorks of Southern Mass (NWSOMA). NWSOMA started in 1981 as a small revitalization program based in a single neighborhood in Quincy and has since grown into a highly respected regional organization working in more than 25 communities across Southeastern Massachusetts. Each year, NWSOMA provides a wide variety of affordable housing opportunities, financial education and coaching services to hundreds of low-and moderate-income residents.

Mayor Thomas Koch addressed an audience at a CDBG renovation reveal at Manet Community Health Center's Snug Harbor location saying, "It is a meaningful federal program. Some wonder about the relevancy. This truly is relevant to what happens in our city in so many different ways."

The $75,000 in CDBG renovations included exterior and interior paint, roof improvements, flooring, and better lighting. Patient care and service areas were also expanded.

Mayor Koch presented the Mayor's Annual Community Service Award to Manet's Kathleen Sullivan, Office Services Coordinator. The award has been given annually since 2007 to a person who worked to provide a better quality of life for Quincy residents. Past recipients of the award also include Manet CEO, Cynthia Sierra, among others.

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $86 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs. These funds provide the resources needed to address a wide range of unique community development needs for seniors as well as low and moderate income individuals and families. Locally, funds are used to support activities and services such as senior transportation; youth programs; emergency food centers; housing rehabilitation activities; community health center renovations; the creation of affordable housing units; and also supports economic activities such as public works projects and assistance to small businesses for jobs creation.

Tierney, Silverman Lead Presidents Past Red Raiders

By JOE REARDON

Quincy and North Quincy entered the spring season with high expectations, but that was contingent upon both teams staying healthy and avoiding injuries for 20 games in a tough Patriot League.

Neither team's season panned out as they hoped, but that didn't stop the showdown between the city rivals in the season finale May 24th at Veterans' Memorial Stadium from being an instant classic that just may be talked about for a few years down the road.

The lead changed hands twice in the second half and Quincy goaltender Julia Silverman made a half dozen huge saves over the final 25 minutes as the Presidents finally put a number in the win column with a 12-11 decision over the Red Raiders that had the energy of a tournament contest. Quincy finished out the spring campaign at 1-19 while Megan Patey's squad wound up at 6-14.

Quincy head coach Alisa Arakelian praised Silverman for her ability to adapt between the posts after a somewhat shaky start.

"Julia played great," said Arakelian. "In the first half

Tierney, Silverman Lead Presidents Past Red Raiders

she was a little unlucky because she had the sun in her eyes. We were a little lucky in the sense that they had it in the second half. She told me she was struggling a little bit. She really pulled it out in the second half and I was proud of her."

It was the Presidents' youngsters who led the offense as Maggie Tierney used her speed and ability to elude traffic at the net to fire home five goals and fellow sophomore Megan Bailey added a hat trick. It was freshman Margaret Martin who put Quincy ahead for good with the Presidents' winning tally with just 32 seconds remaining. Quincy clamped down on defense in the final half minute of the game and the Red Raiders weren't able to get a shot on goal.

"The pressure kind of got to us but that's ok," said North Quincy head coach Megan Patey. "My center played great - Kerin Coleman. When it came down to it she won the possessions when we needed them. The timeout really helped us regain our focus. We got some energy from that. We always like to win this, but we split our series. I'm excited about next year. We have some good juniors coming back and some kids from the JV team."

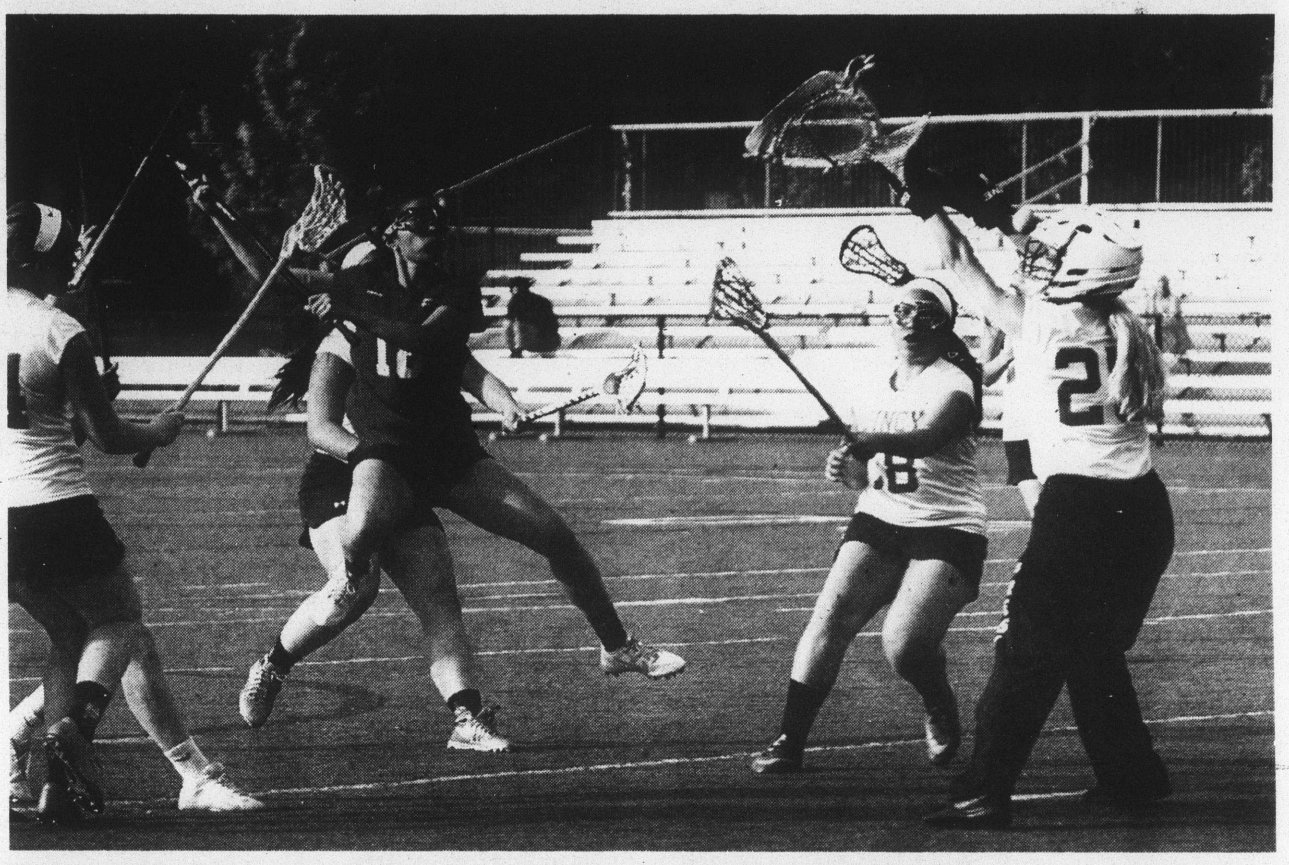
Antonia Alvarado and Nora McLaughlin led the Red Raiders with a hat trick apiece while goaltender Talia Viera finished with 10 saves.

North Quincy's Karyn McEvoy put early pressure on Silverman past midfield. Her persistence paid off as she tucked her shoulder down and raced from behind the net to score with 13:58 remaining in the first to give the Red Raiders a 2-1 lead.

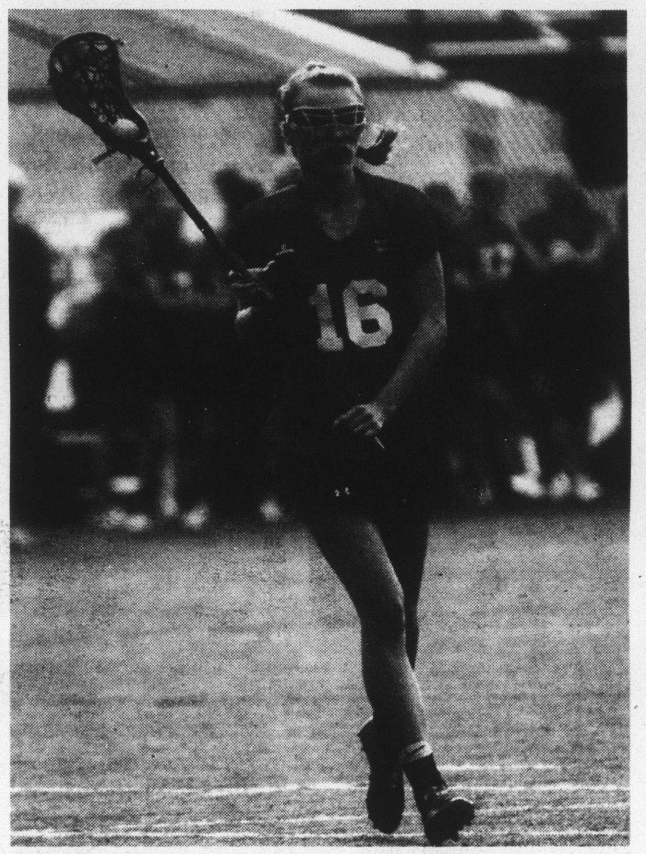
A defensive breakdown in the Quincy end allowed Alvarado to walk in uncontested and score an easy tally to put the Red Raiders up 4-2 with 7:21 remaining in the opening half. North Quincy found the back of the net four more times in the first and went into the break riding on the momentum of an 8-5 lead.

Whatever momentum North Quincy gained, though, faded in a hurry as the Presidents came out flying in the second half with five consecutive goals to go up 10-8 with 7:34 remaining. North Quincy clawed their way back and tied it 10-10 with 3:49 remaining on a McLaughlin tally before North Quincy knotted the game once more on Celia Hussey tally with 49 seconds remaining. Martin ended it with her tally just 17 seconds later.

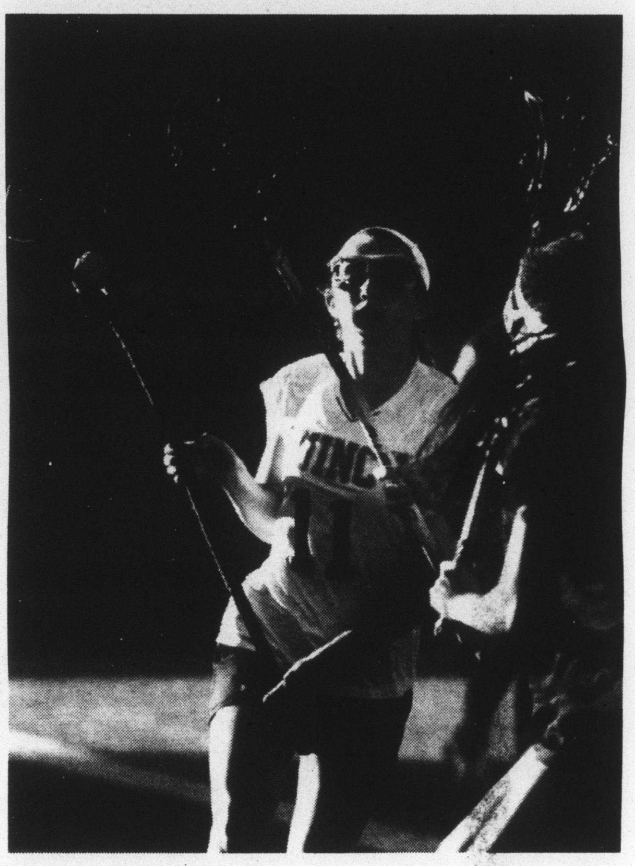
Arakelian said the win was a satisfying one after the season's struggles. "It just was a tough season," she said. "We had a lot of injuries - a lot of senior injuries. We had two of our captains out and one of my junior defenders out. There were a lot of concussions. It was nice to win. Meg's always a great contender. I take my hat off to her. She's such a great coach and has a lot of class, and her kids have a lot of class. They're close friends with a lot of our kids so it's nice to play them and have a good fight."



SURROUNDED BY PLAYERS from Quincy High, Sara Wong scores in the first half giving North Quincy an early 7-4 lead.



NORTH QUINCY'S ANTONIA ALVARADO sprints up field in the first half of a game where the lead changed several times between the two teams. Alvarado scored three times for the Red Raiders.



QUINCY'S MEGAN BAILEY carries the ball upfield as she tries to get by several North Quincy defenders. Bailey scored three goals for the Presidents in a close 12-11 victory over the Red Raiders.

ATHLETES' OFF-FIELD ADJUSTMENTS

When athletes experience injuries that throw their vertebrae out of alignment and thereby inhibit spinal movement, the resultant vertebral "subluxations" (misalignments) interfere with athletic performance. Chiropractic treatment can help relieve pain and restore movement to affected joints by realigning the spine with "adjustments." These manual manipulations of vertebral joints consist of pressing forcefully in the direction of the restrictions to gently realign and mobilize the spine. Adjustments can also be used as part of a preventive strategy that essentially amounts to a "tune-up" to detect overuse or re-injury to the area. In addition, athletes can benefit from preventive maintenance, which helps ensure that no new joint restrictions develop that may restrict future athletic performance.

Chiropractic care offers a natural way to treat and prevent many different ailments that often plague athletes. To schedule an appointment, please call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220. We can help patients with sports injuries, chronic pain, and acute trauma. We often help patients that have tried many other types of treatment, even other chiropractors, to no avail. Our family-oriented practice is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy.

P.S. Professional and world-class amateur athletes regularly rely on chiropractic care to preserve their well-being and optimize their performance.

Emily Bryson Competes In NCAA 1,500 Meter Finals

Brandeis University sophomore Emily Bryson of Quincy, a 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School, finished out the 2016-17 season for the Judges May 27th competing in the 1,500-meter run at the NCAA Division III Outdoor Track and Field Championships at the SPIRE Institute at Geneva, Ohio.

Bryson, who battled fevers all week, finished in 12th place with a time of 4:47.53. She was able to stay within close range of the lead pack through the first 700 meters, running 2:05.52, putting her less than two seconds behind second place. Over the course of laps three and four, the fatigue of illness caught up with Bryson as the lead pack pulled away.

"This was such bad luck for Emily," said head coach Sinead Evans. "She was so fit and looked awesome over the course of last two weeks. It was impressive for her to even reach the finals."

Seeded 9th headed into the meet, Bryson wrapped up her fifth appearance in two years at the NCAA Championships. The two-time All-American will look to build on that total in the fall during cross country season and over the course of the next two years.

NQ Boys Tennis Tourney-Bound

By THOMAS JOYCE

Thanks to hard work and dedication, the North Quincy High boys' tennis team has transformed themselves from a program filled with beginners into postseason contenders.

The #12-seed Red Raiders will visit #5 seed King Phillip today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectionals.

This year, the Red Raiders have made a considerable amount of progress. Over the previous two years, they won a total of three matches. In the 2017 season, however, they qualified for their first postseason appearance since 2004 by pulling off six straight wins to finish the regular season at 10-8. On the final day of their season last Friday, they topped Pembroke High, 4-1 and 3-2 in a doubleheader at the Hanover YMCA.

"I'm just extremely proud of these kids and having the opportunity to coach them the last three years has been an absolute pleasure," Red Raiders head coach Matt Ramponi said. "I'm very lucky, and seeing them elated after clinching the playoffs was something they'll remember for a long time, as will I."

Two weeks ago, the Red Raiders had a major turning point when they faced Plymouth South twice in the same week. Initially, they fell, 3-2, at home, but on May 18, they went down to Plymouth and beat their foe, 3-2, on a first doubles tiebreaker. After that came a 5-0 wins over Randolph (May 22), Quincy (May 23) and Marshfield (May 24).

Ramponi, who is also a Quincy Presidents basketball coach, is in his third year as the Red Raiders tennis head coach. He took over the tennis program because they needed a coach and it would have folded otherwise. Although he was not a tennis player himself, he has allowed the program to keep going and be competitive.

Through his experience with tennis, Ramponi said he is impressed with the high character student-athletes he has been able to coach.

"They're some of the best kids I've ever worked with when it comes to embodying what a student-athlete is," he said. "If they're not at school, at home working or at a side job, they're playing tennis, trying to get better. They're very coachable kids and have improved tremendously in a short period of time.

"I couldn't be more impressed with how hard these kids work and how mature they are," he added. "It is beyond impressive. It's been extremely eye-opening, and coaching them is something I hope to do for many years to come."

Outside of his team's player personnel, Ramponi said a big part of the reason why his team is successful is because of his assistant coach, Daniel Wong, who graduated last year and played for Ramponi.

In addition to Wong, there are a few other former players--Justin Wang, Ken Tran and Wilson Tang- - who have come back and helped the team when they are around.

"It just shows the younger kids that this program meant a lot to them," Ramponi said, of his former players coming back to help. "Even though the team lost a lot back then, it wasn't about that. They've developed friendships they'll have for the rest of their lives."

This year, the Red Raiders are on the younger side. They have just two seniors on their roster, both of whom are key players and major leaders on the squad. Li Chen, who competes on the second doubles team and Brigham McKee, who plays first doubles, are their seniors, and Ramponi is impressed with all they have given the team these past few years.

"They never complain and they always work hard," Ramponi said of the two. "They're always willing to help their teammates along with me. They really help put the guys in a position to be successful."

Headed into this season, the Red Raiders only added one player--freshman singles player Shane Lerkvikarn, and he has fit in well from the beginning. Through 16 matches, he was 14-2 on the year.

"He's come on so strong," Ramponi said of the freshman. "He's been able to show the other kids what it means to be an elite tennis player. If you watch this kid, your jaw drops. It's really made everyone better."

After the season ends, the Red Raiders boys' tennis team will have a fundraising car wash on Sunday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the North Quincy High School parking lot (316 Hancock Street) with the proceeds going to help them purchase up-to-date equipment.

The NQ girls tennis team also qualified for the state tournament. Seeded #11 in the Div. 1 South Sectionals, NQ's first round opponent was undetermined at press time. For more information, visit the MIAA website.

MIAA Division 1 Championships at Lowell Cawley Stadium May 27

Patriot League Championships @ Silver lake May 22

By GEOFF HENNESSY

Quincy-North Quincy athletes put together their best efforts at the recent MIAA Division 1 championships held at Lowell's spacious Cawley Stadium. In all 10 athletes competed in various events.

The top finisher and only point scorer was Junior Devin Hiltunen who advanced to the finals of the 200 meters and finished 8th. Her trial time of 26.32 was a personal best and her time of 26.86 was one of her best.

Alex Case also raced well in the 200 meters with a 26.69 her best time of the year to finish 10th. Jimmy Cannon competed in the talent-laden 2mile clocking a 10:09.74 finishing 23rd. 20 athletes in that race finished in under 10 minutes. Olivia Palazzi ran her best in the 400meter hurdles with a 1:10.87 good for 16th.

Freshman Sarah Pillone had some board problems in the triple jump but still leaped 32'5" good for 19th. Rachel Smith was 20th in the discus with a 78'8" toss. Pillone, Palazzi and Smith are all competing in their first season in their events and have room to improve.

The relays both turned in their best times of the year. The girls 4 x 100 team of Pillone, Allison Wong, Kelsey Coughlin and Mia Healy finished 20th in 53.13 while the 4 x 400 team of Palazzi, Abby Murphy, Case and Hiltunen clocked a 4:16.15, the fastest in Quincy High history. Coach Geoff Hennessy was proud of his athletes.

"To perform your best on the biggest stage is a tribute to the hard work these kids put in all season," said Head Coach Geoff Hennessy. "Wind, rain or shine they were there training hard. On the roads, track or weight room they were there. Credit goes to the assistants who work these kids every day; Michelle Bell with the throwers, Carolyn Mullaney with distance runners, and Dee Page with hurdlers and sprinters, new coach Mike Nee also puts in time in the weight room working on proper techniques and shaking things up with new routines to keep athletes improving.

"It was nice to see Devin (Hiltunen) have a good meet. Most of her dual meets did not go as planned but her last two Invitationals were satisfying, qualifying for D1 at the State Invitational and then placing with a PR and running a great anchor leg on the relay at States. Alex Case also turned heads with a 63 split on the relay. That's not her everyday event, and Palazzi just gets better every time she steps on the track," Hennessy added.

QNQ won several events at the Patriot League championships held May 22 at Silver Lake regionals under dreary conditions. Jimmy Cannon won the two mile and anchored the 4 x 800 relay of Dakota Pendleton, Ryan Polsgrove, and Aidan Ring to victory. Troy Isaac placed in both shot-put and discus finally breaking 100' with a 108'11".

Devin Hiltunen and Alex Case scored in the finals of the 200, Frankie Nunziato made finals of the 200, Shorn Hawthorne won the high jump, Sarah Pillone placed 2nd in the freshman 400, and the Kara Polsgrove and Olivia Palazzi placed 4-5 in the 400 hurdles. The girls 4x400 relay of Palazzi, Abby Murphy, Polsgrove and Hiltunen placed 2nd. Ryan Polsgroye continued to shave time off his mile with a 5:05 time.

Quincycles 'Ride The Beaches'

Quincycles invites the public to their "Ride the Beaches" bike ride on Saturday, June 10.

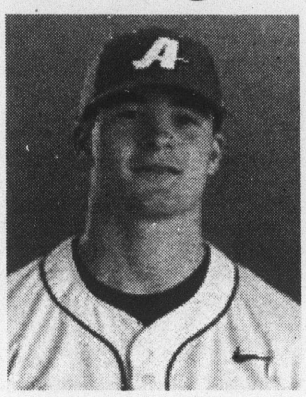
Participants have a choice of doing a longer ride, starting at 7:15 am at Anderson Bicycle (380 Washington St., Quincy), or a shorter ride, starting at 9:30 a.m. at the Kennedy Center (440 E. Squantum St., Quincy).

The longer ride, which covers approximately 22 of Quincy's 27-mile coast, begins in Quincy Point and hugs the shoreline, taking riders from the Point to Germantown, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, and Merrymount before heading down Quincy Shore Drive to join up with riders participating in the shorter beaches ride.

The pace for the longer ride will be about 12 mph with minimal stopping. The shorter ride, approximately 8 miles, will be a more relaxed ride around the coast of Squantum, including the Nickerson Post, Marina Bay, Commander Shea, and Squantum Point Park. If you are driving to the Kennedy Center, park in the Hummock lot across the street. The beaches ride ends at about 11 a.m. at Marina Bay, where we'll enjoy a lunch by Gaveston Cafe with support from Save the Harbor/ Save the Bay.

Quincycles rides are free and open to the public.

Andrew Jaehnig Completes Outstanding Baseball Season At Assumption College



ANDREW JAEHNIG

Assumption College plays wooden bat baseball in the Northeast 10 conference which is made up of 15 Division 2 teams including powerful schools like Stonehill and Bentley and nationally ranked teams such as Southern New Hampshire, Franklin Pierce and New Haven.

Quincy's own Andrew Jaehnig, a junior catcher/designated hitter, recently finished a tremendous offensive season as he led the entire NE 10 conference in batting average (.401) and slugging average (.637). His hitting average actually led the entire East region of Division 2 baseball and his slugging average was more than 65 points higher than the next closet player in the NE10.

Playing in 40 games for Assumption, Jaehnig not only led the conference in batting and slugging average, he finished first in the conference in total bases (100), second in the conference in hits (63), extra base hits (24) and doubles (16), seventh in triples (3) and on base percentage (.449), and ninth in homeruns (5) and runs batted in (33). He led the Assumption Greyhounds in almost every offensive category.

On the season, Jaehnig tallied 20 multi-hit games and reached safely in 37 of the 40 games he played. Coach Mike Rocco of Assumption College recently stated that in all his years of playing and coaching baseball, Andrew Jaehnig had the greatest offensive season that he had ever seen.

Jaehnig got his start playing in the Quincy Youth Baseball League, the Quincy Redstockings AAU program, B.C. High, Morrisette Legion and the Braintree White Sox. He recently signed to play summer baseball with the Nashua Silver Knights of the Collegiate Futures League.

Racing To Stop the Stigma: Interfaith Social Services' 5K

Walk, Race Supports Community Members Affected By Mental illness, Addiction

Depression. Addiction. Anxiety.

These illnesses affect one in five adults every year. So why aren't more people taking about these health issues?

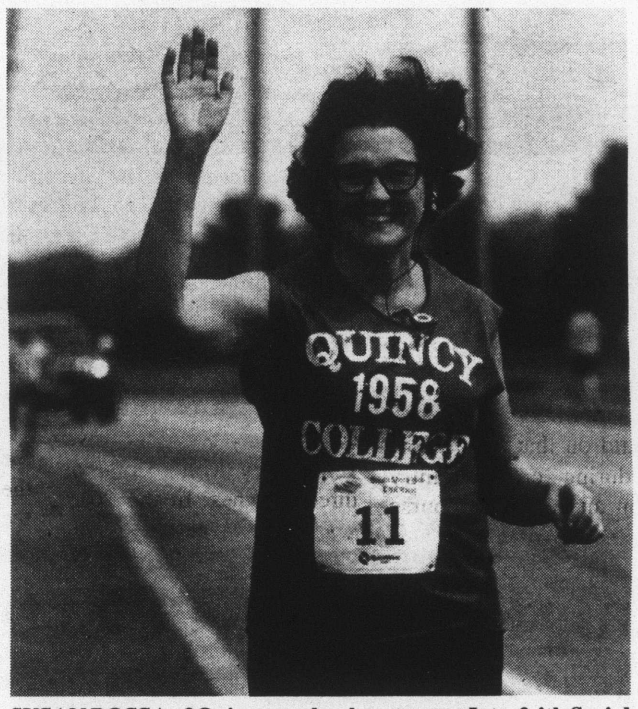
Interfaith Social Services' recently hosted its 43rd Annual South Shore Walk & 5K Race to get people talking about these issues and to raise funding for those in need of treatment. Hundreds of people filled the streets of Quincy and raised a record setting $35,000 for the organization.

The phrase "Stop the Stigma" was printed on almost all available surfaces at the event, from t-shirts to signs. The 5K and family fun festivities afterward all focused on supporting community members affected by mental illness and addiction.

"It is shameful that there are stigmas associated with addiction, depression and other mental health issues," said Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services. "People talk openly about their struggles with ailments like diabetes and cancer. However, many keep mental illness under wraps. This race gives us an opportunity to proclaim that there is no shame in mental illness. We walk, run and rally with family, friends and others to show those who are suffering that they can hold their heads high, their community stands with them."

The 5K race followed a scenic and challenging course through Quincy's Squantum neighborhood. The Boston skyline and Dorchester Bay served as a picturesque backdrop for the course, which started and ended at The Kennedy Center in Quincy.

After the runners and walkers finished the race they enjoyed a Family Fun Celebration at The Kennedy Center. The festivities included a kids' Fun Run, raffles, music, a bounce house provided by Busy Bee Jumpers, air brush tattoos provide by Tribal Sun Entertainment and more. The New England Revolution Battalion (the street team for Revolution Soccer), WROR 105.7 and Dave & Busters provided additional games and prizes. Local restaurants, Unchained Pizza and Balducci's House of Pizza, provided lunch to all participants. Everyone also enjoyed frozen treats from New England Ice Cream. Runners relaxed with a neck and shoulder massage from Body Benefit Massage Therapy.



SUSAN BOSSA of Quincy ran her heart out at Interfaith Social Services 5K on April 29th. She is the Associate Vice President for Student Development at Quincy College. Quincy College was a Gold Sponsor of the South Shore Walk & 5K Race.

The South Shore Walk & 5K Race is supported by many local businesses, including Platinum level sponsors: Arbella Insurance, BMC HealthNet Plan, The New England Regional Council of Carpenters and Gold level sponsors: Makepeace Digital Imaging and Quincy College.

This year Interfaith is celebrating their 70th anniversary.

"For seven decades we have been reaching out to families in need," Doane said. "Our New Directions Counseling Center is our oldest program. The Center is a safety net to make sure that anyone who needs it can receive care regardless of their ability to pay. Interfaith was founded when the South Shore was facing a crisis. Thousands of people were losing their jobs as the shipyards decreased production after World War II. Today our community is facing a different kind of crisis. Addiction has robbed our community of too many people; it has harmed too many families. During our 5K the community stood together and said to our friends and loved ones who are suffering, 'there is nothing wrong with reaching out for help'."

Interfaith welcomes donations to support their cause. For more information, or to donate, visit www.InterfaithSocialServices.org.

MARTHA LEWANDOWSKi of Braintree, George Fahey, Mary Parker and Sandy Johnson – all of Quincy – were happy to lend helping hands as event volunteers at Interfaith Social Services annual 5K on April 29th. George is also one the therapists at Interfaith's New Directions Counseling Center. The Center is the beneficiary of proceeds collected through the 5k. Mary and Sandy both serve on Interfaith's Board of Directors.

NQ Softball Edges Quincy, Heading To State Tourney

By JOE REARDON

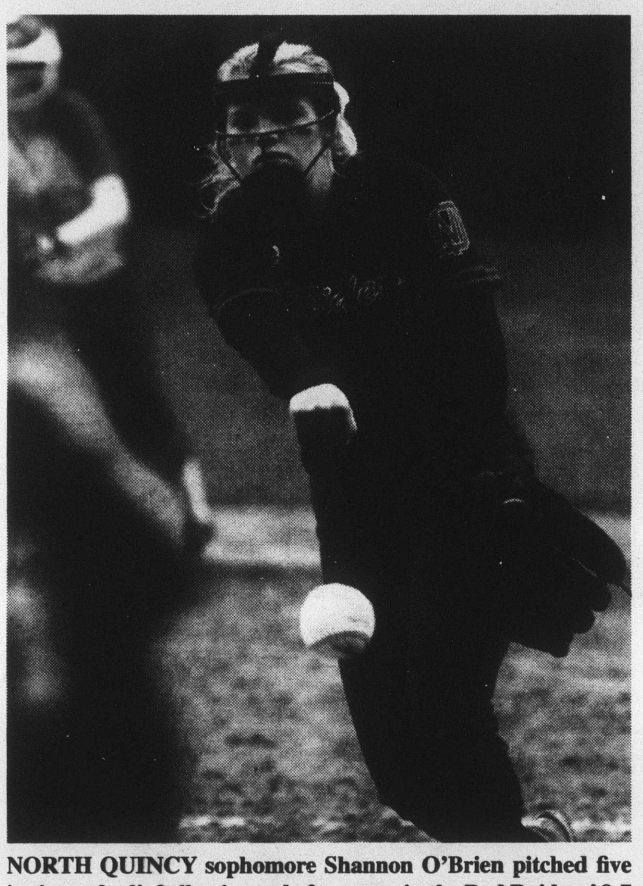
Three years seems oh so long ago for the North Quincy softball team that will be playing its first tournament game in more than 10 years later this week.

The Red Raiders went through their growing pains for sure, struggling through an 0-20 campaign in 2014 before gradually getting better and putting up victories to prove it.

Now, this spring, 12-8 North Quincy is a bona fide playoff team that cannot wait for that first postseason pitch.

The #18-seed Red Raiders will commence tournament play tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. when NQ visits #13-seed Plymouth North.

But before the tournament, the Red Raiders had to take care of business in the rain and chill against crosstown nemesis Quincy. The contest was a beauty and had the look and feel of a postseason contest with some timely hitting on both sides. Sam Striffler and Johanna Douglas clinched the win for the Red Raiders in the sixth inning on the way to an 8-7 win Monday afternoon at Mitchell/McCoy Field.



NORTH QUINCY sophomore Shannon O'Brien pitched five innings of relief allowing only four runs in the Red Raiders' 8-7 victory over the Quincy Presidents Monday. North Quincy has qualified for the state tournament.

"We want to win," said North Quincy head coach Jim Connor. "Ultimately, the best thing for us is that we don't know who we're playing (in the tournament). We used to get down on ourselves, but we believe in our teammates can fight back. We've been playing games where we lost like that. It's nice to be on the winning side. It's a good game and down to the wire. We lost in extra innings to Hanover and lost with a walk-off home run against Whitman-Hanson. We're turning a corner too. It's a good game and had a playoff atmosphere. It was a close game, down to the wire with some clutch hitting at the end."

Striffler slammed a single to left field to score Jessie Caldwell and Ashley Caldwell, while a throwing error off a Douglas grounder brought home Maeve Keene. The Presidents went down in order in the seventh to preserve the victory for the Red Raiders.

The Presidents fell behind early with some costly errors in the first two innings, but Quincy stormed right back in the third. With

American Red Cross Certified Learn-To-Swim Classes

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announces the Quincy Recreation Department will offer American Red Cross certified learn-to-swim classes at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

There will be two sessions offered during the summer vacation period.

In addition to learning important water safety skills, learning to swim opens a liftime of recreational opportunities such as boating and sailing and other aquatic activities.

Classes are offered from beginner to advanced levels supervised by Water Safety Instructors on the Recreation Department staff.

Registration is done by swim level and the Recreation Department will conduct a night of in pool testing in preparation for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swimming ability of their child or for those children who may have improved with additional instruction or swim time during the winter.

The schedule for this testing is Friday, June 9th from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The Boating and Sailing prerequisite swim test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older who are planning on participating in the departments rowing, sailing, canoe and kayak program this summer. Past boating participants do not need to be retested. The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions.

Session One begins Tuesday, June 27th and ends Wednesday, July 19th.

Session Two begins Friday, July 21st and ends Friday, Aug. 11th.

Instructions are for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross: Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training which will begin Thursday, July 6th and continue through July 27th. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a pre- requisite swim test. Please contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course, 617-376-1394.

two runners on Madison Synan smashed a three-run homer to left-center just to the right of the scoreboard to cut North Quincy's lead to 5-3. "She's been locked in all year," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "She's a first pitch hitter and that's why she's an All-Star. The top part of the order has been getting on base all season. It's a rivalry. There's no reason not to battle back."

The Presidents proceeded to tie it up in the fourth inning when a single by Sophia Baldino and a Synan groundout brought in a pair of runs to make it a 5-5 game. Quincy forged ahead in the sixth on a two-run double to left field by Synan for the 7-5 lead. That's the way it stayed until North Quincy's comeback.

The season came to an end for 6-14 Quincy, a team hampered by injuries and was a far better club than its record would indicate.

"There are a few things that if had gone differently would have put us in the tournament," said Sommers.

NORTH QUINCY'S Jessie Caldwell flies out deep to center field in the third inning. Caldwell scored two runs in the Red Raiders' come-from-behind 8-7 victory over the Presidents.

QUINCY'S MADISON SYNAN is congratulated by her teammates in the third inning after hitting a three-run home run out of the park in center field. Synan, a senior, also had a double going 2-4 in the game.

NeighborWorks Offering Homebuyers Workshop

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers in June.

The first part of the course will be taken online; following completion of the online component, participants will attend an in-person class to be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, June 24 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by Daniel Matthews of Direct Finance Corp. Mortgage, the in-person workshops will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 x 34 for more information.

Red Raiders Baseball Earn Postseason Berth

The North Quincy High School baseball team has qualified for the MIAA South Sectional State Tournament for the first time since 2009 after beating Quincy High School Saturday night, 8-1.

With a final record of 10-10, the #15-seeded Red Raiders will host #18 New Bedford tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at Adams Field in a preliminary round matchup.

The Red Raiders had several notable wins to reach their preseason goal of playoff play. This includes winning the First Annual Steven J. Sullivan Tournament over Milton, knocking off Patriot League Champion Whitman-Hanson (15-5), beating Hanover 1-0, and the previously stated victory over city rival Quincy High.

The Red Raiders were able to capture a spot in the MIAA playoffs due to outstanding pitching and defense. Seniors Shawn Kelly (4-3 record, 44 innings pitched, 1.11 ERA, 43 strikeouts) and Matt Eagles (4-2 record, 32.1 innings pitched, 2.38 ERA) were the leaders of the pitching staff, followed by juniors Mark Monahan and Jack Free who provided solid seasons on the hill for North Quincy. Defensively, senior shortstop Chris Mann and junior catcher Tommy Kelly solidified a team that finished with a .944 fielding percentage.

Offensively, senior second baseman Kevin McDonald led the Red Raiders all season. He finished the season with a .381 batting average (8th in the Patriot League). Also, Jack Free and junior third baseman Ryan Cox led the offensive charge.

The North Quincy team is one that has tremendous depth with a senior group that is experienced, skilled, and team first oriented. This includes outfielders Aidan Golden, Brendan Ganno, Anthony Demers, and Hunter Phillips, as well as first baseman Devlin St. Marie.

Sophomore outfielder Andrew Airosus played an integral role as a excellent defensive player and baserunner on an experienced Red Raider team. Junior Max Gustin, sophomores Danny Ferrara, Brian Pham, Brady McGuinness, Joey Sands, and Noah Wines round out the varsity North Quincy roster heading into postseason play.

Three On Emerson Dean's List

Three Quincy students are on the Dean's List for the spring semester at Emerson College in Boston.

They are:

Amanda Flores, a Media Arts Production major; Andy Pham, a Communication Studies major; and Noreen Plabutong, a Writing, Literature and Publishing major.

Interfaith Social Services' Walk, Run Raises $35,000

INTERFAITH SOCIAL SERVICES recently hosted its 43rd Annual South Shore Walk & 5K Race. Hundreds of people filled the streets of Quincy and raised a record setting $35,000 for the organization. Photos Courtesy Interfaith Social Services

ANITA SIWY-KNIGHT of North Quincy, on the left, and Carrie MacLean of Weymouth participated in Interfaith Social Services' 5K on April 29th. Anita was an event volunteer at the 5K, she is also a volunteer in Interfaith's food pantry every Thursday. A recent retiree of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, she started volunteering with Interfaith through Blue Cross' employee volunteer program, and continued on after she retired. Anita and Carrie used to work together at Blue Cross. Carrie organized a team of Blue Cross employees to participate at the 5K on April 29th. She also organizes a group of volunteers to help in Interfaith's food pantry every month.

KATIE McEVOY of Quincy and owner of the Commit 2B Fit Studios is pictured here with Erika Jankowski and Julie White both of Quincy and members of her studio. Katie got Interfaith's 5K participants energized prior to the race with a fun group warm-up. She also serves on the 5K's event planning committee.

DANIELLE, J.D. and James Schrage of Quincy stopped for a picture after completing the trek along Interfaith's scenic 5K route throughout Squantum.

JOHN PIRONE and Wendy Trafton of North Quincy stopped for a photo while congratulating their 2-year old daughter Acadia after she participated in the Kids' Fun Run on April 29th. The Fun Run was one of the festivities at Interfaith Social Services' 5K and Family Fun Event.

TIMOTHY, AVERY, KARLEEN and Lily Fallon (of Belmont) with Linda and Steve Greene (of Quincy) took a break from enjoying the festivities at Interfaith Social Services' 5K and Family Fun Event to pose for a family picture. Karleen is the daughter of Linda and Steve. Karleen also came in first place in the women 39 and under category for the 5K race. Linda and Steve are both longtime volunteers at Interfaith.

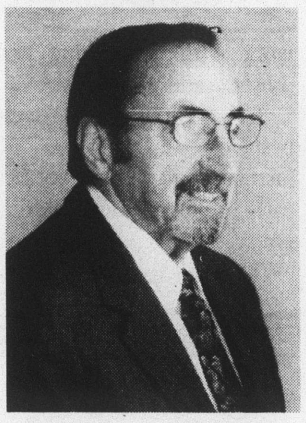
Mr. Coletti later graduated from Burdett College. He lived in Quincy for most of his life and was a longtime summer resident of East Falmouth before retiring there ten years ago.

He was the well-known owner and operator of LeColson Jewelers in Quincy, formerly of Boston, for over forty years.

Mr. Coletti was a proud U.S. Navy veteran of World War II. He served as a seaman 1/c aboard the troop transport, USS Winged Arrow (AP-170), in the Asiatic Pacific Theater. He received the Asiatic Pacific Medal.

He was a member of the VFW, Quincy Lodge of Elks, the Quincy Sons of Italy and the DAV. Mr. Coletti enjoyed gardening, writing and taking adult education courses. He also had a talent for art and sketching and became a gym enthusiast after his retirement. He was a devout Catholic and served as a Eucharistic Minister for many years.

Beloved husband for sixty-four years of Dorothy A. (Papile) Coletti. Devoted father of Karyl (Coletti) Cargill and her husband Philip of Plymouth, David F. Coletti, Quincy Police Dept. and his wife Courtney (Walsh) of Quincy, the late George J. Coletti and his wife Lori (Stewart), and the late Mark A. Coletti. Loving grandfather of Tara and her husband John Hourihan, Daniel, Cara, David, Rocco and Giovanni. Cherished great grandfather of Hunter, Camden, Angelo, and Jordan.



ANGELO J. COLETTI

One of five siblings, he was the dear brother of Josephine Sharp and Diana Picardi both of Braintree and pre-deceased by Beatrice McSharry and Nina Picardi. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

At the request of the family, visiting hours have been omitted.

Interment at the Massachusetts National Cemetery in Bourne will be at a later date.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Italian Home for Children, 1125 Centre St., Jamaica Plain, MA 02130-3495.

Walter S. Brown, Sr., 96

A graveside gathering for Walter S. Brown Sr., 96, of Spring Hill, Fla., and formerly of Quincy and Braintree was held Tuesday in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Mr. Brown died peacefully on May 12.

A veteran of WWII, he served in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1946. He was a longtime employee of the Boston Gas Company, retiring after 42 years of service.

A wonderful and caring husband and father, Mr. Brown was married to his wife, Gertrude E. Brown, for 54 years (deceased 1998). He is survived by his son Walter S. Brown Jr. and his wife Veronica, daughter Kathleen D. O'Connell and her husband William, son Steven J. Brown and his wife Doreen, daughter Susan E. Penton and her husband Ronald, brother-in-law Robert Burr and his wife Dorothy, sister-in-law Ann Laneau, 9 grandchildren, 8 great-grandchildren, 1 great-great granddaughter, as well as many nieces and nephews.

Arrangements by Hamel Funeral Care and Cremation Service of Massachusetts, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Salvation Army at salvationarmyma.org/mysticvalley.

Donna Adams Willoughby

A memorial service for Donna Adams Willoughby will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in First Presbyterian Church, Quincy, with a reception at her Braintree house to follow.

Ms. Willoughby died Jan 11.

Born on June 17, 1937 in Atlanta, she spent her adult life as an educator in the Quincy Public School system, including decades at Broad Meadows Middle School. She encouraged famous dignitaries to visit and 'adopt' Broad Meadows, including sports figures and politicians.

Phyllis L. Ferris, 76

A funeral Mass for Phyllis L. (Pizzi) Ferris, age 76, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in Immaculate Conception Church, Weymouth.

Mrs. Ferris died unexpectedly Sunday at South Shore Hospital, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Quincy on Aug. 10, 1940, to the late Carmen and Lucy (Rinaldi) Pizzi. She was raised and educated in Quincy and had lived in Weymouth for forty-eight years.

Mrs. Ferris was a dedicated wife, mother and homemaker but had also worked as a hairdresser for many years with her sister, Gerri, at the former Contemporary Hair Studio in Weymouth.

Mrs. Ferris loved to cook and spend time with her family. She was especially proud of her cherished grandchildren and actively supported all their activities and accomplishments.

Beloved wife for fifty-three years of Thomas M. Ferris. Devoted mother of Steven M. Ferris and his wife Rachael of Weymouth,

PHYLLIS L. FERRIS

James M. Ferris and his wife Theresa of East Bridgewater and the late Thomas M. Ferris, Jr. Loving grandmother of Jordan, Catherine, Christine, Erin and Emily. Dear sister of Gerri P. Daigle and her late husband Larry of Braintree and the late Robert M. Pizzi. Also survived be several nieces and nephews.

Interment Mount Hope Cemetery, Weymouth.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to AIDS Action Committee, c/o Development Office, 75 Amory St., Boston, MA 02119.

David A. Thomas, 82

A memorial service for David A. Thomas, age 82, a resident of Quincy, will be held at 11 a.m. on June 10 in St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Quincy.

Dr. Thomas died April 14 at his home under hospice care.

Born in Quincy, he was the son of the late William and Edna (Snow) Thomas. Dr. Thomas graduated from North Quincy High School and served in the United States Army. Following his military service, he graduated from Boston University and Michigan State University, earning a Doctorate of Psychology degree. He enjoyed a long career in the field, practicing in Michigan, California and Arizona.

Dr. Thomas is survived by his brother, Richard Thomas. He is also survived by nieces and nephews, Barbara Such and her husband Robert of Brockton; Janet Thomas of Quincy; Richard Thomas of Malden; Jessica Evans and her husband Timothy of Braintree; Robert Thomas and his wife Nia of Easthampton; and David Thomas of Quincy. Other survivors include grandniece and nephews, Allison Such of Brockton; Gavin Thomas of Quincy; and Liam Evans and Timothy Evans of Braintree. Also survived by his former wife and very good friend Connie Thomas of California. He was also the brother of the late Nancy Thomas, William J. Thomas and Robert E. Thomas and the brother-in-law of the late Doris Thomas and Kathleen Thomas.

Dr. Thomas operated a greyhound dog kennel during the 1980s and raised greyhounds of his own. He was a golfer, a hunter, an avid reader and also a fan of all New England and University of Michigan sports teams. Dr. Thomas' greatest joy was a good discussion, and often a debate, with anyone and everyone who happened to enjoy his presence. He will be greatly missed by all.

Arrangements under the direction of the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to any veterans' charity of your choice.

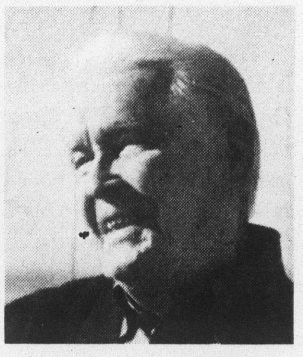
Armand J. Bolduc, 103

Funeral services for Armand J. Bolduc of Quincy will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, June 10, in Sacred Heart church, Quincy.

Mr. Bolduc recently passed away at the age of 103 after a long and very good life.

Born in 1913 in Quebec, Canada, he immigrated to the United States as a young man of 16 determined to shape a life of his own making with energy, independence and joie de vivre. A lifelong craftsman, Mr. Bolduc worked as a carpenter, general contractor and builder of homes, a factory worker, and a building superintendent and always brought care and commitment to whatever he did.

In his own words he said, "I was blessed with two loving women in this life," his first wife Lucille with whom he had four children, and then later in life Ethel, who shared his love for the Florida Keys and retirement. Always devoted to and surrounded by a large and loving family, Mr. Bolduc lived with moderation in all things save for how much he loved and was loved. He was fiercely independent, a person of deep faith, a voracious reader, a teller of stories and a world class Jeopardy player. He will be very much missed but he leaves this world a better and more loving place.



ARMAND J. BOLDUC

Husband of the late Lucille (Quesnel) Bolduc and the late Ethel (Cochran) Bolduc. Loving father of Louise Hudson and her late husband Edward Hudson. Carol Howley and her late husbands Walter Corwin and James Howley, Nancy Vitali and her late husband Oscar Vitali, Mark A. Bolduc and his wife Linda Bolduc, William Cochran and his wife Carol Cochran. John Cochran and his wife Elizabeth Cochran and James Cochran. Brother of the late Marc Bolduc and Noella Ribbans. Also survived by 17 grandchildren. 29 great-grandchildren and one great-great grandchild.

Visiting hours are 4 to 8 p.m. on Friday, June 9. in Keohane Funeral Home. 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to CatholicTV, PO Box 9196, 34 Chestnut St., Watertown, MA 02471 or Easterseals New Hampshire. Attn: Development Department, 555 Auburn St., Manchester, NH 03103.

Author Grace Lin At Parker School June 9

The F.W. Parker School is excited to announce that Grace Lin, the NY Times bestselling author and illustrator of a variety of books, is coming to the Parker School on June 9. At Parker School, Ms. Lin will conduct workshops with each grade in the school. In these interactive presentations, she will show students the process she goes through when she is developing a new story. Then she will read one of her picture books to the students. Also, Ms. Lin will do a Dragon draw along with some grades and perform a readers' theatre with student volunteers. In addition to these activities, she will discuss the myths and experiences that shaped her novel "Where the Mountain Meets the Moon." Students at Parker School have been enthusiastically reading this novel in preparation for her visit. With their teachers' support and guidance, they have also been doing many activities that Ms. Lin suggests on her website (www.gracelin.com). The students and staff are extremely excited to meet Grace Lin and work with her during her presentations.

Grace Lin is a NY Times bestselling author and illustrator of picture books, early readers and middle grade novels. Her novel "Where the Mountain Meets the Moon" was awarded the Newbery Honor in 2010 and Grace's early reader, "Ling and Ting" was honored with the Theodor Geisel Honor in 2011. Most recently, the cover illustration for her novel "When the Sea Turned Silver" (a 2016 National Book Award Finalist) was displayed at the White House, where Grace was recognized as a Champion of Change for Asian American and Pacific Islander Art and Storytelling. Many of Grace's books are about the Asian-American experience because she believes, "Books erase bias, they make the uncommon everyday, and the mundane exotic. A book makes all cultures universal."

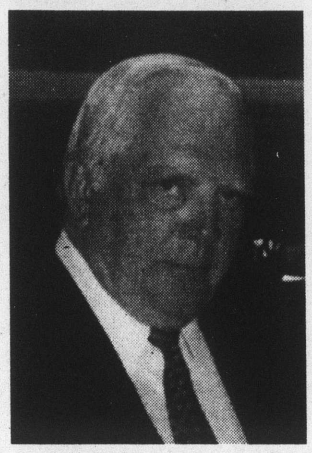
OBITUARIES

William J. Buckley

A funeral Mass for William J. "Bill" Buckley, retired QPD, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Francis Xavier Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Buckley died May 24.

He graduated North Quincy High School in 1954. He proudly served in the United States Navy from 1954 to1962. He joined the Quincy Police Department in 1961, where he spent 38 years and retired in 1999. While being in the Quincy Police, he attained his Bachelor's Degree in human services from New Hampshire College. Mr. Buckley was a member of the Weymouth Elks and Norfolk County Prosecutor's Association. After his retirement, he spent 17 years working part-time at Foreign Auto Parts.



WILLIAM J. BUCKLEY

Mr. Buckley was a big sports fan and enjoyed bowling, playing cards, trips to the casino, and especially being with family and friends. He also enjoyed traveling to Aruba with his late wife Mae. He will be remembered for his gentle, caring, sensitive, strong and patient ways. He will be sadly missed.

Dear husband of 52 years to the late Mary "Mae" Buckley. Loving father to Regina Hennelly and her husband Robert of Weymouth, Marianne Buckley of Marshfield, and Charlene O'Loughlin and her husband Tim of VA. Brother to the late Richard "Dick" Buckley. Beloved Grandpa to Thomas Buckley and his wife Stephanie, Hillary, Lyndsay and Kerri Hennelly, and Matthew and Tighe O'Loughlin. Great-Grandpa to Fiona Mae and Layla Buckley. Brother-in-law to Robert Conlon and his wife Ellie and Carol Walling and her husband Roy. Also survived by many extended family and friends.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Joseph F. Kelble

A Mass of Christian Burial for Joseph F. Kelble of Quincy, formerly of Hanson and Citrus Springs, Fla., will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Friday in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mr. Kelble died peacefully on May 24 with his family by his side.

Beloved husband of Catherine (Fuggio) Kelble of Quincy. Loving father of Michael Kelble and his wife Kathleen of Pembroke, Daniel Kelble and his wife Donna of Milton and Joseph Kelble and Lisa of Plymouth. Brother of James Kelble of Nashua, NH, Muriel McInnes of Medford, Kenneth Kelble of Manchester, NH, Harold Kelble of Northport, FL and the late Rita Schutt and Collette Gagnon. Cherished grandfather of 12 grandchildren and 4 great grandchildren.

Mr. Kelble was raised and educated in Boston. He served in the Air Force and was stationed in Japan during the conclusion of WWII, and was recalled to serve during the Korean Crisis. Mr. Kelble was an accomplished musician who spent many years playing for events and in various church services, he loved to entertain. He also enjoyed gardening and taking walks.

Most of all, Mr. Kelble's family was the center of his life; he loved spending time with his children and all of his grandchildren. He will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known and loved him.

Visiting hours are 3 to 7 p.m. Thursday in Dolan Funeral Home, East Milton.

Interment in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, at a later date.

ABOUT A DOZEN volunteers helped decorate veterans' graves with American flags Saturday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery in observance of Memorial Day. Among those lending a hand were Aoife Harris (left), age 2, and her mom, Maryellen Harris, both of Merrymount. The city's Veterans Services Department coordinates the effort to place American flags at the graves of the nearly 8,000 veterans buried in city cemeteries, including 4,500 in Mount Wollaston. Quincy's Cemetery Department maintains the final resting areas.

most famous businessmen: Louis Grossman, Howard Johnson, William Rosenberg and Peter O'Connell.

"Tim Cahill is a great leader who brings a wealth of experience in multiple executive posts to the position of president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce," said Ed Fleming, chairman of the Board and partner with Fleming & Fleming, P.C. "He started his own Quincy Square business, so he understands the challenges faced by small businesses," continued Fleming, "and served for twenty-three years as an elected official who appreciates how important a thriving business community is to the health and well-being of local communities. Speaking on behalf of the Chamber Board, we are all excited about the value Tim brings to the Chamber's membership."

"I am honored to be offered the position of president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce," said Cahill. "Quincy is where I was raised, where my wife Tina and I raised our family, and where I live today. It is not only a great city, but an important one. Our city has not only turned the corner economically, but is thriving as a hub of business, development and entrepreneurial energy. I look forward to playing a role in making sure that Quincy continues on this path."

Cahill will begin work with the Chamber on June 5 and take over as president officially July 1.

Zuckerberg, Chan Visit Quincy High

By SCOTT JACKSON

Dr. Priscilla Chan, the valedictorian of Quincy High School's Class of 2003, recently returned to her alma mater to meet and greet with students, joined by her husband, Facebook founder and CEO Mark Zuckerberg.

The couple visited the school May 23 before heading to Harvard University, where they toured the dorm room in which Zuckerberg started the social network while still a student. Zuckerberg was the speaker at Harvard's commencement ceremonies on May 25.

Chan and Zuckerberg met with 10 seniors at Quincy High, along with two of her former teachers – Donald Long and Peter Swanson, who was also her tennis coach – QHS Principal Larry Taglieri said. The couple then met with six members of the robotics team and their faculty advisor, Mike Gendron.

"We're always welcoming alumni back to our school and having Priscilla here was very special," Taglieri said. "Her bringing her husband just added to it."

The principal said Zuckerberg and Chan met with the students, discussing their aspirations and plans for the future among other topics.

"They are such down to earth people," Taglieri said. "They were so interested in what our kids were doing."

Chan, who grew up in Quincy, was a member of both the robotics team and tennis team at Quincy High. She then attended Harvard, where she met Zuckerberg, graduating with a BA in biology. Chan later graduated from the University of California, San Francisco's medical school, and is a pediatrician.

Chan and Zuckerberg married in May 2012, one day after Facebook made its debut on the stock market. The couple has one daughter, Maxima Chan Zuckerberg, who was born in December 2015, and Zuckerberg in March announced they are expecting their second daughter.

Chan and Zuckerberg's shares in Facebook are valued at $45 billion, and they have pledged to donate 99 percent of those shares to charity.

Their visit to Quincy High was done privately. In a Facebook post, Zuckerberg said it was special to see Chan give advice to graduating seniors.

"Priscilla is a legend here," he wrote. "Back in high school, she was captain of her tennis and robotics teams and took every science class the school offered. When she ran out of classes, she bought a textbook and created a cancer biology class herself. Her old teachers talk about how she looked out for them as much as they looked out for her. Even back then, they knew she was going to take care of people.

"It was a special moment seeing Priscilla give the graduating students advice about life after Quincy. Priscilla was the first in her family to go to college, and even after being a rock star in high school it still wasn't an easy transition. Most of the seniors we met were worried about college too. Priscilla talked about how important it is to ask for help, and how even if college feels uncomfortable at first, you're not alone and it gets easier.

"Priscilla is an amazing person. On days like today, it's great to meet lots of other people who know that too."

Chan, on her Facebook page, thanked the school for its commitment to students.

"Fifteen years ago, I was in their very seats – nurtured in their community, challenged by classes and simultaneously nervous and excited about the future," she wrote. "My time in science lab and the tennis and robotics teams was the foundation for my success in college. It's wonderful to see that the same teachers and programs are building passion for learning and science in students today.

"Thank you, Quincy High School, for nurturing generations of students and young scientists."

11 Quincy Students On Xaverian Brothers Honor Roll

Eleven students from Quincy are on the honor roll for the third marking period at Xaverian Brothers High School in Westwood.

They are:

Kevin Chau, First Honors, Grade 10; John Mariano, First Honors, Grade 10; Dylan Raimondi, First Honors, Grade 10; Patrick Senier, First Honors, Grade 10; Steven Shalvey, First Honors, 10 Grade; Ronan O'Farrell, First Honors, Grade 12; Aidan Fleming, Second Honors, Grade 7; Kevin Hegarty, Second Honors, Grade 10; Brian Cantor, Second Honors, Grade 11; Peter Gagne, Second Honors, Grade 12; and Jared Grier, Second Honors, Grade 12.

Jamie Figueiredo On President's List

Jamie Figueiredo, of Quincy, majoring in communication, has made the President's List for the spring semester at Coastal Carolina University in Conway, S.C.

At Parker School, Ms. Lin will conduct workshops with each grade in the school. In these interactive presentations, she will show students the process she goes through when she is developing a new story. Then she will read one of her picture books to the students. Also, Ms. Lin will do a Dragon draw along with some grades and perform a readers' theatre with student volunteers. In addition to these activities, she will discuss the myths and experiences that shaped her novel "Where the Mountain Meets the Moon." Students at Parker School have been enthusiastically reading this novel in preparation for her visit. With their teachers' support and guidance, they have also been doing many activities that Ms. Lin suggests on her website (www.gracelin.com). The students and staff are extremely excited to meet Grace Lin and work with her during her presentations.

Grace Lin is a NY Times bestselling author and illustrator of picture books, early readers and middle grade novels. Her novel "Where the Mountain Meets the Moon" was awarded the Newbery Honor in 2010 and Grace's early reader, "Ling and Ting" was honored with the Theodor Geisel Honor in 2011. Most recently, the cover illustration for her novel "When the Sea Turned Silver" (a 2016 National Book Award Finalist) was displayed at the White House, where Grace was recognized as a Champion of Change for Asian American and Pacific Islander Art and Storytelling. Many of Grace's books are about the Asian-American experience because she believes, "Books erase bias, they make the uncommon everyday, and the mundane exotic. A book makes all cultures universal."

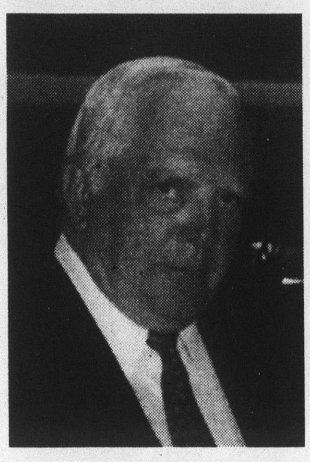
William J. Buckley

A funeral Mass for William J. "Bill" Buckley, retired QPD, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Francis Xavier Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Buckley died May 24.

He graduated North Quincy High School in 1954. He proudly served in the United States Navy from 1954 to1962. He joined the Quincy Police Department in 1961, where he spent 38 years and retired in 1999. While being in the Quincy Police, he attained his Bachelor's Degree in human services from New Hampshire College. Mr. Buckley was a member of the Weymouth Elks and Norfolk County Prosecutor's Association. After his retirement, he spent 17 years working part-time at Foreign Auto Parts.



WILLIAM J. BUCKLEY

Mr. Buckley was a big sports fan and enjoyed bowling, playing cards, trips to the casino, and especially being with family and friends. He also enjoyed traveling to Aruba with his late wife Mae. He will be remembered for his gentle, caring, sensitive, strong and patient ways. He will be sadly missed.

Dear husband of 52 years to the late Mary "Mae" Buckley. Loving father to Regina Hennelly and her husband Robert of Weymouth, Marianne Buckley of Marshfield, and Charlene O'Loughlin and her husband Tim of VA. Brother to the late Richard "Dick" Buckley. Beloved Grandpa to Thomas Buckley and his wife Stephanie, Hillary, Lyndsay and Kerri Hennelly, and Matthew and Tighe O'Loughlin. Great-Grandpa to Fiona Mae and Layla Buckley. Brother-in-law to Robert Conlon and his wife Ellie and Carol Walling and her husband Roy. Also survived by many extended family and friends.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Joseph F. Kelble

A Mass of Christian Burial for Joseph F. Kelble of Quincy, formerly of Hanson and Citrus Springs, Fla., will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Friday in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mr. Kelble died peacefully on May 24 with his family by his side.

Beloved husband of Catherine (Fuggio) Kelble of Quincy. Loving father of Michael Kelble and his wife Kathleen of Pembroke, Daniel Kelble and his wife Donna of Milton and Joseph Kelble and Lisa of Plymouth. Brother of James Kelble of Nashua, NH, Muriel McInnes of Medford, Kenneth Kelble of Manchester, NH, Harold Kelble of Northport, FL and the late Rita Schutt and Collette Gagnon. Cherished grandfather of 12 grandchildren and 4 great grandchildren.

Mr. Kelble was raised and educated in Boston. He served in the Air Force and was stationed in Japan during the conclusion of WWII, and was recalled to serve during the Korean Crisis. Mr. Kelble was an accomplished musician who spent many years playing for events and in various church services, he loved to entertain. He also enjoyed gardening and taking walks.

Most of all, Mr. Kelble's family was the center of his life; he loved spending time with his children and all of his grandchildren. He will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known and loved him.

Visiting hours are 3 to 7 p.m. Thursday in Dolan Funeral Home, East Milton.

Interment in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, at a later date.

ABOUT A DOZEN volunteers helped decorate veterans' graves with American flags Saturday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery in observance of Memorial Day. Among those lending a hand were Aoife Harris (left), age 2, and her mom, Maryellen Harris, both of Merrymount. The city's Veterans Services Department coordinates the effort to place American flags at the graves of the nearly 8,000 veterans buried in city cemeteries, including 4,500 in Mount Wollaston. Quincy's Cemetery Department maintains the final resting areas.

most famous businessmen: Louis Grossman, Howard Johnson, William Rosenberg and Peter O'Connell.

"Tim Cahill is a great leader who brings a wealth of experience in multiple executive posts to the position of president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce," said Ed Fleming, chairman of the Board and partner with Fleming & Fleming, P.C. "He started his own Quincy Square business, so he understands the challenges faced by small businesses," continued Fleming, "and served for twenty-three years as an elected official who appreciates how important a thriving business community is to the health and well-being of local communities. Speaking on behalf of the Chamber Board, we are all excited about the value Tim brings to the Chamber's membership."

"I am honored to be offered the position of president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce," said Cahill. "Quincy is where I was raised, where my wife Tina and I raised our family, and where I live today. It is not only a great city, but an important one. Our city has not only turned the corner economically, but is thriving as a hub of business, development and entrepreneurial energy. I look forward to playing a role in making sure that Quincy continues on this path."

Cahill will begin work with the Chamber on June 5 and take over as president officially July 1.

Zuckerberg, Chan Visit Quincy High

By SCOTT JACKSON

Dr. Priscilla Chan, the valedictorian of Quincy High School's Class of 2003, recently returned to her alma mater to meet and greet with students, joined by her husband, Facebook founder and CEO Mark Zuckerberg.

The couple visited the school May 23 before heading to Harvard University, where they toured the dorm room in which Zuckerberg started the social network while still a student. Zuckerberg was the speaker at Harvard's commencement ceremonies on May 25.

Chan and Zuckerberg met with 10 seniors at Quincy High, along with two of her former teachers – Donald Long and Peter Swanson, who was also her tennis coach – QHS Principal Larry Taglieri said. The couple then met with six members of the robotics team and their faculty advisor, Mike Gendron.

"We're always welcoming alumni back to our school and having Priscilla here was very special," Taglieri said. "Her bringing her husband just added to it."

The principal said Zuckerberg and Chan met with the students, discussing their aspirations and plans for the future among other topics.

"They are such down to earth people," Taglieri said. "They were so interested in what our kids were doing."

Chan, who grew up in Quincy, was a member of both the robotics team and tennis team at Quincy High. She then attended Harvard, where she met Zuckerberg, graduating with a BA in biology. Chan later graduated from the University of California, San Francisco's medical school, and is a pediatrician.

Chan and Zuckerberg married in May 2012, one day after Facebook made its debut on the stock market. The couple has one daughter, Maxima Chan Zuckerberg, who was born in December 2015, and Zuckerberg in March announced they are expecting their second daughter.

Chan and Zuckerberg's shares in Facebook are valued at $45 billion, and they have pledged to donate 99 percent of those shares to charity.

Their visit to Quincy High was done privately. In a Facebook post, Zuckerberg said it was special to see Chan give advice to graduating seniors.

"Priscilla is a legend here," he wrote. "Back in high school, she was captain of her tennis and robotics teams and took every science class the school offered. When she ran out of classes, she bought a textbook and created a cancer biology class herself. Her old teachers talk about how she looked out for them as much as they looked out for her. Even back then, they knew she was going to take care of people.

"It was a special moment seeing Priscilla give the graduating students advice about life after Quincy. Priscilla was the first in her family to go to college, and even after being a rock star in high school it still wasn't an easy transition. Most of the seniors we met were worried about college too. Priscilla talked about how important it is to ask for help, and how even if college feels uncomfortable at first, you're not alone and it gets easier.

"Priscilla is an amazing person. On days like today, it's great to meet lots of other people who know that too."

Chan, on her Facebook page, thanked the school for its commitment to students.

"Fifteen years ago, I was in their very seats – nurtured in their community, challenged by classes and simultaneously nervous and excited about the future," she wrote. "My time in science lab and the tennis and robotics teams was the foundation for my success in college. It's wonderful to see that the same teachers and programs are building passion for learning and science in students today.

"Thank you, Quincy High School, for nurturing generations of students and young scientists."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A recent spate of confusion regarding decision-making begins to clear up. But caution is still advised. Continue to check details. An old friend has important news.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're anxious to see your ideas move from concept to development. But trying to force the issue right now could backfire. Wait for movement to resume shortly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your thoughts focused on the positive as you deal with an unexpected turn of events in a personal or professional relationship. This could be the start of a welcome change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Health matters take on added importance at this time. Deal with them before they interfere with your summer plans. A relationship that cooled off could soon warm up again.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While a few details involving upcoming decisions still need your attention, you fun-loving Felines can begin to spend more time enjoying your lively social life again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That long-sought-after career change could require you to move to another city. Weigh your decision carefully before either accepting or rejecting the offer out of hand.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace situation can be awkward for Librans who prefer to keep their problems private. But you might have to "tell-all" if you hope to see it resolved in your favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your financial situation starts to improve this week, you still need to be cautious about money matters. Avoid major obligations, for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your overall aspects continue to brighten, allowing you to tackle long-deferred challenges. A change in travel plans could work to your benefit.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things seem to be slowing down for the usually restless Sea Goat. But wouldn't a bit of respite be just what you need right now? Activity picks up by the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Personal relationships take a positive turn for both married and single Aquarians. Professional commitments, however, could be complicated by newly emerging events.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A decision you thought was final might be reopened as new facts are discovered. This could lead to a short-term problem, but ultimately might prove beneficial.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your keen interest in pursuing global events could lead you into a career as a politician or journalist.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Why did Tom Cruise do a "Mummy" movie? Brendan Fraser's "The Mummy" (1999) cost $80 million to make and grossed $416 million. His 2001 sequel, "The Mummy Returns," cost $98 million and grossed $433 million. But "The Scorpion King," with Dwayne Johnson instead of Fraser, cost just $60 million but only grossed $165 million. His sequel went straight to video, as did "Scorpion King 3," with Billy Zane and Ron Perlman, and "Scorpion King 4," with Lou Ferrigno.

Universal wanted to revive the franchise, and Cruise, currently filming "Mission Impossible 6" for a July 2018 release, is getting too old for hardcore action films and needed a new franchise to accommodate his advancing age (he'll be 55 on July 3). "The Mummy" has always been played by men (Boris Karloff was the first in 1932), but this time "The Mummy," opening June 9 in IMAX and 3D, is a woman. Sofia Boutella plays opposite Cruise, as an ancient princess awakened from her crypt beneath the dessert.

Opening the same day as "The Mummy" is "The Hero," with Sam Elliott and Katherine Ross (Elliott is a washed-up Western actor who changes his priorities after being diagnosed with cancer); "It Comes at Night" (a horror story about a man and his family under siege), with Joel Egerton and Elvis Presley's granddaughter, Riley Keough; and "47 Meters Down" (about two sisters trapped in a shark cage), with Mandy Moore and Claire Holt.

Meanwhile, Cruise's ex, Nicole Kidman, has joined "Aquaman," with Jason Momoa in the title role, along with Amber Heard (former Mrs. Johnny Depp), Willem Dafoe, Dolph Lungren and Patrick Wilson, due December 2018.

When NBC committed to "The World of Dance," with Jennifer Lopez and Derek Hough, they withdrew from bidding for "American Idol," and ABC jumped on it. Coincidentally, "Idol" host Ryan Seacrest has been named permanent co-host, with Kelly Ripa, of the daily morning show now named "Live With Kelly and Ryan." Call him "Flyin' Ryan," as he's bound to rack up frequent-flyer mileage doing "Kelly and Ryan" Monday through Thursday in New York, "Idol" tryouts at Disney World in Florida and "Idol" shows in Hollywood. Oh yes, and he's still doing his radio show.

Also spreading his wings is Andy Cohan, whose show "Watch What Happens" will be syndicated by Fox, and he'll also host the Fox reboot of "The Love Connection."

"Harry Potter and the Cursed Child," a live theatrical experience, has been selling out in London, despite being a full play in two parts. Ticket holders see both shows either in one day or on two consecutive nights. The show hits Broadway in April 2018. No word yet if it will be in two parts, as in London, or one complete show. Methinks you'd have to be pretty "Pottered" to sit through two stage shows and pay twice the ticket prices!

Q: I started going to school in Pittsburgh in 1953, and one of my prized possessions was a Hopalong Cassidy lunchbox with thermos. Hoppy was my hero and I still have the lunchbox. I have been offered $200 for it, but think it might be worth more. I have no plans to sell regardless of the offer. -- Roger, Atlanta

A: Hopalong Cassidy was the first movie/radio character to be featured on a metal lunchbox. Your lunchbox was probably issued in 1950 by Aladdin Industries of Nashville, Tennessee. Although it is valued in the $500 to $700 range, one sold at auction for $1,200. The artwork on both the lunchbox and thermos is the work of designer Robert Burton. William Boyd, aka Hopalong Cassidy, remains an American icon.

Q: I have a very old coin, a 2-cent piece dated 1864. I understand that it might be quite valuable depending on whether it has a small motto or a large motto. What does this mean? -- Dorothy, Oklahoma

A: I consulted my U.S. Coin Digest: The Complete Guide to Current Market Values, edited by David C. Harper (Krause Publications, $18.99), and discovered there was a modification of this coin during the year of its issue. The motto "In God We Trust" was changed, resulting in a small motto and a larger motto. The coin with the small motto appears to be much more valuable. I recommend you contact a reputable coin dealer, since value will depend on various factors, including condition and demand.

Q: I have inherited a Majolica humidor with a bird and fan design. It is about 5 1/2 inches tall and turquoise in color. Is it rare? -- Roberta, Tampa, Florida

A: During the Victorian era, pipe smokers kept their tobacco in decorative jars or humidors. Some of the more interesting ones are examples of Majolica, colorful and decorated earthenware that has been around since the ninth century. Herbert Minton, an English potter, crafted a new way to make the pottery and helped revive interest in Majolica during the 1850s. Your humidor is worth about $150 and is referenced in "Majolica: Identification and Price Guide" by Mark F. Moran and published by Krause Books.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, beloved creator of Sherlock Holmes, who made the following sage observation: "I should dearly love that the world should be ever so little better for my presence. Even on this small stage we have our two sides, and something might be done by throwing all one's weight on the scale of breadth, tolerance, charity, temperance, peace and kindliness to man and beast. We can't all strike very big blows, and even the little ones count for something."

* In France, writing a bad check is not just bad form -- it's illegal. Violators of the "cheque sans provision" law are subject to criminal fines and can be banned from writing checks for up to five years.

* You might be shocked if you came across the term "lust-house" in, say, a newspaper. You shouldn't be, though -- it doesn't mean what you think it means. The term comes to us (unsurprisingly) from German, where the word might refer to either a country house or a tavern with a beer garden.

* There was a time when the game of checkers was commonly -- and condescendingly -- called "chess for ladies."

* Avian veterinarians agree: One of the main health problems faced by pet parrots is obesity. Evidently, Polly wants more than just a cracker.

Thought for the Day: "Wear your learning, like your watch, in a private pocket, and do not pull it out and strike it merely to show you have one. If you are asked what o'clock it is, tell it, but do not proclaim it hourly and unasked, like the watchman." -- Lord Chesterfield

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* Picnic cooler 101: Frozen juice cartons make awesome slushies once they start thawing. You'll also want to pack your cooler with water and lots of healthy snacks like cheese sticks, apples, sliced oranges and grapes. Remember that your kids will likely make friends at the beach or park, so bring extra.

* M.B. in Texas writes: "I have a fairly small bathroom, and storage was a problem. Here's how I solved it: I bought a large over-the-door shoe hanger. Mine has 24 pouches to hold shampoo, body wash, combs, brushes, hairspray, hair clips, etc. I cleared off my sink and countertop! When the bathroom door is closed, all my essentials are at my fingertips."

* Here's how to give your cat a pill when all other efforts fail: "Place pill in a plastic baggie and crush with a hammer. I lace it into a hairball cat salve, spread thin and thoroughly onto cat's paws, and they'll always lick them clean." -- K.N in Illinois (A note from JoAnn: Make sure that it's OK to crush the pill before using this dandy tip.)

* If you suffer from chapped, cracking dry hands, try this tip: At bedtime, apply a generous coating of petroleum jelly. If you have spots, apply only to spots and cover with bandages. If it's all over, apply to your whole hand and slip on either a pair of cotton gloves or a pair of cotton socks if you don't have gloves. Leave on overnight, or as long as you can stand it! Do this for at least a week. It should make a big difference.

* S.H. in Minnesota advises: "Put dryer sheets in waste baskets to smell good under the bag." (I use a sprinkle of carpet deodorizer to do this very same thing. The ones made of baking soda both soak up bad smells and put off a lovely scent of their own. -- JoAnn) to defend the country they loved.

"When the mayor asked me to speak, I asked the question that I often asked with respect to my military service and it was 'why me?' said Kiley. "And the answer was an answer I also provided myself over the course of time and it was 'why not me?'"

A former Massachusetts Assistant Attorney General and First Assistant Attorney General, Kiley told the spectators and special guests that he stood for a "different group, but not a different group for those that you honor.'

"If we are going to remember, we have to remember our young people as we were," said Kiley. "So I stand before you as I was in 1968 - Specialist 4 Thomas R. Kiley, U.S. 51732161. The U.S. meant that I was drafted. And like many of the young men of my generation who served in Vietnam, we didn't go there gung ho as young marines. We didn't go there full of fire and brimstone. We went there out of a sense of duty. Out of a sense of obligation. The answer as to why me then was why not me. What made me any different than anybody else who has answered the call to duty?"

Kiley reflected on the American flags on the Boston Common and the meaning behind each one.

"There are 37,251 flags on Boston Common as we speak today," he said. "Remembering the 37,251 men and women who have answered the call of duty, who have said either 'gung ho let me go' or have simply answered the call of duty. Every single one of them answered the call and should be honored. More than honored, they should be remembered. To the many young people who are here, some of whom will answer the call of duty in the future, when the call of duty comes remember who you are today. To those of us who are older and celebrating the past, remember the young people as they were."

Kiley pointed out the sad reality that many of those who died defending the U.S. never lived long enough to fulfill the promise their lives held. "But the reality is that I'm here," he said. "And the reality is that my father and his brothers and his grandfather, who was sunk in World War I, all survived. And so our generations and our contributions can roll forward. Most of the 37,251 Massachusetts people who died, generations died with them."

JONATHAN LIANG, a student at North Quincy High School and member of the Junior Air Force ROTC, reads the Memorial Day proclamation by Governor Charles Baker at Monday's Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Mayor Thomas Koch told those gathered that Quincy was just one city across the country celebrating those who have fallen to preserve the right of flying the American flag.

"We, like every city, town and hamlet across the country today pause," said Koch. "Pause rightfully so to think about our loved ones, those who paved the way, those who went before us and most importantly those who paid the ultimate sacrifice. In a couple of weeks we'll be celebrating Flag Day just down the street. If not for the veteran, 'Old Glory' would not be flying free all across this nation. So remember those who have gone before us and continue to remember them in our prayers. May God continue to bless this great country and God bless all of you."

City Council President Kirsten Hughes, who later in the ceremony sang Amazing Grace, urged the crowd to "thank a veteran" for his or her service. "Remember, we are here because of them and it is an honor to be here," she said.

Twelve-year-old Abigail Coughlin, a sixth-grader at the Atlantic Middle School, sang a moving rendition of the National Anthem in her strong, falsetto voice and Jonathan Liang, a member of the Junior Air Force ROTC at North Quincy High, read the Memorial Day proclamation by Governor Charles Baker.

"We name Memorial Day, the last Monday in May, where people remember and honor the memory of all the men and women who fought and died in all American wars and conflicts," Liang read. "Thousands of Massachusetts citizens have fought in wars and conflicts to defend our safety and way of life. Their legacy of patriotism and dedication to country is an inspiration to all Americans. It is appropriate for all Massachusetts citizens to remember the bravery of all those who have given their lives so that their sacrifices serve as a reminder of the cost of our freedom."

Prior to the service, Christine Caissie of Braintree and her six-year-old son Chase, looked at the final resting place of Quincy's veterans. Chase, who was wearing army fatigues, and his mother spent much of Thursday putting out over 37,000 American flags on the Boston Common for the city's departed veterans.

"It's a way you can thank people who fought for us," said Chase.

ROBERT LaFLEUR, past commander, Morrisette American Legion and the Quincy Veterans Council, sounds taps after two memorial wreaths were placed at the granite World War II Memorial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery during Monday's Memorial Day observance. The yellow star-shaped wreath and round red, white and blue wreath in the center were placed at the memorial by Gold Star Mothers. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

QUINCY VETERANS SERVICES Grave Registration Officer George Bouchard (left) and Veterans Services Director George Nicholson, read the names of deceased local veterans who have passed away since last Memorial Day.

AMONG THE VOLUNTEERS who helped decorate veterans' graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery last Saturday in advance of the city's Memorial Day observance on Monday were Marine Corps veterans Wayne Scott (left) and Dennis Moynihan. Scott is the chaplain of the Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League, Quincy. There are some 8,000 veterans buried in Quincy's cemeteries, including 4,500 in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, some dating back to the Civil War.

Schools To Offer Substance-Use Curriculum

City Collaborating With A Top Boston Hospital To Help Educate Youth About Addiction Disease

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy is collaborating with a top Boston hospital to develop lessons on addiction that will be taught in the city's school system as early as next year and is also working to support overdose victims and their families as part of its response to the opioid epidemic communities across Massachusetts are facing.

Laura Martin, the former Norfolk County prosecutor who is now Mayor Thomas Koch's substance-use prevention coordinator, highlighted those and other efforts during Monday night's City Council meeting.

Martin said Blue Cross Blue Shield approached her shortly after being appointed to her position last fall to help develop the new curriculum in concert with Boston Children's Hospital's Center for Adolescent Substance Abuse Research (CESAR). CESAR is helping the Quincy Public Schools develop a new curriculum focused on the disease of addiction, Martin said.

Mahoney Running For Councillor At-Large Seat

Three-term School Committeewoman and former mayoral candidate Anne Mahoney announced Tuesday that she will run for councillor at-large in this fall's city election.

Mahoney becomes the sixth declared candidate for three at-large seats. The others are incumbents Noel DiBona and Lina Liang, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest and political newcomers Robert Rowe of Howe Street and Domenic Papile of Ridgeway Drive.

Incumbent Joseph Finn announced earlier this spring that he will not run for re-election this fall.

If all six return nomination papers with at least 50 signatures from local registered voters, their names will appear on the Nov. 7th ballot.

A minimum of seven candidates are required for a preliminary election. There has been some speculation that former Mayor William Phelan will also pull nomination papers for councillor at-large. A preliminary election, if required, would be held Sept. 12.

In her announcement Tuesday, Mahoney said she would bring proven leadership, independence and a voter's voice to the City Council if elected this fall.

Council OKs $299M Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night approved Quincy's $229.42 million general fund budget for fiscal year 2018, which starts July 1, in a 9-0 vote.

The council's finance committee had reviewed Mayor Thomas Koch's initial proposed budget of $299,431,036 during three hearings in May. The committee made four cuts to the budget during those hearings. Three cuts made were to personnel line items in the Department of Public Works budget totaling $11,545 and $750 was cut from an item for a uniform allowance in the Quincy Fire Department's budget.

The total general fund budget approved following those cuts is $299,418,741. The budget for the current fiscal year, FY17, was $287,870,417.

The budget includes a $2.59 million increase for the Quincy Fire Department, allowing the department to bring on the 26 new firefighters it hired earlier this year; the department will now be able to fully staff all its apparatus, including Rescue 1, full time.

The Quincy Police Department will receive an increase of $1 million, including funding for a fifth captain's position; the department had six captains prior to budget cuts made in the midst of the 2008 recession. The new captain will oversee special operations, including motorcycle officers, the marine unit, the K-9 unit, the anti-crime unit, the dive team, hostage negotiators and SWAT team.

The Quincy Public Schools budget will increase by $2.9 million. School officials plan to use those funds to hire six new teachers, two middle school library/media specialists, an elementary nurse, an English language learner aide and an ELL translator.

The budget includes four

High School Graduations Monday, Tuesday

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 660 twelfth graders at the city's two high schools will graduate during commencement ceremonies set for next week.

The commencement ceremony for the 300 seniors at North Quincy High School is set for Monday, June 12, at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy High's 360 seniors will graduate the following day – Tuesday, June 13 – at the stadium. Both ceremonies will start at 6 p.m.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony would be moved indoors to the school's gymnasium. This is a change from past years when the ceremony would be postponed two days. The School Committee approved the change last year, effective this year, because of concerns from parents and family members who might not be able to adjust their schedules if the graduation ceremony is postponed two days.

The list of graduates and scholarship recipients from the two high schools will appear in the June 15 edition of The Quincy Sun.

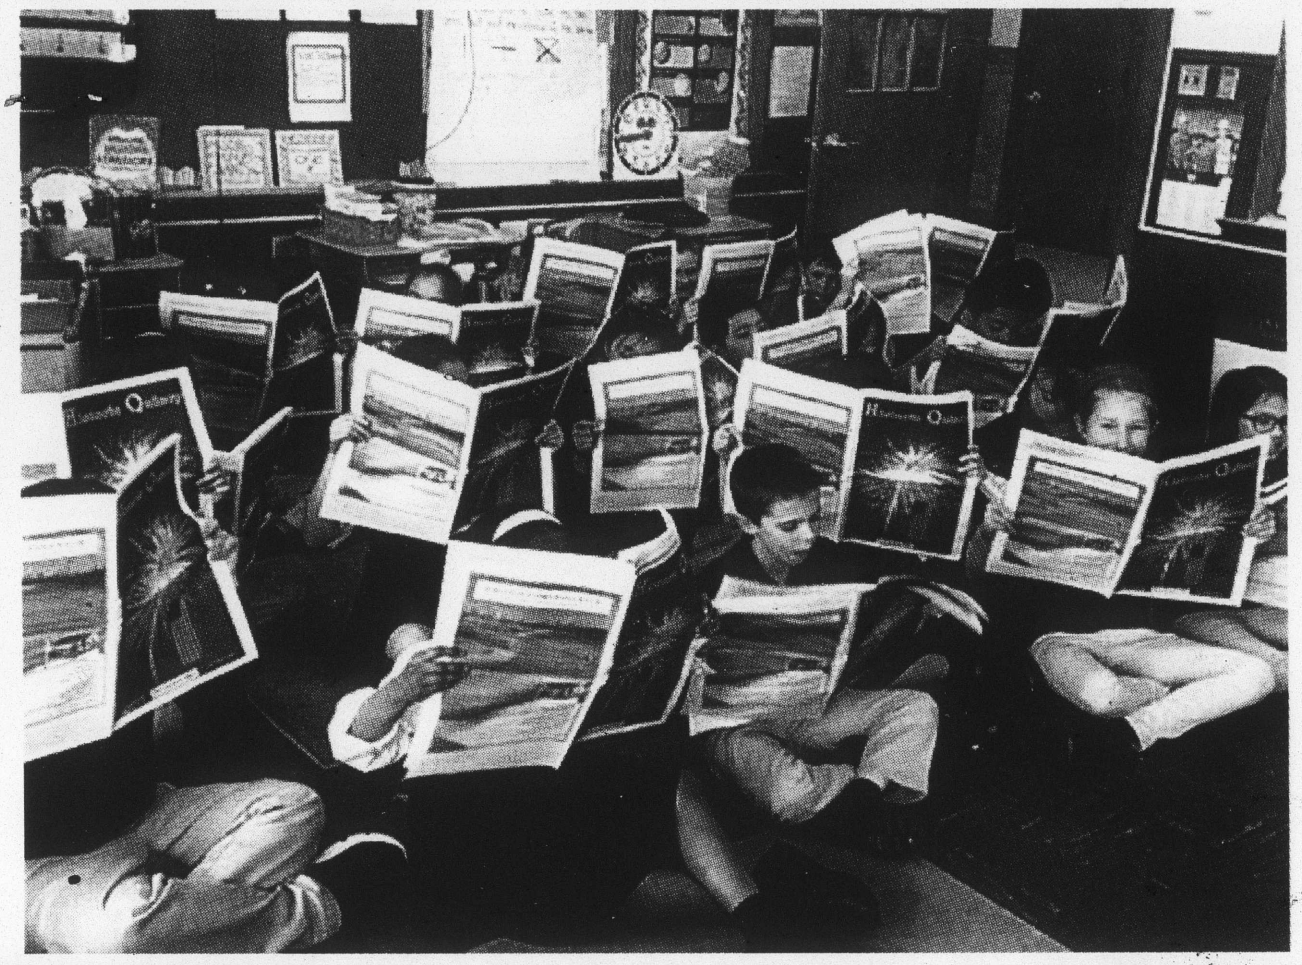
Richard Hui of Quincy recently graduated from Becker College in Worcester.

Hui earned a Bachelor of Arts in interactive media design cum laude.



QCA Students Learning Local History

GRADE 3 STUDENTS at Quincy Catholic Academy are studying about the history of Quincy and Massachusetts. Here they are shown reading "Historic Quincy," a supplement of The Quincy Sun newspaper. Copies of the supplement, inserted in the May 25th edition of The Sun, are available at The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy City Hall and United First Parish Church. The students have been learning about the geography, resources and industries of the Bay State. As a culminating unit, the students are focusing on the rich history of the "City of Presidents" from the Revolutionary Period to the present day. Their focus includes learning about people of the past who have influenced Quincy, Massachusetts and the United States. The children are also looking at maps and discussing some of the valuable resources the city has from the ocean/beaches to the parks and recreation opportunities. "Our goal for the unit is for the students to appreciate the diversity of Quincy and understand that Quincy is a unique city full of historical places and people," said Teacher Karen Keohane.

Flag Day Parade, Celebration Saturday

Recreation Director Barry Welch Recipient Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award

Long-time Recreation Director Barry J. Welch will be honored with the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award at Saturday's 66th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

Welch has been director of Recreation since 1982 and has worked for the department since 1963. Under his leadership, the Quincy Recreation Department has grown into one of the most expansive programs of its kind anywhere in Massachusetts, with tens of thousands of the City's young people participating in the myriad of programs offered by the Department. A U.S. Coast Guard veteran, Welch has been awarded the Peter C. O'Brien Humanitarian Award by the Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association.

"Few people in our community have given more of themselves to positively impact the lives of our young people over the years than Barry Welch. He has quite literally dedicated his life to it, and the sheer number of kids that have passed through Barry's programs throughout the decades is truly amazing. I can think of no one more deserving

Support, Opposition For Independence Ave. MBTA Gate Opening

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents who spoke at a recent community meeting concerning the Independence Avenue gate to the Quincy Adams MBTA station were largely in favor of re-opening the pedestrian entrance provided measures to address traffic and parking issues are put in place.

Seventy-five residents attended the May 31 meeting on the Independence Avenue gate hosted by the Penn's Hill Neighborhood Association at the First Presbyterian Church on Franklin Street.

The PHNA will host a second meeting on the matter at 7 p.m. on June 14, also at the church, and has started an online survey residents can fill out. The deadline to complete the survey – which can be found at goo.gl/DKVHli – is June 10, and the results will be presented at the second meeting.

The neighborhood association is not taking a position on the re-opening.

The pedestrian entrance was briefly open in the 1980s but was closed following concerns from residents living near the gate. The MBTA will rehabilitate the entrance as part of a $42 million, 39-month project to renovate the Quincy Adams parking garage that starts this fall, but has said the final decision on re-opening the gate would be left to the city.

Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the city wants to get a consensus from residents

PUT ON THE CUFFS

As women continue to focus on fit bodies and enhanced muscle definition, it only makes sense that arm cuffs are becoming an increasingly popular way to draw attention to toned arms. Whether they consist of a series of simple metal bands, a serpentine metal coil, or a chunky band, these upper-arm adornments reflect the vitality and sensuality of the wearer. Arm cuffs are fairly non-traditional pieces to begin with. When they are worn with sleeveless summer dresses and even swimwear, everyone takes notice of their singular style statement. It is up to each woman to decide for herself if she wants the dainty, feminine look of a wire band or the Cleopatra-inspired serpentine look of a temptress.

Quincy Firefighters, Norfolk Sheriff Teach Squantum School Kids About Fire Safety

The Norfolk Sheriff's Office fire safety trailer made a trip to the Squantum School Friday, teaming up with the Quincy Fire Department to teach third-graders the ins and outs of fire safety.

"The students at the Squantum School were so smart and eager to learn," Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti said. "They seemed to quickly understand everything we were teaching them."

Quincy Fire Deputy Chief Paul Griffith said, "It was a great opportunity for us to work together to teach these kids about the importance of fire safety."

The fire safety trailer simulates conditions that would occur in a child's bedroom during a real fire. The bedroom door heats up, smoke emanates from a wall socket and a smoke detector activates. The children learn to crouch low during smoky conditions and to get out of the room as quickly as possible.

"Squantum School teachers Jen Kiley, Roseann White and Melissa McNamara were very kind to welcome us into their classrooms," Sheriff Bellotti said. "It's quickly evident that a lot of learning takes place there."

The Norfolk Sheriff's Office fire safety trailer is available to towns throughout Norfolk County.

QUINCY FIRE CAPT. Kevin Bythrow and Firefighters Bill Kelley and Tim Lynch were on hand to simulate situations that might take place during a real fire rescue.

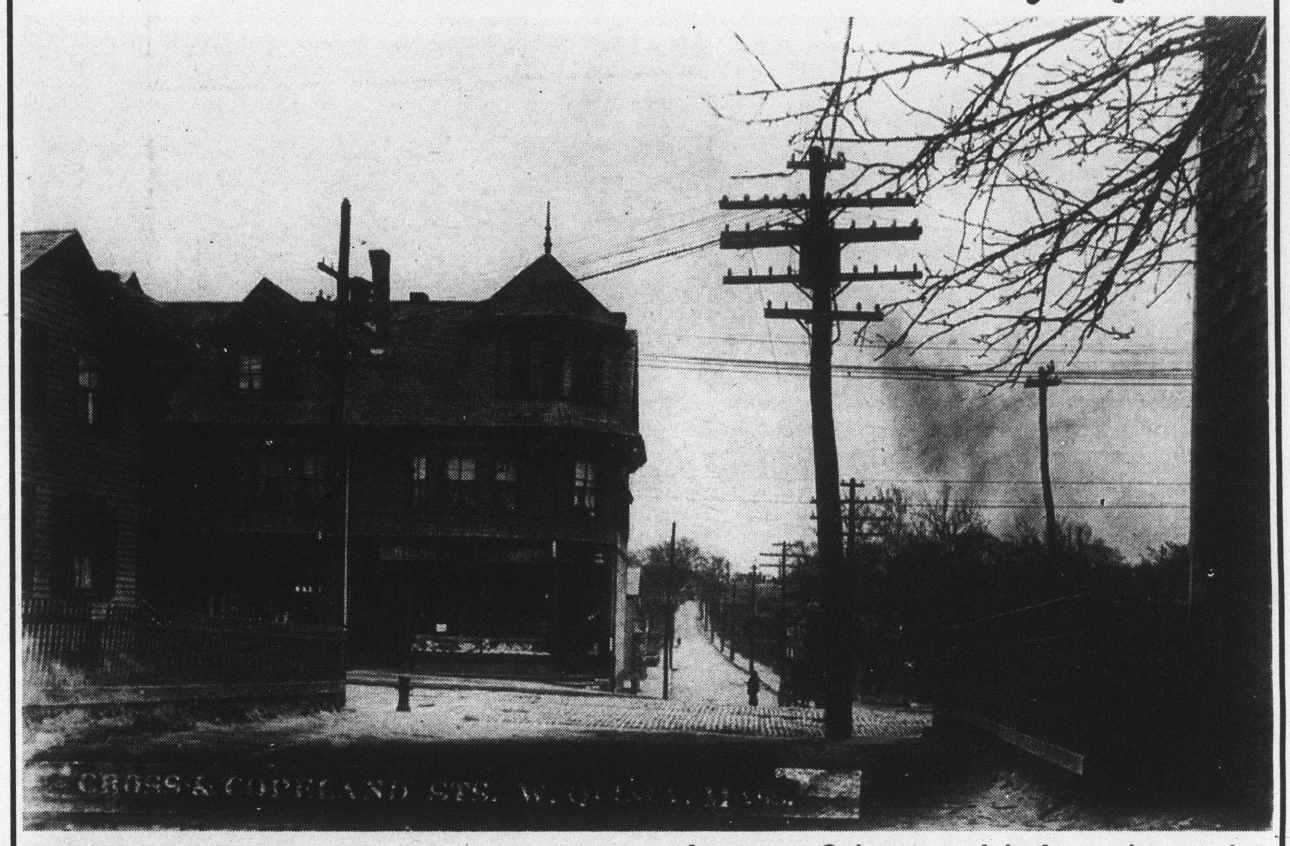
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1909 real photo postcard view of Cross Street in West Quincy looking southwest to its junction with Willard Street. At the time there was a railroad grade crossing for the Granite Branch of the Old Colony Railroad where today the Southeast Expressway makes this a dead end with no access to Willard Street. The cobblestone Copeland Street with trolley tracks crosses in the foreground in what then was a busy retail commercial center. Early in the 1900s John Walsh opened an apothecary in the street level of the building in the center. He was part of a family of Irish immigrants who came to Quincy to work in the granite quarries. Ed Columbus later operated the drug store for many years. Drohan's News and Patriarca Brothers were to the left. The corner is now a parking lot. On the right Enoch Doble had a grocery and provisions store where Copeland Package is now. The Doble family started what became the Old Colony Crushed Stone Co. now Crown Colony Office Park and the Pneumatic Scale company that was in North Quincy for 85 years. Allied Fighting Men Will Tour Shipyard

American and British war heroes – fighting men who have engaged in daring personal exploits on land, on sea and in the air, against the Nazis and Japan – will come to Quincy, Wednesday, June 10, at noon, to see an example of the efforts of defense workers on the home front.

The wartime heroes, who will be in a nationwide tour sponsored by the U.S. Treasury Department, will visit the Fore River Shipyard and personally greet the workers there who are molding steel into fighting form.

Plans are also being made to entertain the war heroes at a luncheon at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The group will include Ensign Donald F. Mason of Rochester, NY, of "Sighted sub, sank same" fame, Lt. Cmdr Harold P. Smith, who received the Navy Cross as commander of the destroyer USS Stewart in battle with the superior Japanese naval force.

U.S. FORCES SEEKING TO REGAIN CONTACT WITH MAIN JAPANESE FLEET RETREATING FROM THE MIDWAY AREA

United States forces were seeking to regain contact with the crippled Japanese main fleet as it limped westward toward Japan. Well-informed quarters said that the Japanese suffered a major defeat in the June 6 battle between naval forces of the U.S. Pacific Fleet and Japanese naval units.

The Midway Battle was a story of unsurpassed heroism and harrowing experience by the victorious Americans. (Editor's note: The Battle of Midway was a resounding victory for the United States. Japan lost all four carriers, a heavy cruiser, and hundreds of airmen in the battle. The American victory at Midway shifted the momentum in the Pacific war to the Americans.)

Souther Tide Mill Fundraiser June 21

The friends of Souther Tide Mill recently held their annual meeting fittingly at the Quincy Historical Society – Adams Academy Building.

The historic Souther Tide Mill is located 622 Southern Artery in Quincy, adjacent to CVS and at the mouth of the Town River, and one of the five remaining grist mills in U.S. built 1806.

The annual meeting was an opportunity for members and guests to learn the history of the Mill and what has been accomplished thus far in preserving the Mill site and building. Ongoing preservation activity remains along with fundraising. Oral history of the Mill was presented by the president of the Friends, Doug Merrill. These grist mills, explained Morrill, such as Jenny Grist Mill in Plymouth, operate along the rivers with the water power instead of tide water.

Among the distinguished guest who joined the meeting were Marianne Peak, Superintendent of the Adams National Park, U.S Department of Interior, and Mr. Souther, decendant of Souther Family of Plymouth, MA.

The Friends expressed their deep appreciation to these special guests for their valuable guidance and approach the Friends should continue and carry on and to build more public awareness of this significant piece of Quincy Historic treasure.

Many of the structural work has been accomplished thus far. The building itself has been secured to make it more stable with the help of the City of Quincy, Mayor Koch's office, generosity of Jay Cashman Corporation, Department of Quincy Public Buildings, Community Preservation Act funding. Friends also thanked Discover Quincy, Quincy's Tourism promotional office, and generosity of space in The Quincy Sun by Publisher Robert Bosworth, and Quincy Historical Society.

Additionally, significant accomplishment by the Friends has been the fact that the Massachusetts Historic Commission has researched and determined that the Souther Tide Mill meets all the criteria to qualify to be registered as a National Historic Site. These documents have been compiled and signed off by the Massachusetts Historic Commission and are now waiting for final signature by the City of Quincy and be forwarded to Washington, DC.

The National Site registration will significantly increase wider opportunities for fundraising opportunities. It will further Quincy's historic significance on the National level. The Mill's restoration is urgent as we anticipate of increasing tourism to Quincy and surrounding towns.

Now, as Quincy is planning for its 400 year anniversary celebration and looking for input from its citizens and civic groups, here is a tremendous opportunity for us to look at all of our important historic sites, and first in the Nation, such as the Souther Tide Mill, the Granite Industry, commercial railroad, and the iron blast furnace.

These sites can all be tied into one Quincy Historic Trail along with the National Parks. Quincy, after all, is the city of innovation and the birth of Quincy's maritime and granite industry.

Finally, please note, the next Tide Mill fundraising event will be held Wednesday, June 21 at Squantum Yacht Club on Quincy Shore Drive on Wollaston Beach - 6:30 social hour, cash bar and refreshments. Program starts at 7 p.m. Power Point presentation on Souther Tide Mill history, Q&A to follow. Donation $25 can be paid at the door.

Ten Stars For Quincy's Cemeteries

The month of May brought day after day of rain which made it almost impossible to maintain the grounds of all of the City's six cemeteries in time for Memorial Day.

Not to be deterred by the soaking rain and mud, the crew plunged forward to make sure the grass was cut and flowers were planted. Living next to Mount Wollaston Cemetery and having loved ones buried at Pine Hill Cemetery, we saw the crew work days, nights, and weekends. Veterans and ROTC members who volunteered their time to place flags on the graves did a great job.

Because water pipes are being replaced at Mount Wollaston, the water was shut off at the spigots. Large water buckets were placed throughout, and the staff drove around filling the buckets so people could water their flowers.

INDEED, TEN STARS. Thanks for a job well done despite the weather.

Bunker Hill Quarry Exploration, Walk June 17

The Bunker Hill Monument which stands 221 feet tall in Charlestown to commemorate one of the first battles of the American Revolution in 1775, had its humble beginnings in the rocky hills of the Blue Hills Reservation.

Solomon Willard, the architect and superintendent, roamed the countryside looking for suitable stone for the monument and found it in West Quincy.

Join members of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum and a DCR Park Interpreter and explore Bunker Hill Quarry. Learn about the amazing engineering feats behind the building of the Bunker Hill Monument and the Granite Railway, first commercial railroad in America. Must be able to walk one mile on moderately rocky, uneven terrain. Join the walk on Saturday, June 17th at 10 a.m.

Meet at the Quincy Quarries parking lot at 10 a.m. located on Ricciuti Drive in Quincy. Look for the large paved parking lot on the right as you top the first hill.

Brewster Ambulance's Kris Scaccia Recognized By Steward Health Care

In celebration of National Emergency Medical Service (EMS) week, Steward Health Care System hosted the inaugural "EMS Stewards of the Community" Award Ceremony May 23 at The Tirrell Room in Quincy.

Boston-based Steward, which operates 10 hospitals across Massachusetts, recognized 14 EMS providers including Brewster Ambulance's Kris Scaccia for going "above and beyond" in their interactions with patients at the Quincy Satellite Emergency Department, which is a Carney Hospital affiliate.

"EMS providers are unsung heroes on the front lines in the battle against illness and injury," said Carney Hospital President Walter Ramos who presented the award to Kris Scaccia "We are immensely proud to unveil the 'EMS Stewards of the Community' to honor their hard work and commitment to quality care."

The "EMS Stewards of the Community" awards show appreciation for emergency medical responders, emergency medical technicians and advanced emergency medical technicians, and paramedics who not only carry out the noble work of caring for others, but do so with a high degree of expertise, professionalism, and compassion. An internal committee of physicians and EMS Directors selected recipients from among providers in current practice in a Steward Hospital area.

Roseann Sdoia, injured during the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing, delivered the "Stewards of the Community" keynote address, telling her story of strength and perseverance. As Sdoia waited for a friend to finish the race, the second bomb went off right next to her; she ultimately lost her right leg due to injuries sustained on that horrific day.

"If it weren't for first responders like those being honored tonight, I might not be standing with you here today," said Boston Marathon Bombing Survivor Roseann Sdoia. "It is human instinct to flee an emergency for safety and yet these courageous men and women willingly rush into dangerous situations every day – they are and forever will be my heroes."

Polenta-Filled Stuffed Peppers

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for a delicious polenta-filled stuffed pepper. I got the recipe from my daughter Nancy. She brought one over for me to taste and I think you are going to enjoy these so much! Nancy used polenta that comes in a tube.

Pre-Heat oven to 350 Degrees
Grease a medium Baking Pan
RECIPE
One tube of polenta
2 red bell peppers cut in half
½ cup stuffing mix
1 cup of chicken broth or any favorite.
2 cups of tomato sauce

Cut the polenta into 1 inch pieces and mash until smooth. (Somewhat like mashed potatoes.) This should yield about two cups. Set aside. Cut each pepper in half. In a bowl place mashed polenta and add the chicken broth or stock, the stuffing and one cup of the tomato sauce mix until well blended. Place in greased baking dish and add two tablespoons of water to the bottom of the baking dish. Bake in a 350 degree oven until hot and bubbly.

A Lighter Coleslaw

By SUSIE

You know, coleslaw really is a health food. Its main ingredient is cabbage, which is rich with an array of cancer fighting plant chemicals (called indoles), fiber, along with lots of other vitamins and minerals.

This dressing is light and flavorful. Adding the fresh cilantro and flaxseed oil knocks the nutritional value out of the park!

1/2 head green cabbage, halved, and sliced very thinly. (You can purchase it already chopped if you like!)
2 carrots, grated
1/2 cup chopped scallions
1/3 cup chopped fresh cilantro
2 tablespoons flax oil
1 1/2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar (the raw kind)
1 1/2 tsp raw honey
1/4 tsp cumin
1/4 tsp sea salt and pepper

Simply whisk the dressing ingredients in small bowl and toss with everything else. Chilling this dish makes it taste even better. Adjust seasonings if needed. (may need more salt and pepper)

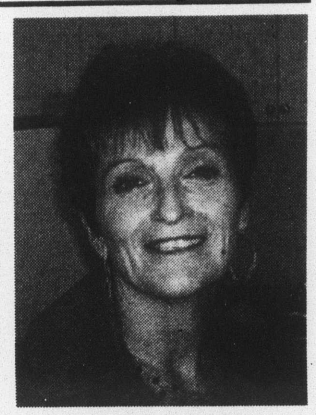
Summer Camps: Making The Right Choice

A Message From The Quincy Health Department



RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-F

Summer camp is a time for kids to make lifelong friends and countless memories. If you're a pro-camp family you can discover a few good camps that meet your child's needs and your budget, but how do you know how to choose the best out of all of the options? Before you even begin sorting through the seemingly endless possibilities in your area, take a good look at your camper and the camp to determine if it is safe and appropriate.

A recreational camp for children is a day or overnight sports, travel, or wilderness program that offers recreational activities and instruction to campers. These camps typically operate anytime between June 1 and September 30 and/or during school vacations, and have five or more children enrolled. In Massachusetts, recreational camps for children must be inspected and licensed by the local board of health in the city or town where the camp is located. In order to be licensed, the camp must meet all regulatory standards established by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) and any additional local requirements.

There are certain regulatory requirements that a camp program must meet to be licensed as a recreational camp for children. Programs that do not meet the legal definition of a recreational camp for children are not subject to MDPH's regulatory provisions and consequently may not follow the mandatory requirements that apply to licensed recreational camps for children including:

- completing criminal record background checks on each staff person and volunteer prior to employment
- requiring proof of camper and staff immunizations
- requiring proof of appropriate training certification, or experience for staff.

In addition, neither MDPH nor a local board of health conducts on-site inspections of facilities that are not deemed recreational camps for children. The regulations establish minimum health, safety, sanitary, and housing standards to protect the well-being of children who are in the care of recreational camps for children in Massachusetts. The local health department in the community where the camp is located can confirm if the camp is a licensed recreational camp for children, confirm the status of the camp's license, and provide a copy of the camp's most recent inspection report.

The primary intent of the inspection is to ensure that the camp provides an appropriate environment to protect the health, safety, and well-being of the campers. Inspectors observe the camp for: safe structures and equipment; adequate sanitary facilities; sufficient supervision of the campers; appropriate plans in case of medical emergencies, natural, and other physical disasters; sufficient health care coverage; and injury and fire prevention plans.

All counselors are required to have at least four weeks experience in a supervisory role with children or four weeks experience with group camping and must also complete an orientation program prior to the campers arrival.

The recreational camp for children must conduct a background check for all camp staff and volunteers including obtaining and reviewing their previous work history and confirming references. The camp must also acquire a Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI) history/juvenile record history from the Massachusetts Department of Criminal Justice Information and a Sex Offender Registry Information (SORI) report from the Massachusetts Sex Offender Registry Board (SORB) Services to determine any past criminal history that would prevent the applicant from being with campers. The local health department verifies that CORI and SORI checks have been conducted during their annual licensing inspection. The camp is required to hire staff and volunteers whose backgrounds are free of conduct that reflects adversely upon their ability to provide for the safety and well-being of the campers.

There are also various age requirements depending on the type of camp. A counselor working at a licensed overnight, sports, travel, trip, or special needs camp must be 18 years of age or have graduated from high school. Counselors working at a day camp must be at least 16 years of age. All counselors at licensed camps in Massachusetts are required to be at least three years older than the campers they supervise. All licensed camps are required to have a health supervisor at the camp at all times who is at least 18 years of age and is currently certified in first aid and CPR. The camp must provide backup for the health care supervisor from a Massachusetts licensed physician, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner who serves as a health care consultant. Special needs camps and residential camps where there are a large number of campers and staff must have a licensed health care provider, such as a physician or nurse, on site.

Licensed camps are required to keep all medications in their original containers and to store all prescription medications in a locked cabinet. The only individual authorized to give your child their medication is a licensed health care professional or the camp health supervisor with oversight by the camp health care consultant.

Camps are required to also retain a written disciplinary policy that explains their methods of acceptable discipline. Under no circumstances can a camper be subjected to corporal punishment, such as spanking, or be punished by withholding food or subjecting a camper to verbal abuse or humiliation.

Be cautious; do not rely on glossy pictures and fancy brochures when considering a recreational camp. Contact the camp director to schedule an appointment for an informational meeting and tour of the facility prior to registering your child. Inquire about the camps policies regarding staff background checks, as well as health care and disciplinary procedures. Call the local health department in the city or town where the camp is located for information regarding inspections of the camp and to inquire about the camp's license status. Obtain names of other families who have sent their children to the camp, and contact them for an independent reference.

Knowing your options, as well as your child's personality, will help you identify programs from which your child will benefit most.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Maria Droste Counseling Services Awarded $100,000

Maria Droste Counseling Services is one of 100 local nonprofits to receive grants of $100,000 each through Cummings Foundation's "$100k for 100" Grant Program.

The Quincy-based organization was chosen from a total of 549 applicants during a competitive review process.

Maria Droste Counseling Services which is celebrating its 25th Anniversary this year provides low-fee and even no-fee mental health and substance use outpatient therapy to individuals, couples, and families where payment is an issue. Begun as a mission of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, a Catholic Women's Religious Congregation, the nonprofit has been transitioning to an all "lay person" staff. Sr. Elish McPartland, who has been with the agency since the mid-1990s, continues to provide holistic services to clients.

Maria Droste Counseling Services Executive Director Michael Shanahan said:

"This is a great honor to be recognized by the Cummings Foundation for the work we are doing in mental health. A grant of this size spread over 10 years will help strengthen our foundation as we face growing pressures on our budget." Shanahan went on to explain that the grant money will be used to cover operation expenses.

The $100k for 100 program supports nonprofits that are not only based in but also primarily serve Middlesex, Essex, and Suffolk counties. This year, the program is benefiting 35 different cities and towns within the Commonwealth.

Through this place-based initiative, Cummings Foundation aims to give back in the area where it owns commercial buildings, all of which are managed, at no cost to the Foundation, by its affiliate Cummings Properties. Founded in 1970 by Bill Cummings of Winchester, the Woburn-based commercial real estate firm leases and manages more than 10 million square feet of space, the majority of which exclusively benefits the Foundation.

"Nonprofit organizations like Maria Droste Counseling Services are vital to the local communities where our colleagues and clients live and work," said Joel Swets, Cummings Foundation's executive director. "We are delighted to invest in their efforts."

This year's diverse group of grant recipients represents a wide variety of causes, including homelessness prevention and affordable housing, education, violence prevention, and food insecurity. Most of the grants will be paid over two to five years.

The complete list of 100 grant winners is available at www.CummingsFoundation.org.

Crane Library Bookstore Summer Specials

It's time to get out those sunglasses and hit the porch or the deck with a good book, and the Crane Library Bookstore, nearing its sixth year of operation, is offering some bargain summer specials for its patrons.

All fiction books, including the ever-popular mysteries and science fiction are on a buy-one-get-one-free of equal or lesser value special throughout June, July and August. Hard-cover books sell for $2 and paperbacks for $1. All books are in gently-used condition.

In addition to a large selection of non-fiction, the bookstore also stocks a variety of DVD's, CD's, videos, audio-books and an extensive selection of cookbooks. An assortment of children's and young-adult books and videos is available, as is foreign language and reference material.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and has its own separate entrance on Spear Street in the rear of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Sponsored and managed by volunteers of The Friends of the Crane Library, all proceeds beyond operational expenses are used to fund and support the many community programs at the library, including lectures, concerts, film screenings, museum passes, and a variety of special events for children and adults.

SCAM ALERT #1:

Buying a gift card for a graduate in your life?

Choose wisely.

In the store, thieves can remove gift cards from racks, copy the codes, and then dial the number on the back of the card to learn when they were activated and their value for online spending or to clone cards for in-store use. Purchase gift cards directly from a store cashier, customer service counter or the company's website. The cashier should scan and activate the card in your presence. And get a receipt in case there's a problem.

SCAM ALERT #2:

Don't let scammers ruin your summer vacation.

One way thieves prey on travelers is through front-desk fraud. Hotel guests receive a call in the middle of the night, supposedly from the front desk. There's a problem with your payment, the caller says, asking you to confirm your credit card number. Only it's not hotel staff calling (they'd wait until morning); it's a scammer using a lobby phone. Never give your account numbers in unsolicited calls; contact the front desk yourself.

SCAM ALERT #3:

Getting calls from debt collectors? They might be fake if the person is trying to collect on a loan you don't recognize, asks you for sensitive information, or uses threats to try to scare you into paying. Tell the caller you won't discuss the debt unless they provide a written notice that includes the debt amount, the name of the creditor, and your rights under the federal Fair Debt Collections Practices Act. Never give out or confirm personal financial or other sensitive information unless you know who you're talking to. If the debt is legitimate, but the collector may be a fake, contact your creditor about the calls.

SCAM ALERT #4:

Scammers are creating fake websites that look like known and trusted news sites to sell "brain booster" pills.

They post bogus articles about the pills with endorsements from people like Stephen Hawking and Anderson Cooper (neither has endorsed any such product). The site then links you to the sales page for the pills where you can place an order with a credit or debit card.

The scammers claim the pills will lead to an increase in concentration and memory recall, but there is no evidence to support these claims, according to the Federal Trade Commission. It's always a good idea to consult with your doctor before purchasing health products.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

Report scams to local law enforcement. Contact the AARP Fraud Watch Network at www.aarp.org/fraudwatchnetwork for more information on fraud prevention.

Social Security Matters

Social Security Isn't Welfare

Dear Rusty: I receive Social Security, but I still go in the hole to the tune of about $300 per month! I hear some people describing Social Security as "welfare" but I resent that description. Between my employer and me, we pay over 15 percent of every paycheck to Social Security, so it's not "welfare", it's my hard earned money that I've paid these taxes on for 47 years. The Government has spent my money instead of investing it to make sure I could retire and not live under a bridge. I think that they should pay me back plus interest so I can live out my retirement!

Signed: Disgusted

Dear Disgusted: You're right that it's your hard earned money that you've contributed to Social Security for many years, and it's certainly not "welfare" by any definition. I do understand your frustration but I'd like to clarify a couple of things you are concerned about.

You're correct that you and your employer have contributed over 15 percent of every paycheck to "FICA", but not all of that goes to the Social Security Trust Fund. The breakdown is that 12.4 percent goes to the SS Trust Fund, and the rest - 2.9 percent - goes to help fund Medicare. The combined 12.4 percent Social Security contribution is evenly split - 6.2 percent each by you and your employer. Of the 6.2 percent you both contribute, 5.3 percent goes to the Old Age & Survivors Insurance (OASI) fund from which regular Social Security benefits are paid, and 0.9 percent goes to the Disability Insurance (DI) fund from which SS disability benefits are paid. Nevertheless it is, as you say, your money - and your employer's - that goes into these funds.

Social Security really wasn't set up as an individual retirement investment vehicle; rather it was designed so that current workers contribute to a fund from which "old age and survivor's" benefits are paid to eligible seniors. Said another way, those working now pay for those now retired. Any excess - contributions over and above that spent to pay benefits - is deemed to be "surplus."

By law, the money in the Trust Fund can't be used for anything other than Social Security & Disability benefits, and (also by law) any surplus money from contributions must be invested in "interest-bearing securities backed by the full faith and credit of the United States." This is done via special-issue government bonds, which pay interest at "market rate" (currently 1.5 percent). As of the end of 2015, the Social Security Trust Fund had about 2 ¾ trillion dollars invested in those special-issue bonds, which are redeemable either at maturity or on demand as needed to pay benefits. The Trust Fund's revenues still exceed costs every year, although the amount of annual surplus is declining because the ratio of workers to retirees is declining.

Current estimates are that Social Security's "old age & survivor insurance" revenue will stop running a surplus about 2020, after which any income shortfall would be taken from the Trust Fund's investments. The trust fund wouldn't run out until about 2034, at which point benefits will be reduced unless Congress acts before then to improve solvency. AMAC has developed a "Social Security Guarantee" which we have been regularly promoting to Congressional Representatives in Washington, D.C. This is a common-sense plan which ensures that Social Security will be able to pay full benefits into the next century, and we plan to continue lobbying congress to adopt the AMAC plan, or something similar.

So, to recap, the money you contributed while you were working went to pay benefits for those already retired and, after you retire, contributions from those still working will be used to pay your benefits. And any surplus funds collected were invested in interest-bearing bonds for future use, and those funds cannot be used for any other purpose than Social Security benefits payments.

Support, Opposition For Independence Ave. Gate Opening

before reaching a decision and it would not be done without proper planning.

"The mayor knows this is not just a case of unlocking the gate and letting people have at it," Walker said.

"If it's going to happen at all, it's going to take a lot of engineering, it's going to take a lot of planning and it's going to take a substantial commitment from the city to do some enforcement and regulatory measures that we as a city have not done traditionally in the past."

Walker said the $2.3 million citywide traffic and parking study the mayor has made part of his latest capital improvement plan, which is now pending before the City Council, would look into what steps the city needs to take if the Independence Avenue gate were to re-open. If funding for the citywide study were not approved in the next several months, Walker said the administration would still do the work related to the Independence Avenue gate.

"We would send out a team here to get the studies done, to get the engineering done, to get to the point where we could make a decision," he stated.

Walker added that the city has had some conversations with the town of Braintree regarding the gate's re-opening. Braintree officials, he said, are in favor of re-opening it, as is Archbishop Williams High School.

Twenty attendees at the May 31 meeting spoke; eight said they were in favor of re-opening the gate while three were opposed. The others said they were either leaning one way or undecided but still open to either position, or asked questions.

Ron MacDonald said he previously was in favor of welding the gate shut permanently but recently changed his mind and would now support it re-opening, provided strict enforcement measures were in place to control traffic and parking. He suggested the city increase fines for parking violations and tow away repeat offenders.

"I really would like to see it open because my neighbors and my friends and people I see every day, the majority seem to want it," MacDonald said. "I will support that, but I want to see the mayor and the chief of police on a stage similar to this telling us all 'we're going to guarantee there is going to be very strong enforcement and you won't have to worry about people parking here.'"

Cindy Brandi likewise said parking would need to be strictly enforced in the surrounding neighborhoods, adding that she would like to see drop-off and pick-up prohibited on Independence Avenue. Brandi said opening the pedestrian gate would reduce traffic because fewer people would drive to the station.

"I drive my son to the T station everyday," she said. "How many times is that repeated, how many car rides would be eliminated, if you could just walk to the T?"

Sarah Palmer, who moved to Quincy from Chicago two years ago, said she would support re-opening the gate. She suggested the city give residents parking stickers along with guest passes, which would address some residents' concerns about losing visitor spaces if parking were more strictly enforced.

"In the city of Chicago they have parking stickers that are assigned by address and they have guest passes and each person is able to get guest passes so you could have family members, or if you have a nanny or people who come in and help take care of your home, they can still park," Palmer said.

Bill Rogers was among those who spoke against re-opening the gate. He lived in the neighborhood in the 1980s when it was open, and said the area saw an increase in crime, traffic and parking.

"Lots of cars traveling up and down the streets searching for parking," Rogers recalled. "This impacted kids' ability to play safely in the neighborhood – we couldn't even have a street hockey game anymore. The rules of the road weren't followed – speed and obeying restriction on direction for traffic."

Coleman Barry said he was torn on the issue. As someone who walks to the Quincy Adams station daily, Barry said he would benefit from the gate re-opening, but feels the city should determine which residents would be most impacted if it were to happen and determine how they feel about it.

"I don't want to impose on them any cost that I'm not going to bear myself," he said.

Special Bunker Hill Day Tour June 17

"The Day; perhaps the decisive Day is come on which the fate of America depends." Abigail Adams's "bursting Heart" could not contain what she had seen when she brought her 8-year old son John Quincy Adams up to the top of Penn's Hill to watch the Battle of Bunker Hill unfold on June 17, 1775. The two watched the beginning of the Revolutionary War unfold right in front of their eyes, a few miles from home.

On Saturday, June 17, join Abigail Adams (portrayed by Patricia Bridgeman) for a special Bunker Hill Day tour. This tour will take you from the Visitor Center, by trolley, to the John Quincy Adams Birthplace, and then up to the top of Penn's Hill to hear Abigail recount that day and what it meant for the colonies.

The tour starts at the Visitor Center at 10 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 1 p.m., and 2:30 p.m. and will last an hour. The program is free, but as trolley space is limited, calling ahead is strongly recommended (617) 770-1175. This tour is separate from the regular Adams National Historical Park guided tour and does not include the John Adams Birthplace or the Old House at Peace field.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of the second and sixth presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with the Old House at Peace field, home to both presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

During the open season, April 19 through November 10, tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy. A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the "Old House at Peace field" for a two and a half hour tour. The first tour leaves at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays.

Tickets are $10 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

For a listing of tours and events visit the park website at www.np..gov/adam, or call (617) 770-1175.

"I am running for Quincy City Council-at-Large because I have deep roots here in this city and a strong passion to make sure everyone here has a voice," Mahoney said. "I have raised my family here and I'm committed to making sure that Quincy is a great city for everyone, from lifelong residents to those just beginning their journey in this fast-changing city."

Mahoney said she understands Quincy is in a period of unprecedented growth and change.

"It is important that the leadership of the city understands the importance of this time and their role in helping shape the future," Mahoney said. "I will focus my efforts on fiscal responsibility, traffic issues and overdevelopment in our neighborhoods as some of the key areas of concentration on the council. With the rapid growth and constant change in Quincy Center, I will also champion the expansion of our commercial base to create even more opportunities in the Center and across our city."

Mahoney said she is aware that there are real concerns for all of our tax paying residents. Concerns around the city's priorities, increases in spending and a lack of transparency around major decisions are all areas that need to be addressed.

"I believe my fiscal management experience will help bring a new level of scrutiny and accountability to how this city conducts business and how information is shared with the tax paying public," Mahoney said.

With 12 years of experience on the School Committee, Mahoney said she has earned a reputation as a straight shooter, and someone who listens to the concerns of the community.

"I am not afraid to take a stand, ask the difficult questions and, most importantly, vote independently for what is best for the residents of Quincy," she said.

"As a member of the City Council, I will make informed decisions only after thorough research and analysis. My votes will always be based on what's best for our neighborhoods, residents and city."

A Quincy native, Mahoney is the fourth generation of her family to live in her West Quincy home at 12 Ferriter St. A graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, she received a degree in finance from Suffolk University. She said she has decades of experience as a senior-level marketing executive, currently serving as a strategic marketing professional for a national bank.

Mahoney and her husband, Kevin Mahoney, are the parents of three children – Maggie, 22, a recent graduate of The Massachusetts College of Art; Liam, 19, a junior at The Massachusetts College of Art; and Rory, 14, a 9th grader at North Quincy High School.

Two Meetings On Downtown Plans Next Week

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents will have the chance to comment on a proposed new city-owned garage meant to replace parking spaces in the Hancock Lot and plans for new infrastructure in Quincy Center during a pair of meetings next week.

A community meeting will take place at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 14, in the lower-level meeting room of the McIntyre Government Center, 1305 Hancock St., concerning plans for the new garage. The City Council's finance committee will hold a public hearing the following night at 6:30 p.m. inside the Great Hall of the McIntyre Government Center on a proposed $80 million bond to pay for the new garage, land acquisitions and infrastructure in Quincy Center.

Officials involved with the city's effort to redevelop Quincy Center gave a presentation on the $80 million bond Monday night. Mayor Thomas Koch submitted the bond request May 15.

The $80 million bond primarily involves work to prepare the Hancock Lot for redevelopment. Two projects are already in the pipeline for the city-owned land: LBC Partners received approval from the Planning Board last week for Nova Residences, a 171-unit apartment building at 1500 Hancock St., and Peter O'Connell's plan for Chestnut Place, a 15-story, 124-unit apartment building on the Dennis Ryan Parkway, which is awaiting Planning Board approval.

A pair of other developments is also being eyed in the future for the remainder of the lot.

William Geary, Koch's point person for the Quincy Center redevelopment, said the $80 million request is key to the future development of the lot.

"In the year and a half I've served as the mayor's special counsel for downtown development, this is probably the most important matter that I've had the opportunity to present to you," he said. "All of the preceding matters were precursors to this, and this is a predecessor to everything else that is to come."

The lion's share of the money would go towards construction of the new parking garage. Geary said the city is contemplating two designs – one that would have parking for 720 vehicles and the other with space for 810 vehicles. The cost for the garage and related work – including its design, site and environmental work, and the construction of a new drain line – is $46.6 million. Land disposition agreements with LBC and O'Connell would require both to lease parking spaces in the new garage, and O'Connell would be responsible for building the parking structure.

Geary said the parking structure would be designed so it does not resemble a typical garage, but rather blends in with the neighboring buildings.

"The mayor has been quite adamant that we – the city of Quincy – learn from the mistakes of the past. We don't want a garage that just looks like a garage," he stated. "Our approach to this garage is to make every effort to make it not look like a garage, but to make it look like a building to fit in with the community fabric that is being constructed around the block."

The downtown bond would also pay for construction of a new civic space located between the garage and a new atrium from Hancock Street. The design for the civic space also needs to be finalized.

"The civic space, we want it to be activated. We want it to be a new gathering place. We want it to be a new destination for the citizens and visitors to our city," Geary said. "There are blanks to be filled in here, both in terms of the façade of the garage but also the make up of that civic space."

The bond includes $6.1 million to acquire two parcels of land – 31 Chestnut St. and 23 Cottage Ave. – as outlined in the LDA with O'Connell, who would pay for construction and maintenance of a park on site. The city would also use the land to widen Cottage Avenue to provide access to the new garage. The $6.1 million would cover the purchase of the land, relocation fees to the 14 businesses on site, and the demolition of the buildings.

The bond also includes $5.1 million for work outlined in the LDA with LBC. That includes $2.6 million to construct a replacement for the drain line on site, $1.5 million for the atrium, and $860,000 for sidewalk work.

Additionally, the bond includes $6.5 million for the relocation of a sewer line on Cottage Avenue and utility and surface improvements on the Dennis Ryan Parkway, plus $3.7 million for utility and surface work at the intersection of Cottage Avenue and Hancock Street.

The bond also includes $6.1 million for work related to creating a new bridge at Cliveden Street and extending that road to the Hancock Lot. That would cover land acquisitions at 37R and 95 Parkingway and 1534 and 1546 Hancock St., plus streetscape improvements along Cliveden Street. The Massachusetts Department of Transportation is paying for the cost of designing the bridge, and the city hopes to receive state funding to building the new bridge.

The money would be financed through the District Improvement Financing program. Under the DIF program, the city would repay the $80 million bond using new property tax revenue generated in Quincy Center.

Craig Seymour of RKG Associates, a consultant for the city, told the council the city would receive enough new revenue to support the debt service on the $80 million bond.

Under the best-case scenario, which includes the development of both the Hancock Lot and Ross Garage site, Seymour said the city would receive $210 million in DIF revenue through 2035. During that same period, the city would pay $107 million in debt service leaving a surplus of more than $100 million.

In the worst-case scenario, with no development on the Ross Garage site or at the Quincy Center MBTA station, there would still be a surplus of $3.5 million.

"It pays back that debt. Even if that [worst-case scenario] occurs, all of that $80 million is paid back," Seymour said.

Fire Dept. To Update Communications System

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will spend $180,000 for a fiber-optic based communications system between Quincy's firehouses after the current system failed last month.

Four of the city's eight firehouses lost voice connectivity with the fire alarm dispatch office during the week of May 22, Fire Chief Joseph Barron said, requiring personnel in those stations to monitor radio frequencies for emergency information.

The chief, speaking at Monday's City Council meeting, said the parts needed to maintain the current copper wire-based system are no longer provided by qualified vendors, necessitating the switch to the fiber optic system. All eight firehouses will be connected via fiber optic lines following installation, which is expected to take four weeks.

"As untimely as this is, it provides the opportunity to provide a better system that will interface with our computer dispatch software," Barron said.

The council unanimously approved the $180,000 appropriation to replace the communications system.

"[This is] an opportunity to improve public safety as far as I'm concerned," Ward 6 Councillor Bill Harris said.

The money for the new system will come from the city's state-certified free cash. Auditor Susan O'Connor said $419,428 remains in free cash after the appropriation.

Spring Fair, Craft Show June 17

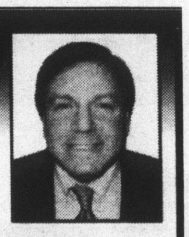
The Parish of St. Chrysostom will be hosting it's annual Spring Fair and Craft Show on Saturday, June 17th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The church is located at 1 Linden St. (corner of Hancock Street) in Wollaston.

Some of the vendors will be selling homemade baked goods, books, photographs, household items, handmade decorations, toys, and forgotten treasures. The Quincy Animal Shelter will be in attendance as well.

A pancake breakfast will be served from 10 to 11 a.m. and a BBQ for lunch at noon. There will be a sale at the Mite Box Thrift Shop, which will be closing for the summer after the fair. The event will be held rain or shine.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century



by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

LOSING YOUR GRIP?

Denture wearers primarily rely on their "alveolar ridges" (the bony crests in upper and lower jaws that contain the tooth sockets) to hold their lower dentures in place. In some cases, however, due to bone "resorption," the alveolar ridge may shrink to the point where their lower dentures "float" and move while chewing. Increasingly, dental implants are providing those who have trouble retaining their dentures with a good alternative. Acting as substitutes for tooth roots, dental implants not only hold replacement teeth securely in place, but they also help stop bone resorption by stimulating bone growth. The jawbone actually forms a bond with the dental implants, creating a stable foundation for replacement teeth.

With proper homecare and regular maintenance, your dental implants can last a lifetime, saving you both time and money in the long run! Most patients who receive dental implants are highly satisfied with them. You will be able to chew and eat your favorite foods, talk as you would normally, and otherwise have a full active life as if you'd never been missing any teeth at all. To schedule an appointment, please call our office. You can also visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If the alveolar ridge is too soft or thin to accept an implant, bone from another area of the body (or a special bone grafting material) may be used to supplement the jaw.

Lauren Carter Participates In College Nursing Ceremony

Lauren Carter of Quincy, a member of the Class of 2019 at Saint Anselm College, was among a group of 76 students who recently had their hands blessed marking the beginning of clinical practice for the Nursing program.

The ceremony symbolically and literally pays honor to the hands of nursing students as they prepared for clinical care, actually touching, administering to and caring for the sick.

Nurses whose hands were blessed were joined by faculty, family, and friends, listening to prayer and reflection. To be eligible for this honor, a student must be in good academic standing and completed three semesters of a liberal arts nursing curriculum.

O'Donnell Emphasizes Need To File Mortgage Discharges

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds homeowners about the importance of filing a mortgage discharge after their mortgage has been paid off.

"When a mortgage is paid off, a mortgage discharge document needs to be recorded with the Registry of Deeds to clear a homeowner's property title relative to that loan," O'Donnell said. The register said a discharge is a document (typically one page) issued by the lender, usually with a title such as "Discharge of Mortgage" or "Satisfaction of Mortgage."

O'Donnell further stated, "In many instances, discharges are filed directly by banks or settlement closing attorneys with the Registry as part of a property sale or as a result of a refinancing transaction. In other cases, the mortgage discharge is sent to the property owner who then becomes responsible for making sure the document is recorded. Whether or not a discharge is recorded by the lending institution or the individual property owner, it is prudent that the property owner make sure that all necessary documents have been recorded at the Registry of Deeds.

"One way to check on your title is by accessing the Registry's online records at www.norfolkdeeds.org and verifying if all mortgages associated with the property have been discharged," O'Donnell noted.

The Register said there have been cases where no discharge has been recorded against a long paid off mortgage.

the lending institutions that provided funds for these mortgages are no longer in existence. In other cases, financial entities have merged with another lending institution. Please remember not having a mortgage discharged will result in a title issue that can impact the sale of one's home," the Register warned.

If a property owner needs to retrieve an original discharge of a mortgage and is unclear which lending institution is now responsible for providing the document, an option is to contact the Massachusetts Division of Banks at 1-800-495-2265. This government agency can assist the consumer in tracking down contact information for the lending institution that is responsible for the mortgage.

When recording a discharge, the original document is required. The Registry of Deeds does not accept photo copies or faxed copies of documents. The filing fee, set by state statute, is $76.

"After paying off all the mortgages on their property, homeowners want the peace of mind that they have clear title to their property, especially if they are contemplating selling," O'Donnell said. "Being diligent and aware of what is required will go a long way in giving the homeowner assurances that they have clear title to their property. I strongly urge homeowners to make sure their mortgage discharge has been filed with the Registry of Deeds once their mortgage has been paid off. There is no reason to wait."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is staffed with a team of customer service representatives who can be reached Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at 781-461-6101. Representatives have been trained in researching documents and are well versed on the subject of mortgage discharges and what, if necessary, needs to be done to clear title to a property, O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is located at 649 High St. in Dedham. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. All land record research information can be found on the Registry's website www.norfolkdeeds.org. Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or email registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org.

O'Donnell Speaks At HN Community Center

Continuing his efforts of bringing the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds directly to the citizens of Norfolk County, Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell recently appeared as a guest speaker at the Hough's Neck Community Center.

The event, sponsored by the Hough's Neck Community Council, was a chance for Register O'Donnell to discuss the operations of the Registry of Deeds, the various modernization initiatives undertaken and various consumer protection initiatives.

O'Donnell spent time warning attendees about deed and Homestead scams that are being perpetrated against citizens of Norfolk County, both young and old.

"Right now there are marketing scams ongoing where Norfolk County residents continue to receive direct-mail solicitations offering them a certified copy of their property deed for an exorbitant fee ranging from $59.50 to $83," O'Donnell said. "Some of these mailings look like a bill. Don't fall victim to it.

"If a consumer knew that the Registry would provide them a certified copy of a property deed for only $1 per page, plus an additional $1 for postage, they would never agree to pay such an outrageous fee. The average price for a mailed homeowner's deed by the Registry, usually two pages, is $3."

O'Donnell also spent time discussing the advantages of the Massachusetts Homestead Act.

"The Homestead Act is an important tool for homeowners as it provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell said.

Concluding his remarks, Register O'Donnell expressed his appreciation for being invited to speak before the Hough's Neck community.

"It is always a pleasure to spend time in Hough's Neck. The community of Hough's Neck is part of what makes Quincy such a great city. I want to thank all those who attended. It was an engaged audience that featured some great questions.

"Additionally, I want to thank Dave DiBona, president of the Houghs Neck Community Council, and director Cynthia Lewis for their hospitality in allowing us to speak. Both do a great job serving the Hough's Neck community.

"The Hough's Neck Community Center offers a great number of programs to help local residents young and old," O'Donnell added.

MountainOne Bank Warns Older Americans About Grandparent Scam

The next time you receive a frantic call from someone saying they are your grandchild and asking for money, make sure it's actually your grandchild who's calling.

According to the Federal Trade Commission, in 2016, impersonation scams ranked second as the most common consumer complaint, with more than 400,000 reported. The "grandparent scam," is a form of financial abuse that deliberately targets older Americans, using impersonation tactics.

To commit this crime, fraudsters call claiming to be a family member in serious trouble and in need of money immediately. The scammer might say he's stranded or has been mugged, and calls in the middle of the night to add to the urgency and confusion. Once the money is wired, the victim later finds out that it wasn't their grandchild they were helping; it was a criminal.

"The grandparent scam continues to be a major problem for seniors," said Kelly Grant, Community Banking Officer for MountainOne's Rockland office. "Before you act on any request, it's very important that you verify who you are speaking with by asking questions, calling them back on a known number, or consulting with a trusted family member or friend before you fulfill any request."

MountainOne Bank offers older Americans these tips to help them prevent impersonation fraud:

- Confirm the caller. Fraudsters are using social networking sites to gain the personal information of friends and relatives to carry out their crimes. Verify the caller by calling them back on a known number or consult a trusted family member before acting on any request.
- Don't be afraid to ask questions. Fraudsters want to execute their crimes quickly. The more questions you ask the more inclined they will be to ditch the scam if they suspect you're on to them.
- Never give personal information to anyone over the phone unless you initiated the call and the other party is trusted.
- Never rush into a financial decision and trust your instincts. Don't be fooled – if something doesn't feel right, it may not be right. Feel free to say no and get more information before you send money to someone.

Homebuyers Workshop

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers in June.

The first part of the course will be taken online; following completion of the online component, participants will attend an in-person class to be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, June 24 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by Daniel Matthews of Direct Finance Corp. Mortgage, the in-person workshops will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 x 34 for more information.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, May 20, at approximately 11 a.m., Quincy Police Anti-Crime Officer Ryan Donnelly was dispatched to the Thomas Crane Library to investigate a past larceny of a valuable painting.

Upon my arrival the officer met with the library's Chief Security Officer, Jake Kerin who said the library was hosting an art exhibit and sale of paintings from local artists. He stated this was the last day of the exhibit and as he was assisting in taking the paintings down to return them to their owner/artists he noticed one was missing. The oil painting of former Red Sox player David Ortiz was last seen on May 7th when the exhibit hosted an evening party to celebrate the artists.

While Officer Donnelly went to interview the artist and advise her of the theft, Mr. Kerin began reviewing hours of library surveillance video to see if there was footage of the suspect. The owner, who has created numerous renowned paintings, was very upset about the theft and estimated the artwork to be worth a minimum of $1,000. She said she last saw the painting on May 7th.

Members of the Anti-Crime Unit then went to local art dealers and requested they keep an eye out for the painting. A rendition of the painting was put on mass media in the event that someone tried to sell it person to person.

Security Officer Jake Kerin was able to detect an image of a male approaching the painting and quickly walk out of the library with it. He contacted Officer Donnelly on May 23rd about his discovery, adding he (Kerin) had an interaction with the unidentified male on May 16th. He said he found the male sleeping in the library and told him he could not sleep there.

The video was not very clear due to the poor angle and distance, but Mr. Kerin was able to give a thorough description of the suspect. A review of the security video showed the suspect entering the library from the Washington Street side at 6:29.07 p.m. He walked up the main stairs and into the men's bathroom, coming back out at 6:32.31 p.m. He then walked back down the steps, looked around briefly, take the painting at walk out the same door at 6:33.21 p.m. Prints were made of the suspect and disbursed to officers working the area.

On May 24, Mr. Kerin contacted ACU Officers Donnelly and Brandolini, stating he was able to produce an enhanced photo of the suspect. He then told the officers he believed the suspect may have just entered the library a few minutes ago and was wearing a blue sweatshirt. Officers Michael Dougan and ACU Officer William Lanergan checked the library and the immediate front area but did not locate the suspect. Believing the suspect may return to the area, officers of the Anti-Crime Unit conducted surveillance of the immediate area.

At approximately 2:45 p.m., Officer Brandolini contacted communications stating he had the suspect in sight at across the street from the library. Officer Brandolini engaged the suspect in conversation and immediately noted the suspect fit the description closely. He had tattoos on both forearms as shown in the new photo.

Officer Brandolini read the suspect Miranda Rights and once the suspect waived his rights, he advised the suspect of the incident he was investigating. Officer Brandolini could read the body language of the suspect, which showed that he had first hand knowledge of the incident. The suspect initially gave false information as to his identity, which came back as "no such person." Officer Brandolini convinced the suspect to be honest about the incident. The suspect confessed that another person paid him to steal the painting.

A criminal record check showed the suspect had five outstanding arrest warrants so he was placed into custody and transported to the station. The suspect stated he would talk to Officer Lanergan at the police station about the incident. The suspect said his friend (name provided) asked him to steal the painting for him and he would pay him for it. The suspect said he took the painting on May 16th, walked across the street to the church (65 Washington St.) and gave the Ortiz painting to his friend, receiving $20 in return. The suspect said his friend then hid the painting under a pile of leaves in the grass.

The friend (suspect 2) then called his girlfriend and she drove to the location, where suspect 2 placed the painting in the trunk of her vehicle. Suspect 1 only knew the girlfriend's name as Melissa, worked for the MBTA and lived in West Bridgewater. Suspect 1 said suspect 2 was in drug rehab. He added he did not believe that Melissa was aware of the fact that the painting was stolen. Upon hearing this information, Officer Brandolini believed he knew who Melissa was due to his familiarity with suspect 2, a regular offender in the Quincy Square area. A few days earlier Officer Brandolini saw a vehicle parked near a convenience store where many people go to purchase alcohol nips and quickly drink them as they walk out the door.

Officer Brandolini spoke briefly with suspect 2 and then wrote down the license plate of the vehicle he got into. The driver was a female with an MBTA shirt on. The officer ran the plate which came back to a female residing in Bridgewater. Officer Brandolini, in hopes of locating the vehicle in order to recover the painting, contacted the MBTA and learned that Melissa was not working this week.

Officer Donnelly then contacted the West Bridgewater Police to have them check her residence for her vehicle. They confirmed her vehicle was in the driveway. Officer Donnelly immediately drove to her residence and met with a Bridgewater Police Officer. They then went to her home and told her why they were there.

Appearing shocked and upset, she went to the trunk of her car and removed the painting, which was undamaged and in a gray fleece sweater inside a bag. She told Officer Donnelly that suspect 2 is a friend and gave her the painting to hold for him until he had a place to put it. She said she did not know that it was stolen and that suspect 2 gave her the painting on the evening of May 16th.

Officer Donnelly advised her she was not going to be charged in this incident but may be a witness. Officer Donnelly then transported the painting back to the Quincy Police Station where it was logged into evidence. He then contacted the artist and told her the good news about her painting.

Suspect 1, a 37-year-old homeless man, was charged with the five outstanding warrants as well as larceny from a building and conspiracy to wit larceny from a building. Since suspect 2's whereabouts are unknown and he is homeless, Officer Lanergan sought an arrest warrant on the charges of conspiracy to wit larceny in a building and receiving stolen property over $250.

Nice Work!

RECENT TELEPHONE VETERAN'S SOLICITATION: this week I received a call from "Coalition for American Veterans." I told the caller I would have to look into the group before going forward and hung up. A check online showed that the group was relatively new and there was limited information about them. According to Charitynavigator.org, they do not have a group with that exact name; however, there are some groups with similar names. A check online showed that in 2016, the Coalition raised just over $7,000 and spent that amount the same year. It does not, however, say what the money was spent on. One site stated that the Coalition was a "Super PAC," which is defined as a modern breed of political-action committee that's allowed to raise and spend unlimited amounts of money from corporations, unions, individuals and associations to influence the outcome of state and federal elections. At this time I would avoid engaging in a conversation with the particular group.

So – what veteran's group should I give to?

CNBC, a financial news channel, used multiple sites, including Charity Navigator to come up with ten groups who are highly rated because most of the money they raise goes directly to services. There may be other groups but this article mentioned the following:

1. Fisher House Foundation
2. Thanks USA
3. Disable American Veterans Charitable Service Trust
4. Homes for our Troops
5. Puppies Behind Bars
6. Wounded Warrior Family Support
7. Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society
8. USO (United Service Organization)
9. Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA)
10. Hope for the Warriors

IN SUPPORT of the Mayor Thomas Koch's initiative for a "Cleaner, Greener, Quincy," the Quincy Housing Authority recently completed a major beach cleanup rounding up over 10 tons of trash. The QHA staff with assistance from Norfolk County Sherriff Michael Bellotti's Community Service Department covered the shoreline throughout Snug Harbor. The event was followed by a pizza party hosted by the QHA. "The staff demonstrated their commitment to the City and the residents of Snug Harbor and I am extremely proud of their accomplishment," said James Marathas, executive director, Quincy Housing Authority. The event was attended by QHA Commissioners Thomas Lynn, Arthur Wahlberg and former Commissioner Rosemary Wahlberg. The QHA has been working over the last two years to improve curb appeal through landscaping and increased lease enforcement.

Josiah Quincy House Garden Pathway Restored

The restoration of the garden pathway at the Josiah Quincy House was recently completed by Ames Landscaping, Inc of Quincy.

The paths are now covered with shells and lined with brick, helping to formalize the garden and prevent weeds from sprouting.

At the 2014 Fall Conference of the Garden Club Federation of MA (GCFM) in Framingham, the Wollaston Garden Club (WGC) was awarded an Historic Preservation Grant. This competitive grant was for restoring the garden walkway in the garden the WGC maintains at the Josiah Quincy House on Muirhead Street in Wollaston. Each year the GCFM awards grants to encourage garden clubs to pursue historic preservation projects by providing "seed" money for new or a new phase of an on-going permanent planting project.

Since 2008 the Wollaston Garden Club has worked cooperatively with Historic New England in restoring a circa 1920s garden at the side of the property. Under the leadership of Cynthia Lewis, WGC Horticulture Chair and Master Gardener, the garden has evolved into a charming four-season garden. However the walkways through the small garden were in need of restoration and with site materials advice from Historic New England, and grant money from the GCFM and civic beautification funds from WGC, this has finally become a reality.

GARDEN PATHWAYS at the Josiah Quincy House were recently restored with the help of the Wollaston Garden Club and Ames Landscaping. The lack of symmetry reflects the 1920s design by the gardener who worked at the historic home.

"This project has helped us learn so much more about the on-going history of the Josiah Quincy House and its landscape – nestled in a quiet Wollaston neighborhood where urban development has taken its toll on a once massive Quincy Family estate," said WGC President Jan Clifford.

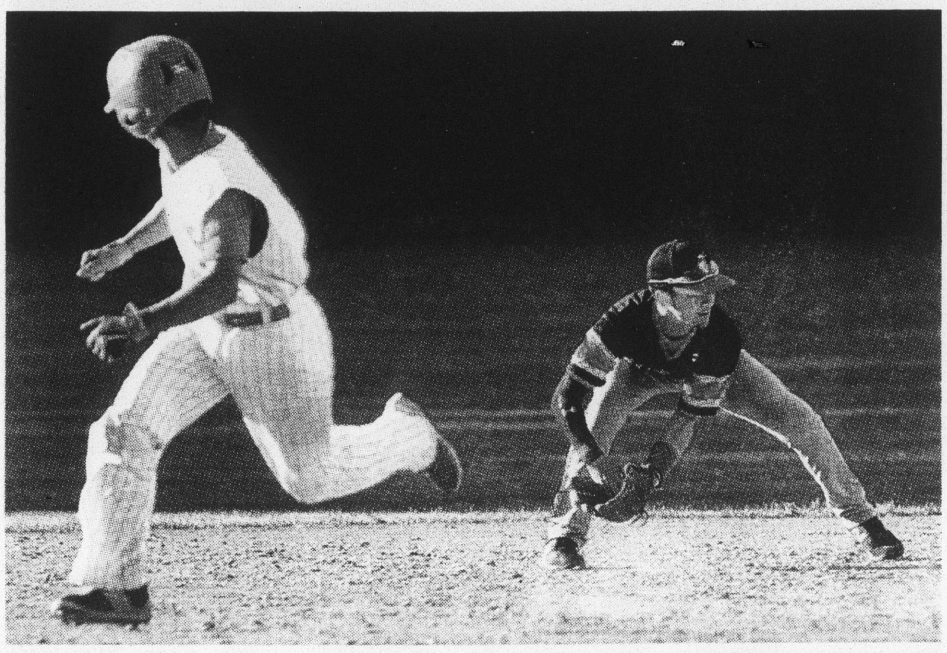
Earning a spot in the MIAA Division 1 South playoff bracket, the North Quincy High baseball team, which finished their season at 11-11, battled all year, and their final game of the season was yet again another indication of it.

On June 2, the No. 15 Red Raiders saw their season come to an end when they faced a Patriot League foe, No. 2 Silver Lake, a perennial powerhouse in eastern Massachusetts, on the road at Plymouth North High School. The Red Raiders fought hard on the road but ultimately, they fell 8-5, which marked the end of their season.

In the initial frame, the Red Raiders surrendered a pair of runs on three hits. However, it would not take the Red Raiders long to battle back.

Shawn Kelly walked to start off the top of the third inning and Hunter Phillips knocked him in, lining a double into an outfield gap.



NORTH QUINCY SHORTSTOP Chris Mann fields a grounder as a New Bedford runner heads to third. Mann hit a two-run single in the bottom of the sixth propelling the Red Raiders past New Bedford, 4-0, in a preliminary tournament match-up at Adams Field June 1. North bowed to #2 seed Silver Lake June 2.

While the Lakers got a run in the top of the fourth, the point of separation of the game came an inning later, in the fifth. Already up 3-1, they put up five runs on three hits, three walks and an error in the inning to take an 8-1 lead. None of their hits were for extra bases, although one batter reached second on the Red Raiders' error in the inning.

The Red Raiders put together a small rally of their own in the sixth inning, scoring three runs, giving themselves a better shot of winning the ballgame. Ryan Cox led the inning off with a single and then Tommy Kelly singled with one out. Mark Monahan then walked and during his plate appearance, Cox scored on a passed ball and Kelly was able to reach third. With two down in the inning, Matt Eagles hit an RBI double, making it an 8-4 ball game.

Leadoff hitter Chris Mann walked with one out in the seventh inning and then proceeded to steal two bases before Cox scored him on a fielder's choice.

In the end, Red Raiders head coach Matt Edgerly was pleased with what he saw from his team.

"Yeah they really battled," he said. "That's the way they always are. They've been great like that all year."

"We competed with them," he added. "That's what we've been doing all year, just doing our best to compete with these teams. Our pitcher kept us in it. We had a lot of seniors who hit well and kept us in the game offensively."

On the mound, Jack Free took the loss, but most of the runs he surrendered were unearned. He allowed three earned runs on 4.2 innings of work. He allowed seven hits and struck out four batters, keeping his team in the game. Eagles pitched in relief and threw 1.1 scoreless innings.

Even if they were not able to advance in the tournament, they qualified for it and they won their initial playoff game over New Bedford, 4-0, a day prior to the Silver Lake game.

"It's huge," Edgerly said of making it to the postseason. "We hadn't done it since 2009, so it was a huge deal for us."

Kelly and Eagles were named Patriot League All-Stars on the mound while McDonald earned the honor as a second baseman.

In all, the Red Raiders will graduate 10 seniors: Mann, Eagles, Kelly, Phillips, McDonald, Devlin St. Marie, Brendan Ganno, Aidan Golden, and Anthony Demers.

UPON REFERRAL

The source of pain involving internal organs can often be traced to a site that is distant from them. So-called "referred pain" can be concisely defined as having its source located somewhere other than where the pain is felt. This phenomenon can be explained by the fact that referred pain often arises when a nerve is compressed or damaged at (or near) its origin, but the pain is felt in the area that the nerve serves. For instance, when a nerve root is compressed by a herniated disc, even though the damage occurs near the spinal cord, the pain may occur in the region served by the compressed nerve. Chiropractors are expert at tracing the origin of referred pain.

FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC is dedicated to helping everyone achieve their natural wellness objectives. Squirrel Run XX, Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS Saturday

The 20th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, (the Squirrel Run XX), a 5-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day will be held Saturday, June 10th at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway in Quincy.

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund for ALS, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at Day Lab for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical School in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

An outstanding football player and track athlete Jimmy graduated from North Quincy High in 1984, the 8th and final member of the Kennedy family to do so. He graduated with high honors from Northeastern, and received his diploma from his dad, Dean of Students Christopher Kennedy (who was also a 25-year member of the Quincy School Committee).

Jimmy graduated from Georgetown Law School. After passing the bar on his first attempt, he accepted a job with the prestigious Washington law firm Schwald, Donnenfeld and Bray, and settled in suburban Waldorf, MD.

Jimmy was diagnosed with ALS soon after, at the age of 28. The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS is a tribute to the life of Squirrel, which each year brings together Jimmy's friends, family, former teammates and classmates.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to participate in the 5-mile run and 2.5-mile walk that begins with registration at 8 a.m.

The 2.5-mile fitness walk starts at 9 a.m. followed by the 5-mile run at 10 a.m. Childrens' races begin at 11 a.m.

The cost is $25 for registrations and can be made online at coolruning.com or at theangelfund.org

All participants will receive a race t-shirt. Numbers will not be mailed prior to the race. Pre-registered participants can pick up their numbers at the pre-registered table on the day of the event.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments, and awards for competitive runners in all divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates, and other awards, as well as raffle prizes.

For registration information, or for further information please call Rich (Ratt) Kennedy (781) 383-6008, or email him at tytaylin@aol.com.

The Standing Broad Jump was won by Point's Nick Tran with a jump of 8' 5". Broad Meadows' duo of Stephen Gallant and Kendry Duran followed along with Elijah Eno, Zach Taylor and Grant Murphy all from Atlantic in the winners' circle. The middle school track coaches and athletic directors would like to thank every one of the volunteers who helped with the events and of course the participants for a tremendous track season.

'Ride The Beaches' Saturday

Quincycles invites the public to their "Ride the Beaches" bike ride on Saturday, June 10.

Participants have a choice of doing a longer ride, starting at 7:15 a.m. at Anderson Bicycle (380 Washington St., Quincy), or a shorter ride, starting at 9:30 a.m. at the Kennedy Center (440 E. Squantum St., Quincy).

The longer ride, which covers approximately 22 of Quincy's 27-mile coast, begins in Quincy Point and hugs the shoreline, taking riders from the Point to Germantown, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, and Merrymount before heading down Quincy Shore Drive to join up with riders participating in the shorter beaches ride.

The pace for the longer ride will be about 12 mph with minimal stopping.

The shorter ride, approximately eight miles, will be a more relaxed ride around the coast of Squantum, including the Nickerson Post, Marina Bay, Commander Shea, and Squantum Point Park. If you are driving to the Kennedy Center, park in the Hummock lot across the street.

The beaches ride ends at about 11 a.m. at Marina Bay, where riders can enjoy a lunch by Gaveston Cafe with support from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

Quincycles rides are free and open to the public.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy. More information about the group and the full schedule of rides can be found on their website at www.Quincycles.org. Review the ride guidelines posted on the site before participating and check Quincycles Facebook page for weather related updates.

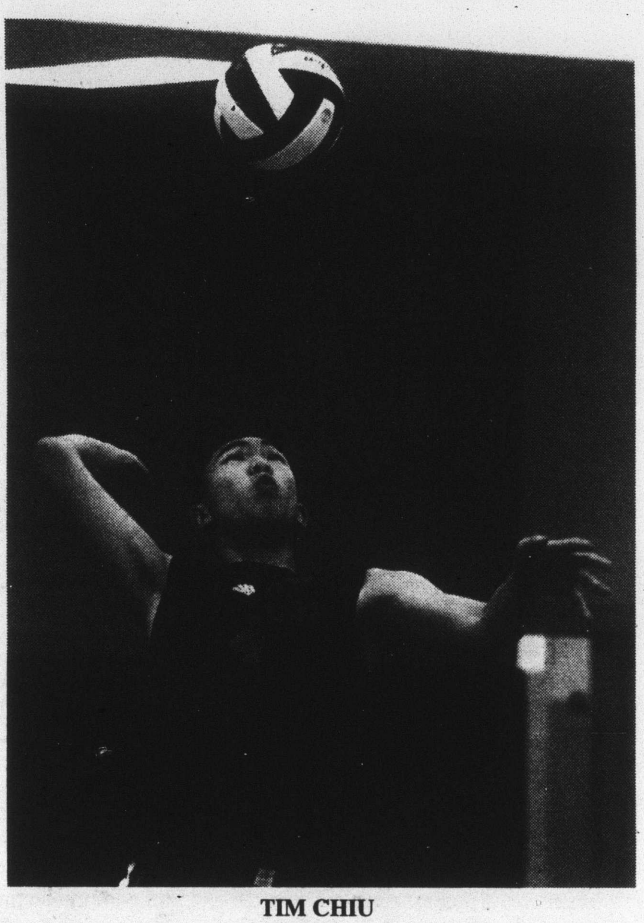
NQ Volleyball Falls To #1 Needham, Finishes At 11-9

By JOE REARDON

An hour before the start of its South quarterfinal matchup against No. 1 seed Needham, the North Quincy volleyball team sat in a circle on the Rockets' gym floor, stretching and joking.

After all, there was no reason for Jason Cai's No. 8 seeded club to be nervous. The Red Raiders had a monumental task in front of them against the undefeated Rockets and in all likelihood North Quincy was playing in the final match of its enormously successful season

The Red Raiders (11-9) weren't able to penetrate the big three of Will Nowlan, Jack Cruickshank and Cam Robins, but did make the first two games interesting. North Quincy led briefly in those games, but lost its focus in the third on the way to a 3-0 loss May 31. Alex Pham (nine digs, four assists), Gary Liang (three assists, three digs) and Chris Nguyen (four kills, four digs) all played well in the team's season finale.



TIM CHIU

Needham ran out to a lead in the first game with some timely blocks at the net and the ability to drop in kill shots against the Red Raiders. Trailing 11-8, North Quincy went on a quiet 4-0 run behind a Jimmy Huynh block to take a brief lead, 12-11.

The Rockets came back immediately to take the lead for good, but the Red Raiders did a strong job in sticking around and making it an interesting opener. Nguyen had a pair of kills in the stretch while Ilan Valencius also garnered a kill point.

North Quincy got off to a fast start in the second contest with Tim Chiu making some booming balls over the net. The Rockets continued to extend their lead on the way to the win.

The Red Raiders weren't able to challenge the Rockets in Game 3, despite taking an early 4-3 advantage. It was all Needham after that as Robins had four booming kills on the front lane.

Cai knew pretty well that his Red Raiders would need a supreme effort in the third game to avoid a sweep, but the Rockets' big men proved to be to much for the Raiders.

Despite the loss, Cai has plenty of reasons to be happy with the season and knowledge that the entire roster will be back next year.

"They're the top seed and one of the best teams in the state - one of the top three or four," Cai said. "My team came in and played tough the entire way. We were playing tough early. They're a good team and they can serve hard."

"Once we got past the midway of the third game, we started making mistakes," Cai said. "You always want to win. When we had the ball we just tried to find a way to score points. They're very tall and strong up front. We tried to find a way to get points. Our last win was against Durfee. The team finished 14-7. They're one of the top teams in the state - top three top four."

North Quincy beat Durfee for the third time this season in the game heading into the showdown against Needham, but there wasn't much carry over.

"They kind of lost their focus in the third game," said Cai. "But really they just need to play hard. The win will come to you."

NQ Tennis Trending Up

By TOM JOYCE

The North Quincy High girls' tennis team is in the midst of an uphill climb.

They wrapped up their season on June 1 as they took a 4-1 loss to King Philip Regional in the first round of the MIAA Division 1 South playoff bracket. It marked the end of their 12-7 year, and they put up that strong record despite being one of the younger teams around.

"I'm just really proud of the girls," Red Raiders Head Coach Francesca Quintero said. "They worked really hard in the offseason to come into this year strong and I give all the credit to them on that."

The Red Raiders, who earned a No. 12 seed in the playoffs, also had a surge late in the regular season. In the final week, they played five matches in five days, and they won all of them. First, they beat Quincy High, 5-0, on May 22. A day later, they played Pembroke twice and beat them 4-1 both times. The day after their Pembroke bouts, they topped Milton, 4-1, and they wrapped up that streak with a 5-0 win over Fontbonne Academy on May 26.

Of course with just one senior on their roster for the second year in the row, the Red Raiders are starting to see the benefits of their rebuild. For them, making it to the playoffs and building that experience in itself made it a successful year.

"It was great to be in it," Quintero said. "It was a huge achievement for the program, especially for a young team. I thought we played well and competed hard and to the best of their ability. Everyone fought hard all year long."

As aforementioned, the Red Raiders only had one senior on their team in this go-around, Tianettie McKee, who played on their first doubles team.

"It's still a big loss for us," Quintero said of losing McKee. "She's been a big part of the team these past couple years and not having her presence on our team will be tough next year."

On the first doubles team, McKee was paired with freshman Britney Zheng, who also had a strong year.

Another freshman who impressed for the Red Raiders this year was Lydia Chan, who is their first singles player. She went 14-5 in her bouts and had her team's lone win (1-6, 6-4, 7-5) in their five matchups in their playoff match against King Philip.

"She was under a lot of pressure and it was a big responsibility for her, but she thrived in that situation," Quintero said of Chan. "She's got a great work ethic and I think it really spread to everyone on the team because of that."

Looking at the Raiders' lineup, they have plenty of reasons to be confident in themselves next season. Their junior captains, Jade Tang and Sydney Ly, will be in their final years with the program next year, and the two made a formidable duo as the second doubles team this year. In addition to Chang in singles, sophomores Kayli Wu and Qian Yi Weng competed hard for the Red Raiders.

On top of her players developing their skills, Quintero said another positive of this year was the intangibles the players brought to the team.

"The camaraderie between the girls this year was really good," Quintero said. "We had great team chemistry, which was awesome and we have a group who believes in themselves. We're really excited for next year."

Future Bright For Red Raider Boys Tennis

By TOM JOYCE

If this season was any indication, then the future is bright for the North Quincy boys' tennis team.

On June 1, the Red Raiders' season came to an end when they took a 4-1 loss to King Philip in the first round of the Division 1 South playoffs. They finished the year at 10-9 and it was first playoff appearance since 2004, which made it a major achievement for a program who won a combined three matches in the 2014 and 2015 seasons.

"They were extremely ecstatic," Head Coach Matt Ramponi said of his team making the playoffs. "Just to be able to see a group of kids be able to do that after they worked so hard in the offseason is special. Their maturity is second to none and they truly embody what it means to be a student athlete. It's an honor to be able to coach these guys."

Thanks to the Red Raiders' strong year, three of their players earned Patriot League All-Star nods: freshman first singles player Shane Lerkvikran and doubles players Brigham McKee, a senior, and Adam Tlacoxolal-chua, a sophomore.

McKee and fellow senior Li Chen were the team's captains this past season; they were the lone two seniors on the team.

"I could go on and on about them and the great attitude they brought to the mix," Ramponi said of the two seniors. "We'll definitely miss them next year."

Despite the loss of two strong players, the future is still bright for the Red Raiders. In order to replace the two outgoing seniors, the Red Raiders will most likely slide up Jason Zheng and Jason Chen up from JV onto varsity. Ramponi said the two worked hard over the course of the season and played well in their matches.

In the Red Raiders' playoff loss to King Philip, Lerkvikarn was the only player to win his individual match, taking 3 hours and 15 minutes to win the bout.

"I haven't seen athletes who compete at that level who are able to play with the sort of raw emotion these guys show," Ramponi said. "In other sports, you see guys get frustrated and it breaks them. These guys will rise to the occasion, channel that emotion and thrive under that pressure, not crumble."

Sophomore Alex Atanassov who also plays football and basketball, was the Red Raiders' second singles player this year, and Ramponi said he sees a bright future for him.

Ramponi also said Daniel Chen, a junior, who was a part of the second doubles team this year, has worked hard and come a long way in a short time. Another junior who stepped up for the Red Raiders this season was Shangbin Wu, who played third singles. Wu, who is not a native English speaker, worked hard and practiced with the team as a freshman and sophomore, but was not academically eligible to compete in matches until this season.

Albeit their season came to a close, it does not mean Ramponi's players are done playing the sport for the year.

"It's funny, you drive by the courts a few days after the season ends and you see four of your kids playing, already working to get ready for next season," he said. "The great thing about tennis too is they can practice it alone and practice hitting up against a wall, but then they can also play with friends. And these kids have developed some great friendships with one another through tennis, which is cool to see."

Marina Bay Fire Believed Not Suspicious

By SCOTT JACKSON

A two-alarm fire at a partially completed apartment building in Marina Bay Sunday afternoon remains under investigation but does not appear to be suspicious, Quincy's fire chief said Monday morning.

The fire at 552 Victory Road was called in at 2:14 p.m. Sunday, according to Fire Chief Joseph Barron. The fire was located in one of the two buildings that comprise Meriel Marina Bay, a 352-unit luxury apartment complex with 17,000 square feet of retail space.

The fire started outside the rear side of the building in a pile of construction materials and spread to a first-floor balcony, Barron said. The building is partially occupied with its sprinkler system in service, and that sprinkler system was able to contain the fire.

"It spread to the balcony where an outdoor sprinkler kept it in check," Barron said.

The fire reached two alarms and the Quincy Fire Department requested the Boston Fire Department's fireboat for assistance, but the request was cancelled because the fire was put out before the vessel could arrive. The Boston, Braintree and Weymouth Fire Departments provided coverage at Quincy's firehouses while firefighters were on scene. The scene was cleared shortly before 9 p.m. Sunday.

Barron said the fire caused a low amount of damage. No injuries were reported.

Nineteen of the apartments in the 150-unit building are currently occupied, and those residents were able to return home Sunday. A fire watch was posted on site until the sprinkler system was put back in service.

The cause of the fire remained under investigation as of Monday morning, but Barron said it did not appear suspicious.

"There is no indication it is suspicious," he said.

OBITUARIES

Janet Sharry, 83

A memorial service for Janet (Bryant) Sharry, 83, of Quincy was held June 1 in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Sharry died May 27 at Southwood at Norwell Nursing Center.

She was born on July 1, 1933, in Boston and was raised and lived most of her life in the Merrymount neighborhood of Quincy. She graduated from Quincy High School in 1951 and was a homemaker until her children were grown. She then worked at South Shore Bank.

Mrs. Sharry was a prolific painter and enjoyed gardening, shopping, and dining out. She loved the ocean and spent many summers at the family's vacation home in Harwich Port. Mrs. Sharry was passionate about animals; she had cats and dogs throughout her life and supported animal welfare charities. She had a great sense of humor and loved to talk about politics and current events.

Her late father, Milton Bryant, was a captain in the Merchant Marines and her late mother, Janet, worked at Quincy City Hospital. Her husband of 26 years, John W. Sharry, was an attorney in Quincy. She is survived by her son, John Sharry, and his wife, Kathy, of Braintree; daughter, Kim Palmer, and her husband, Bill, of Raynham; and daughter, Maura Sharry, and her husband, Gary Gamboa, of Cohasset along with eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Predeceased by her sisters, Ruth Geller and Margaret Holland, and her brother, George Bryant.

Private interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 30 Reservoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370.

Linda B. Rheaume, 46

A funeral Mass for Linda B. (Cooke) Rheaume, 46, of Quincy and Marshfield, was celebrated June 2 in St. Christine's Church, Marshfield.

Mrs. Rheaume died from cancer at her home in Marshfield on May 29 with her husband Charlie by her side and surrounded by her loving family.

She was predeceased by her parents, William P. and Sandra M. (Smith) Cooke and a brother, William J. Cooke. She leaves her siblings Sandy, David, and Susan Cooke, all of Quincy, Wendy Paluzzi and her husband Anthony of Plymouth, many nieces, nephews, in-laws, and dear friends.

Mrs. Rheaume graduated from North Quincy High School and worked for the Untied States Postal Service for 20 years. She was an amazing cook and loved to bake. Mrs. Rheaume en-

Chester W. French

A memorial service for Chester Ward French will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday in Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy,

Mr. French died on May 28, finally finding peace after enduring a long illness.

He was born on Oct. 24, 1941, the son of the late Chester and Violet French. Mr. French graduated from Concord High School, served in the United States Navy, and was self-employed as an engineer and later owned his own bagel shop where he took pride in experimenting with new and exotic flavors. He was a member of the Faith Lutheran Church and of the Quincy Rural Lodge of Freemasons, where he served as master for two years.

Mr. French is survived by his devoted wife, Julia, and their three children: Timothy (Dorienne) of Norton, Thomas (Jocelyn) of Bridgewater, and Roseann Sguelia of Schaghticoke, New York – as well as his two precious grandchildren, Peyton and Autumn. He has also left behind three siblings: Judy Sepka of Florida and Nancy Vespa and Wendy Conrado of Vermont.

There will be a Masonic service at 10 a.m. Saturday in the church garden (in the church if raining) for anyone who wishes to attend.

The family would like to thank the staff at Webster Park for their care in making Mr. French's stay as comfortable as possible. They would also like to thank Pastor Heidi Johnston for her ongoing support.

Memorial donations may be made to the Faith Lutheran Church Memorial Fund, 201 Granite St., Quincy, MA 02169 or the Webster Park Rehabilitation & Healthcare Center, 56 Webster St., Rockland, MA 02370.

A funeral Mass for Anne T. (O'Sullivan) Madden, 94, a 60-year Wollaston resident, will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Madden died June 3.

She was a graduate of St. Patrick's High School in Dorchester and after marriage attended Quincy Junior College. Before marrying, she worked at the accounting department at Standard Brands in Boston. Once married, she devoted herself to raising her family as a loving mother. Mrs. Madden had many happy memories of summers spent with her children, extended family and friends at Mascoma Lake in New Hampshire. She greatly enjoyed the water, swimming and becoming an accomplished water skier. After raising her family, she was employed at the South Shore Bank accounting department in Quincy. In her retirement, she enjoyed life with her family from her home in Wollaston until she passed.

Mrs. Madden was an avid reader with an active mind and a great interest in current events. She loved to read the newspaper and discuss the world with those around her. She loved music – Irish, opera, classical – along with a particular devotion to Nelson Eddy and Jeannette MacDonald. She also enjoyed traveling, going to Hawaii, Ireland, England, Spain, France, and Germany. She particularly enjoyed taking her entire family on a cruise to Bermuda.

Charles E. Colby, 84

A celebration of life service for Charles Edwin Colby, 84, was held Monday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

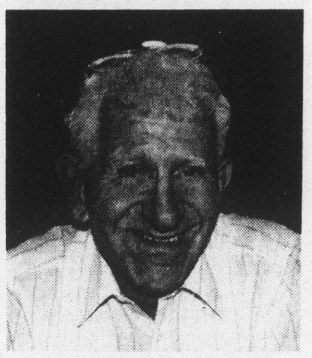
Mr. Colby died suddenly on May 29.

He was born in Tilton, N.H., the only child of Evelyn and Richard Colby. He graduated from North Quincy High School in 1951 and attended Chamberlayne Jr. College before being drafted into the United States Army. He was stationed in France, where he worked as an ambulance driver. He met and quickly fell in love with his wife Mary in 1957. They married in 1958, and were blessed with five beautiful children. Their first child, Katherine, was born in 1959, and was followed in quick succession by Michael, Charles Jr., Linda, and Susan.

Mr. Colby spent most of his professional life employed at Pneumatic Scale in Quincy. During his time at Pneumatic, he served as the president of Union Local 444 for 15 years; this sparked a love of local politics and a desire to serve his community.

He served on the Board of Directors for the Greater Boston Manufacturing Partnership and the Quincy Community Action Corps; was on the advisory board for the Center for Technical Education and South Shore Vocational Technical School; was a member of the Ward 6 Democratic Committee in the City of Quincy; served as president for the Self-Help for Hard of Hearing Boston Group; was vice chairman to the Hard of Hearing Subcommittee for the Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing; and was the president of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Career Development and Marketing Association. In recent years, Mr. Colby volunteered as a labor history teacher at Quincy High School, to help instill the importance of collective organizing in the next generation.

After Pneumatic Scale closed in 1995, Mr. Colby pursued a second career as a job developer with Joint Action and Community Service Inc. (JACS) in Boston, where he worked with local at-risk youth to help them overcome obstacles and enter the workforce. For his work in this role, and his influence on the community, Mr. Colby was recognized by the Massachusetts State Senate who declared him JACS Regional Volunteer of the year in 1999, the Massachusetts AFL/CIO who grant a scholarship in his name, and City of Quincy who decreed July 20, 1999, "Charles Colby Day."



CHARLES E. COLBY

Even well after retirement, Mr. Colby continued to be an active member in his community. He was a proud member of the Moakley Scholarship Board. He was an avid reader, with an insatiable intellectual curiosity. He loved bowling, playing cribbage, and was an enthusiastic amateur photographer, participating in the South Shore Camera club until his death.

Mr. Colby was a devoted father and grandfather, a loving husband, and a force in his community. He is survived and sorely missed by his family. Beloved husband of 59 years to Mary A. (Malo) Colby. Cherished father of Kathy Franchi and her husband PJ of East Bridgewater, Michael Colby and his wife Christine of Brockton, Charles E. Colby, Jr. and wife Ann of Whitman, Linda Montaya and her husband David of Norwell and Susan Fiasconaro and her husband Robert of Quincy. Devoted grandfather to his 18 grandchildren Eric, Brian, Angela, Elizabeth, and Jillian; Megan, Christa, and Thomas; Samantha, Alex, and Rachel; Chris, Jake, and Jesse; and Alyssa, Robbie, Ryan, and Corey.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

ing in school, they're going to hopefully start learning about the dangers of substance use. If we catch them at an early age, hopefully we can prevent a lot of them from going down that line," she stated. "We're very excited about that."

The new curriculum will be rolled out starting next year, Martin said. CESAR's doctors will be training the city's science teachers on the new curriculum, and the lesson plan will be able to change as needed.

Martin is also working with health care providers in the city and the school system to create a support group for children who have parents or other family members with a substance-use disorder.

"As an individual who has been affected by substance-use disorder and lost a loved one, I know that oftentimes some of the people in the family are the ones who are forgotten about," said Martin, whose brother died from an overdose in 2004.

"I was lucky enough to have a great, supportive family that was able to help me through, but a lot of our residents don't have that."

In addition, Martin is working with the Park Department and the city's youth sports leagues, and hopes to host educational forums on substance use with participants in those leagues.

"It's something we hope to offer to parents, coaches and players," she said. "That will be a free resource offered for anyone who is interested and I'll be working on that throughout the summer in collaboration with some of our educational partners."

Martin wants to offer similar forums for families who participate in activities other than sports as well.

"Substance use doesn't just affect sports teams – there are kids in drama, band, any sort of extra curricular activity," she said. "There should be informational nights for other kids in extracurricular activities, so hopefully we can help make that work."

Martin has also worked with Manet Community Health Center to put together a resource guide for first responders – the Quincy Fire and Police Departments, as well as Brewster Ambulance – to give out when responding to an overdose.

The resource guide provides a list of 20 detoxification centers, including ones as far away as Falmouth, Fall River and Worcester, plus the phone number for the Massachusetts substance abuse hotline, information on Section 35 civil commitments, support groups and training on the overdose-reversing drug Narcan.

The resource guide will be updated on a monthly basis to ensure those looking for help have the most up-to-date information possible.

Manet and Quincy police officers are also now performing "overdose visits" after Narcan is used to provide information on treatment options with the goal of getting people help. Martin hopes to work with Quincy Medical Center to expand that program.

"I'm going to be meeting with Steward to discuss ways in which we can have a more effective way of getting people into treatment immediately after the overdose," she said. "As anyone knows, with a substance user the best time to get them is when they are vulnerable and they've just seen their life flash before their eyes, which is in the emergency room."

Councillor Noel DiBona had introduced a resolution earlier this year seeking hearings on the topic of substance use. He plans to hold several others in the future, during which representatives from the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, the Norfolk County district attorney's and sheriff's offices, and the public will be invited to speak.

"This was a long-overdue discussion needed at the council level," DiBona said. "This is the first of several hearings we will have."

Councillor Joseph Finn said the opioid epidemic is one that needs to be taken seriously by the community because it impacts families from all walks of life.

"Kids my kids grew up playing baseball with have died of overdoses. Many of us still know active users," he said. "The reality of addiction is it's not a moral failing – it's a disease, it's an illness, it's a medical problem. The truth is it affects the best of families that are out there."

Council Approves $299 Million Budget

other new positions: A junior traffic engineer, an assessor specializing in commercial property, an IT technician, and a Park Department laborer. The budget also promotes the Planning Department's Rob Stevens from urban renewal planner to assistant planning director; his former position will not be filled.

Before voting on the overall budget, the council voted on the budget for the Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain had placed the vote on the TPAL budget on hold during a committee meeting May 24 because he was concerned department head Mike Coffey did not have plans to address traffic and parking concerns facing the city.

Coffey, in response to those concerns, emailed councillors a list of goals and objectives the department has for the upcoming fiscal year. Cain thanked Coffey for providing the list, but said he expected more concrete answers to how the city plans to address several major traffic concerns – including the impending closure of the Wollaston MBTA station for renovations and the work going on in Quincy Center.

"I'll be very much on you to try to move these things forward," Cain said. "Thanks for putting this together at the very, very least, but I do expect a lot more."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall said he often hears about traffic and parking issues from residents, whether he is out shopping at a supermarket, at the gym or at dinner with his wife. He

Quincy Students Advance to NE District Championship in Robotics Competition

Andrew Trebika, Robert Largey, Robert Pittman, Colman Gillis and Samuel Danby of Quincy, students at Boston College High School, and members of BC High's Robotics team, Schrödinger's Cat, have much to celebrate. For the first time in BC High Robotics team history, a "blue banner" was awarded for a victory in the finals at the Greater Boston District Event at Revere High School.

Points earned at this event have propelled the team up to #11 in New England of 190 teams, ensuring another first: a seat at the District Championship Event. The team provided the audience plenty of drama as it overcame several technical and strategic obstacles.

The team celebrated a number of additional awards:

The White Glove Team Award – where the students control all phases of the design and build seasons. At least five students were required to fill out a survey at the event. Schrödinger's Cat was one of two teams to receive the award at this event.

MEMBERS OF THE ROBOTICS TEAM at BC High School, including students from Quincy, will head to the N.E. District Championship Event.

The Imagery Award – celebrates attractiveness in engineering and outstanding visual aesthetic integration from the machine to team appearance. The judges had this to say of our team: "This team is loud and proud. Not only do they cheer and support their team, but their energy is unwavering for their alliance partners as well. Blindingly bright outfits, as well as creative chants, this team is the cat's meow."

said the department did not do enough in its first year of existence to address those issues.

"I don't want to be overly critical, but I don't know how much we've really moved the ball in a year," Croall said. "I think there is a tremendous amount of work left to do."

Councillors approved the TPAL budget in a 5-3 vote. Cain voted against it, joined by Councillors Joseph Finn and Nina Liang. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci did not vote on the TPAL budget.

The TPAL budget will increase from $2.5 million in FY17 to $2.8 million in FY18, including funding for a second junior traffic engineer. The department presently has a traffic engineer and one junior engineer.

Koch had proposed giving the department an additional $191,000, which would have put its budget past the $3 million mark, Monday. The council did not consider that request for additional funding, however, because it was not properly advertised before hand.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Recently obtained information could open a new opportunity for a career change. But temper that Arian impatience and act on it only when all the facts are made available.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're moving into a more active cycle. So put your ideas back on the table, where they'll be given the attention they deserve. Expect a favorable change in your love life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A friend might ask for a favor that you feel would compromise your values. Best advice: Confront him or her and explain why you must say no. A true friend will understand.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A relationship continues to develop along positive lines. Meanwhile, a brewing job situation could create complications for one of your pet projects. Look into it right away.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your interest in a co-worker's project could lead to a profitable experience for you both. But before you agree to anything, be sure to get all your legal I's dotted and T's crossed.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful whose counsel you take about a possible long-distance move. Some advice might not necessarily be in your best interest. Stay focused on your goals.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone might try to complicate efforts in an attempt to work out that confusing job situation. But don't let that keep you from sticking with your decision to push for a resolution.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A disagreement on how to handle a family problem could create more trouble for all concerned. Look for ways to cool things down before they boil over.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unexpected change in long-standing workplace procedure and policy could provide a new career target for the Archer to aim at. Start making inquires.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're finally able to get back into the swing of things, as those temporary doldrums begin to lift. Expect some surprising disclosures from a new colleague.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your innate sense of justice to see you through a dilemma involving a family member. Other relatives who've stood back soon will come forward as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend seems to be pushing you to take risks -- financial or otherwise. Best advice: Don't do it. They might have a hidden agenda that hasn't surfaced yet.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to see new places and meet new people. Have you considered working for an airline or cruise-ship company?

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Tyler Henry, the E! channel's "Hollywood Medium," was at a press junket with Tanya Callau, widow of "Growing Pains" star Alan Thicke (whom Henry had taped a reading with for his May 31 show). The first question asked of Callau concerned the lawsuit filed by Thicke's two sons, Brennan and Robin Thicke, contesting Alan's will. This was news to her!

She excused herself, made some calls and quickly returned to the press session. Apparently, Thicke left his children shares in his ranch, 75 percent of his personal effects and 60 percent of his remaining estate. He left Tanya the ranch furnishings, 25 percent of his personal effects, a $500,000 life-insurance policy, all his death pensions and 40 percent of his remaining estate. She and Thicke had a prenup, which she feels is invalid now, but his kids think it should stand.

Many of your favorite shows will not return next season. CBS has canceled "Two Broke Girls" (after six seasons), "The Odd Couple," "Criminal Minds: Beyond Borders," "The Great Indoors," "Doubt" and "Pure Genius." NBC has axed "Emerald City" (dark and confusing) and "The Blacklist Redemption" (which couldn't work without James Spader). ABC has canceled "Last Man Standing" (after six seasons), "American Crime," "Dr. Ken," "The Real O'Neals," "The Catch" and "Imaginary Mary" (loved Rachel Dratch but found her voice an intrusion).

Next season, CBS will have the "Big Bang Theory" spin-off, "Sheldon," narrated by Jim Parsons as Sheldon, with Iain Armitage (of "Big Little Lies") playing Sheldon at age 9; "Criminal Minds"; Shemar Moore in "Seal Team"; and Jeremy Piven top-lining "Wisdom of the Crowd."

NBC has "Good Girls," with Retta and Matthew Lillard; "The Brave," with Anne Heche (about undercover military heroes); "Reverie," with Dennis Haybert; "Rise" with Josh Radnor and Rosie Perez; the eight episode mini-series "Law & Order: True Crime, The Menendez Murders"; the 10 episode reboot of "Will & Grace"; and the return of Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Celebrity Apprentice" in January.

ABC has "The Good Doctor," with "Bates Motel's" Freddie Highmore (exec produced by "Hawaii 5-0" star Daniel Kim); "The Mayor" with Lea Michele ("Glee") and Yvette Nicole Brown (late of "The Odd Couple"); "Ten Days in the Valley," with "The Closer" star Kyra Sedgwick; "Gospel of Kevin," with Jason Ritter and Cristela Alonzo; "Marvel's Inhumans"; and an untitled Zach Braff comedy.

FOX has "The Gifted" (an "X-Men" series), with "True Blood's" Stephen Moyer; the sci-fi "The Orville," created, produced, written and starring Seth MacFarlane; and "Ghosted," with Craig Robinson and Adam Scott. If the current political situations prevail, MSNBC and CNN will have all the drama and comedy I need and can handle!

Collecting

by Larry Cox

Q: I have acquired a collection of about 35 video discs, including features that were issued by both RCA and 20th Century Fox. How much do you think they are worth, and where can I sell them? – E.L., New Hampshire

A: Capacitance Electronic Discs or CEDS were popular during the 1980s and were first marketed by RCA. CEDs were grooved vinyl discs that allowed consumers to watch feature films in their homes. The quality was fairly good, but the system soon was overshadowed by tape formats. Video discs quickly became yet another dinosaur of our technical age.

A quick check revealed that video discs are of little interest to collectors, probably due to the fact that special equipment is required to view them. I found several thousand discs available on eBay, most selling in the $4 to $10 range. Fairly typical were 10 features, including "M*A*S*H" and "Fiddler on the Roof," all for $10. An exception was the "Star Wars" trilogy, offered for $42.

Q: I have a bound copy of Peterson's Magazine from 1870. How much do you think it is worth? – Caroline, Los Lunas, New Mexico

A: Charles Peterson began his magazine in Philadelphia in 1842 and it continued until 1898. The publication began as "Ladies National Magazine," later as "Lady's World" and eventually as simply "Peterson's." It was a fashion magazine that also included recipes, lace patterns, parlor games, household hints and even house plans. The hand-colored fashion plates were an attempt to bring the latest Paris clothing lines to American women and are especially collectible.

I found a bound copy of Peterson's Magazine from 1870 available online for $60. According the price guide in "Vintage Magazines," by Richard Russell and Elaine Gross Russell and published by Krause Books, an 1871 volume is valued at $65.

Q: I have several albums of bicentennial stamps issued by The Franklin Philatelic Society. How much are they worth? – Ruth, New Mexico

A: Most Franklin issues are difficult to sell in the secondary marketplace because its "instant collectibles" were churned out by the millions. I checked several online auction companies and there doesn't seem to be much interest or demand.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was contemporary American poet and essayist Rita Dove who made the following sage observation: "If only the sun-drenched celebrities are being noticed and worshiped, then our children are going to have a tough time seeing the value in the shadows, where the thinkers, probers and scientists are keeping society together."

* A Turkish man once won a bet by eating an entire barbecued lamb. He won 6 British pounds – about $7 – but he never had a chance to spend it. Ten minutes after finishing the meal, he dropped dead.

* Those who study such things say that, pound for pound, the human body produces more heat than the sun.

* There was a time when the only people in the world who knew how to make mirrors were Venetian glassblowers. Their skill was so valuable that those with the knowledge lived as virtual prisoners (albeit privileged ones). And anyone caught spying on their methods was put to death.

* Just three months after his wedding, a New Zealand man named Aleki Taumoepeau lost his wedding ring when it slipped off his finger into the ocean. Unprepared for diving at that time, he marked the rough spot on a chart and vowed he would come back and find it – despite unpredictable currents and the fact that there are no landmarks on the ocean. It was a year before he could arrange to go back to the spot with the proper gear, but after just an hour of diving, he saw something bright shining from the bottom and found the ring.

* The term "IOU" originally came about as an abbreviation for "I owe unto."

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* If you have trouble telling black slacks from navy, here's a tip from L.B in Iowa: "Put one small safety pin inside the front waistband of the black, and two small safety pins in the navy pair. This also shows the front at a glance, and in case of emergency, you have a pin to use."

* "Dried out glue? Add a little vinegar and let it set a few days." – C.J. in Idaho

* N.B. in Wisconsin clips puzzles out of his local paper and takes them to his local copy shop to get enlarged. Then he saves them to do with the grandkids when they visit. "They sure do love to come to Grandad's house," he says.

* "Wrap the lint from your dryer in 6 inches of wax paper. Roll it up and squish both ends. Now you have a perfect firestarter!" – M.K. in Michigan

* S.B. in Minnesota has this tip to keep metal skewers at the ready: "Instead of digging through my drawer looking for my skewers, here is how I keep them together. After you wash them and they are completely dry, wrap them in a piece of press-and-seal plastic wrap. The next time you need to use your skewers, they are in one place, neatly wrapped together."

* If you have teens, they can help out by being responsible for dinner one night a week. This will teach them to be independent and let them make a contribution to the household. The bonus is that it's one less night parents have to prep and plan!

Flag Day Parade, Celebration, Fireworks Saturday

of this recognition," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who is chairman of the Flag Day Committee and the son of the Flag Day Parade founder and the award's namesake, Richard J. Koch.

At Saturday's ceremony, the Flag Day Committee will also present a special recognition to automobile dealer Daniel Quirk, whose contributions over the years have helped to maintain and expand the event's signature fireworks display – which is widely known as among the largest in the region outside of Boston's annual July 4th fireworks.

"Dan Quirk is the personification of what it means to be a corporate citizen," Koch said. "His constant generosity has been huge reason why Flag Day has not only continued but thrived and grown."

The Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration is the longest-running of its kind in America, and Mayor Koch noted that a fireworks display already known as one of the best outside of Boston will be "turned up even a few more notches this year."

The parade consists of specialty units ranging from fire units, Army National Guard vehicles, and community organizations. Some of the best marching bands throughout the state march the parade route playing everyone's favorite patriot songs as impressive floats carrying very special guests follow the sound of music.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade has devoted itself to instilling patriotism and pride in our youth. Each year, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters highlight the event as they march down Hancock Street side by side with their youth organization.

The 1.5 mile parade steps-off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Coddington and Hancock Streets and proceeds north on Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field.

The celebration portion of the evening held at Pageant Field following the parade consists of the flag raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, a patriotic medley, and presentation of awards to the parade grand marshal and the recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award.

2017 - 098

Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee of the Quincy City Council to be passed at a later date:

An Ordinance Relative to Minimum Living Space Per Dwelling

WHEREAS, over-population in small areas can lead to unsanitary and unhealthy conditions; and

WHEREAS, disease and illness are known to spread faster in over-populated areas and over-crowded dwellings;

WHEREAS, substandard living arrangements have in the past been found to result in fire hazards for occupants and neighbors;

WHEREAS, over-crowded dwellings increase problems of parking, traffic, construction work, and drainage in neighborhoods;

WHEREAS, over-crowded dwellings cause increases in rodent populations due to increases in trash production;

WHEREAS, over-crowded dwellings have resulted in increased demand for municipal services such as police and health;

WHEREAS, over-crowded dwellings cause additional quality of life concerns for neighbors and abutters;

WHEREAS, the City of Quincy deems that a minimum standard of habitable space per person is in the public interest for the reasons stated above as well as others;

BE IT ORDERED, that the following sections be added to the existing City of Quincy Zoning Ordinance Title 17.

MINIMUM LIVING SPACE. No dwelling in the City of Quincy shall be permitted to house more than one person per one hundred (150) square feet of living area of said dwelling. This ordinance shall only apply to non-related individuals.

MINIMUM NATURAL LIGHT. Each dwelling room must get natural light from a window that's equal to at least 8 percent of the floor space. A unit also needs a window that can be opened to at least 4 percent of the floor space.

This Ordinance shall apply to existing dwellings after six months from the date of passage

Police Lt. Found Guilty Of Fraud, Will Be Fired

Thomas Corliss Convicted On 11 Felony Counts Of Defrauding City; Sentencing Sept. 7

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy police lieutenant was convicted on Monday of federal fraud charges for double dipping – collecting pay for his regular shifts that overlapped with paid details on multiple occasions – and will be fired.

Thomas Corliss, a 52-year-old Hanover resident, was found guilty on 10 counts of mail fraud and a single count of fraud involving federal funds Monday in the U.S. District Court in Boston. He was acquitted on two other counts of mail fraud. U.S. District Court Judge Leo T. Sorokin scheduled sentencing for Sept. 7, and Corliss will remain free until then.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said in a statement after the conviction that Corliss would be terminated.

"The mayor and Chief [Paul] Keenan have consulted, and Mr. Corliss will be terminated by the city of Quincy," he said.

Koch, in a statement following Monday's verdict, credited Keenan and the Quincy Police Department for its handling of the case.

"Every day, I am proud of the work the men and women of the Quincy Police Department do on behalf of our citizens, and today I am proud of how the department, the officers called to testify, and Chief [Paul] Keenan handled this matter. They saw a wrong, reported it, and carried it through to the end of this process in an honest, honorable and unflinching way," Koch said.

"There remains no question that the men and women of the Quincy Police Department are among the most professional and most dedicated police officers in our entire Commonwealth."

Federal prosecutors had alleged Corliss defrauded the Quincy Police Department out of $8,000 by getting paid for his regular shifts while working paid details; they also said Corliss vacationed in the Bahamas and on Martha's Vineyard but left himself on the daily roster rather than use vacation time. Prosecutors alleged Corliss submitted 12 intentionally false pay slips to the city between March and September of 2015. He was charged with one count of mail fraud for each pay slip submitted.

Corliss' defense attorneys contended their client – at one time the city of Quincy's highest-paid employee – was singled out for political reasons.

Corliss' trial lasted eight

Police Officers Receive Lifesaving Award

Members of the Quincy Police Department received the Municipal Police Training Committee's Lifesaving Award at a recent ceremony held at Bentley University.

During the snow storm of March 2017, Officers David Sansevero, Officer William Lanergan, and Sergeant Patrick Faherty responded to a report of an elderly person who had collapsed in the driveway. The elderly male was shoveling snow and appeared to have suffered a heart attack. Snow was falling at a rate of three-inches per hour and the winds were 30-40 mph. Officers used an AED [automated external defibrillator] and restored the man's heart beat. They used their coats in an attempt to keep him warm until transport. He was taken to Quincy Medical Center, where he later passed away. While the gentleman did not survive, the actions of these officers allowed his family to be with him during his final moments.

The awards are presented annually to officers across the state. This year, 120 officers from 40 police departments were honored. Keynote speaker was Dan Bennett, Secretary of the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security.

Rockland Motorcyclist Killed In Quincy Crash

By SCOTT JACKSON

Massachusetts State Police are investigating a fatal collision that killed a 26-year-old Rockland man Sunday morning on Interstate 93 in Quincy.

State Police were called to the crash, which took place prior to Exit 8, around 9:20 a.m. Sunday.

Preliminary investigation by Trooper Michelle Sutherland of the H Troop detectives indicates that a 2010 Honda Pilot was traveling on I-93 southbound when it collided in the second travel lane with a 2007 Harley Davidson Street Glide that was also traveling on I-93 southbound.

The operator of the motorcycle, identified Monday afternoon as Francis Correa, 26, of Rockland, was pronounced dead at the scene.

The operator of the Honda was a 54-year-old Milton man.

The cause of the crash remains under investigation.

Trooper Sutherland is being assisted in this investigation by the State Police Collision Analysis and Reconstruction Section, the State Police Crime Scene Services Section. Also assisting on scene were members of Quincy Fire Department, Brewster EMS, the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner and MassDOT.

FACETED TEARDROPS

If you fancy the look of a teardrop-shaped gemstone that has triangular facets over its entire surface, look no further than the "briolette." This elegant cut likely dates back to the time of the Crusades. Since then, briolettes have been included in everything from crown jewels to the personal collection of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. During the early 17th century, briolettes were all the rage, as the clear gemstones came to represent the opulence of chandeliers seen at aristocratic social events. Today, diamond, amethyst, aquamarine, and peridot briolettes are showing up on earrings, pendants hung from fine chains, and romantic necklaces. They display color and reflect light from any angle, providing a refined and elegant effect.

Briolettes work especially well as earrings and pendants because they dangle and move. This allows them to catch the light. For the latest trends in jewelry, please call 617-773-3636 or visit our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Marina Bay Ferry Service Resumes June 19

Schedule Information, Tickets Available at www.mbferry.com And Via The Ferry's Facebook Page: www.facebook.com/mbferry

The Marina Bay Ferry will return to service for a second year beginning on Monday, June 19.

Mayor Thomas Koch, Sen. John Keenan, Rep. Bruce Ayers, and Ward 6 Councillor William Harris announced June 9 that the city and state partnership with the town of Winthrop's municipally run ferry will operate for a second year from Squantum Point Park.

Schedule information and tickets are available at mbferry.com and via the ferry's Facebook page, facebook.com/mbferry.

The program will provide daily and weekend service to Rowes Wharf and the Seaport District in Boston aboard Winthrop's 73-passenger Valkyrie. The service is an extension of a pilot program launched last year as officials continue to pursue full-time, permanent water transportation from Squantum Point Park.

This year's program includes an expanded schedule based off feedback from Quincy riders last year. Local leaders cautioned that the schedule is still somewhat limited to meet Winthrop's needs.

"We're thrilled to extend the partnership with Winthrop for a second year as we continue to work together with our state partners on creating a permanent ferry service in Quincy," Koch said.

"With today's announcement of direct access to the heart of Boston, we continue efforts to unlock the great potential of water transportation for commuting, tourism and other recreational opportunities for Quincy and surrounding communities," Keenan said.

"Our continuing partnership with Winthrop is another step in the right direction in providing access to water transportation for the citizens of Quincy. There's still much work to be done, but we are making great progress," Ayers said.

"Access to water transportation holds great potential, and I'm looking forward to continuing to work on ways to expand these services in the years ahead," Harris said.

Winter storms damaged portions of the dock and ramp at Squantum Point, requiring repairs funded by the state Department of Conservation and Recreation. The full overhaul of the dock and landing area will be necessary under any plan for a larger ferry service at the site, officials said.

The MBTA this year committed to proceeding with cost analysis and business study of an expanded service from Squantum Point as well as funding an extension of Commander Shea Boulevard viewed as necessary to provide access to Squantum Point and the state-owned parking lot and dock.

DPW Water Operations Wins Another Award

Clean Water Action (CWA), a national foundation headquartered in Washington, D.C., has recognized the City of Quincy Department of Public Works with its 2017 Drinking Water Utility Leadership Award.

The award recognizes "dedicated work to protect the health and prevent harm to children and families from lead drinking water." Founded during the campaign to pass the landmark Clean Water Act in 1972, Clean Water Action has worked to win strong health and environmental protections by bringing issue expertise, solution-oriented thinking and people power to the table.

This is the third recognition received by the DPW this spring. For five consecutive years, (2011-2015) the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection has recognized the DPW with its annual Public Service Drinking Water Award. This year, the Department received the MassDEP's prestigious Regional Recognition Award "for outstanding Performance and Achievement in 2016."

The Department was also recognized by the New England Stormwater Collaborative as the premier recipient of the 2016 Stormwater Management Award presented for its educational campaign "Clean Water Is Everybody's Business." The award recognizes innovative, imaginative and inventive ways to increase awareness, funding, and political support for stormwater management programs.

"One of our primary goals is to provide safe, clean water to all of our residents and businesses, as it always has been," said DPW Commissioner Daniel Raymondi. "As commissioner, I am grateful for the tremendous success of our Lead Service Replacement Program. This important Public Works initiative, which is unmatched in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is a great opportunity for us to educate the public about the dangers of lead in our drinking water and to eliminate lead from all water service lines.

"This minimizes the presence and therefore the risk of lead in our homes. That is why our Lead Service Replacement Program is so important. This Project protects our children and improves the health of our community.

"Under Mayor Thomas P. Koch's long-standing commitment to infrastructure investments, and with the support of the City Council, the city has experienced a steady replacement of lead services over the years while keeping the water system in good repair for residents and for new businesses," Raymondi continued.

"With the support of Mayor Koch, the City Council approved a plan to replace all the lead water services and to fund the project through the MWRA's zero percent interest loan program. This timely action, outreach and education resulted in a better than 90 percent participation in the Lead Service Replacement program."

Mayor Koch said:

"I am very appreciative for the recognition that the DPW has received from Clean Water Action. Their mission to protect the environment, community and quality of life aligns with the goals of our DPW and my administration."

In presenting the award, Clean Water Action Campaigns Director Becky Smith said, "While our nation has made significant progress since the 1970s in cleaning up many of our rivers, bays and other vital water resources, we still face significant water quality and quantity challenges. It's refreshing to know that conscientious, responsible government is alive and well in Quincy."

John Gillis Served Quincy With Honor

John Gillis became City Clerk in the City of Quincy in 1959, the same year that I was elected Ward 5 city councillor. John Gillis swore me into office and since that day we became very close friends.

I was also a close friend with Violet Johnson who was in my graduating class of 1950 at Quincy High School.

John Gillis was a great city clerk. He took his duties seriously and at the same time he was extremely kind to everyone. When I became district attorney of Norfolk County, John Gillis followed me to Dedham by becoming a county commissioner of Norfolk County.

John Gillis was a truly great public servant. He served this city with great honor and he will be dearly missed by those who loved him including me.

May he rest in peace.

9. BOULEVARD, FOOT OF BEACH ST., WOLLASTON, MASS.

THIS IS A 1922 postcard view of the Wollaston Boulevard looking south with Beach Street on the right. The house on the corner, known then as The Wollaston Beach Inn, was one of the first built along here many years before the Boulevard was built in 1908. The small store attached to the left of the house was a grocery and provisions shop at the time, but served as home to many different seasonal shops over the years. That little building is now gone as is the elm tree, one of a group of trees that shaded a small beach here at the end of Beach Street in the 19th century. On the left some of the youngsters are sitting on a fence made of pipes that overlooked Sachem's Brook, which was an open waterway all the way up to the Montclair bogs. Today, the brook is piped from its source to a culvert that empties between the yacht clubs. The first seawall along here was built a few years after this picture was taken. Mayor Burgin In Bid For 3rd Term

Leaving no doubt as to his political intentions for the future, Mayor Thomas S. Burgin today issued a clear cut statement announcing his candidacy for re-election for a third term as chief executive of the city.

The statement served as the first gun formally fired for the 1938 Mayoral election, now five months away.

Three successive years of reductions in the city tax rate as well as decreases in Quincy's total valuation and bonded debt and major city construction projects since 1935, were stressed in Mayor Burgin's announcement.

PARKING METERS RECOMMENDED

The installation of parking meters on the streets of Quincy Center was recommended by a special city council committee, which has been studying the traffic regulations in the city since last March.

City Councillor Frank N. Orcott of North Quincy reported the "majority" of the special committee including himself, Councillors William W. Jenness and Edward J. Sandberg, were in favor of the installation of the meters.

The Ward Six Councillor introduced an order calling for amendments in the city ordinances to legalize the installation of the meters.

One serious blockade to the future installation of the parking meters in Quincy Center arose when City Solicitor John D. Smith told the city council that in his opinion the meters would be illegal.

PENSION ORDER VOTE CRITICIZED

Accusing the City Council of "wilting before political pressure," William M. Edmonston, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, called on Mayor Burgin to "promptly veto" the City Council order approving increased pensions for city foremen, which was passed at City Hall.

"The mayor must certainly promptly veto this about face order in which the City Council is going back on themselves and on a vote of the people of the city in which a contributory pension for city employees was approved back in 1934," Edmonston, the Taxpayers Association representative, stated.

Foreign Aid Is An Investment

Why an increased foreign aid is good for our economy?

In March 2017, a hefty cut of 31 percent to USAID and State Department Budget was proposed by the Trump Administration. While one may argue that the proposed cut would free up funds for undertaking welfare and safety measures for our own country but, what if it serves the exact opposite purpose?

A very common perception most of us hold is that the U.S. is already spending a lot on foreign aid and so, the funding should be cut down. However, in reality less than 1 percent of our federal budget is allocated to foreign aid. That's less than what most of the other developed countries are spending.

Apportioning higher budget to foreign aid is actually healthy for the growth and safety of our economy. It helps people in the developing nations transition out of poverty. When this happens, their purchasing power increases, opening up new markets for our products and thus, increasing U.S. jobs. Our top trading partners like Germany and South Korea were once recipients of U.S. foreign aid.

Often, poverty makes people turn to desperate measures, making them vulnerable to be radicalized by terrorist groups. It's no surprise that the world's poorest countries are also the most dangerous. Robert Gates, former Secretary of Defense quoted, "Development is a lot cheaper than sending soldiers." A sentiment echoed by many in the U.S. military.

So rather than slashing our foreign aid budget or imposing travel bans, helping reduce poverty will work more in our favor. As Sen. Chuck Hagel (R-NE) says, "We need to stop viewing it (foreign aid) as aid. It's an investment."

Where's the Diversity?

The recent Quincy firefighters graduation class had only one non-white graduate, and no women.

For a city that's over 20+% non-white, that's a very poor commitment to bringing diversity to the firefighting and police ranks.

And, may I add, I believe all of Quincy's departments have very, very few non-white workers.

Why are the terms "diversity", "justice", "fairness" so alien, strange, controversial in the halls of Quincy City Hall?

QCAP Recognizes Extraordinary Community Service

Rep. Tackey Chan, Barbara Morris, Rotary Club of Quincy Among Honorees At Annual Meeting

At its 52nd annual meeting April 27, the Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.'s (QCAP) Board of Directors celebrated the organization's successes and honored the achievements of community members who were exemplary in their support of QCAP's mission.

Among the honorees were state Rep. Tackey Chan, Barbara Morris, and the Rotary Club of Quincy. The ceremony was held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Among the year's accomplishments, QCAP: Served more than 22,000 individuals helping to provide economic stability and security; partnered with State Street to launch its "Pop-Up" Food Pantry, distributing food orders and services to Head Start families with small children; strengthened its Financial REACH Center, providing financial education and job coaching and placement; and QCAP was recognized by the Department of Housing & Community Development (DHCD) as one of the top performing community action agencies in Massachusetts achieving 100% of federal organizational performance standards.

"We are very proud of our achievements this past year," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's chief executive officer. "We could not have accomplished what we did without the great support and commitment of QCAP's Board, our hard-working staff, our funders and donors, and elected officials.

The Board recognized Rep. Tackey Chan with a 2017 Extra Mile Award, given to community members who go above and beyond in their support of QCAP's mission and its clients. Rep. Chan has been dedicated to ensuring that all families have equal access to opportunities regardless of income or race. Rep. Chan is an active leader in helping to promote diversity, inclusion, and the work of community action agencies.

The Board also honored Quincy resident Barbara Morris with an individual Extra Mile Award. Ms. Morris, who retired this year from the Board of Directors, has been an impassioned advocate on behalf of QCAP and the low-income residents we serve. She has brought invaluable guidance and expertise related to health care, education, and youth needs, and helped QCAP launch its Best Chef fundraising gala. Ms. Morris is active in many Boards and organizations in Quincy, including as former President of the Manet Community Health Center Board of Directors.

An organization Extra Mile Award was presented to The Rotary Club of Quincy for its service to the community and partnership and support of QCAP. The Rotary Club and each of its members are active in a number of non-profit organizations throughout Quincy, regularly hosting and contributing to fundraising events, volunteering their time and efforts, and distributing an annual scholarship to engage new generations of Quincy residents in the spirit of giving and the community. President Andrew Oatway, Esq. accepted the award on behalf of the Rotary Club.

In addition, Joan Rodeck, Child & Family Engagement Specialist with QCAP's Community Care for Kids program was presented with the Lois Craig Memorial Employee Award. Judi So Har Cheng, Ralph Gioncardi, Bethany Lyons,

Lauren Rexford, and Stacey Sutton were honored for 20 years of dedicated service to QCAP's clients.

QCAP's Board of Directors for the 2016-2017 year are as follows:

Board Officers: President Timothy P. McAloon, Esq. representing City Council President Kirsten L. Hughes, Vice President Josephine Shea representing Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Rev. Emeritus Sheldon W. Bennett representing United First Parish Church, Assistant Treasurer Geoffrey P. Wermuth, Esq. representing Murphy, Hesse, Toomey, and Lehane, and Clerk Kevin Matta representing Germantown.

Neighborhood representatives: Maureen Ayers, representing Atlantic, Paul M. Connolly representing Southwest Quincy, Thalia Gunter representing the Head Start Policy Council, Gina Johnson representing Weymouth, Shannon Shabazz representing Quincy, and Mr. Matta.

Public representatives: Michael Berry representing Councillor Margaret Laforest, Debbie Abrahams-Alves representing Councillor Brad Croall, Walter Hubley representing Councillor Ian Cain, Linda Perry representing Councillor Brian Palmucci, Stephanie Glennon representing Councillor William Harris, and Mr. McAloon and Mrs. Shea.

BETH ANN STROLLO and Timothy P. McAloon, Esq. honor Rep. Tackey Chan.

Private representatives: Judith E. Farmer representing Bank of Canton, Rosemarie McGillicuddy representing South Shore Savings Bank, Douglas W. Moseley representing Mayor Robert L. Hedlund, Town of Weymouth, James B. Murdoch, representing Stop & Shop Supermarket, Frank Poon representing Quincy Asian Resources Inc., and Rev. Bennett and Mr. Wermuth.

Donna Yang Recognized For Service To Girl Scouts, Community

Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts (GSEMA) recently recognized Donna Yang, a Quincy volunteer, for her service to girls and the community.

Yang was presented an award at GSEMA's annual Volunteer Recognition Luncheon May 20th at the Sheraton Hotel in Framingham. Approximately 66 individuals, three service units (a group of volunteers representing a town or several towns), one council committee and three partner organizations from across eastern Massachusetts were recognized for their service.

Yang received the Appreciation Pin, which recognizes volunteers who actively provide outstanding service to at least one service unit or delivery area.

In her five years as a Girl Scout volunteer, Yang has been involved in numerous roles, bringing energy and passion to her role. She has helped to raise visibility for Girl Scouting and increase the impact of her service unit in the community. She works with girls and volunteers to ensure the best possible Girl Scouting experience for all.

"Our volunteers are amazing leaders whose impact translates to more opportunities for our girls. They inspire girls to believe in themselves and try new experiences," said Patricia A. Parcellin, Chief Executive Officer, Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts. "We are privileged to have 15,000 volunteers who lead with compassion and commitment—and some with remarkable longevity. These individuals are building a legacy of service by investing in our girls and their futures."

Nominated by her peers and council staff, this volunteer has been recognized for giving service that is above and beyond the expectations of her position. All awards require one nomination, one endorsement and the approval of the Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts' Board of Directors.

Lemon Pie With Rice Chex Crust

By MARIE

Today's recipe for lemon pie is made with delicious Rice Chex Cereal and one that I have never made before. Because I like to make things easier for myself and for my readers I must confess that I made the filling following the directions on a box of lemon pudding.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

For the crust:

3 and ½ cups Rice Chex cereal finely crushed. (I put cereal in a plastic bag and crushed them use a rolling pin)

¼ cup sugar

¼ tsp cinnamon

¾ stick butter melted

Stir together cereal, sugar and cinnamon in a bowl. Then stir in melted butter and mix all ingredients until well blended.

In a 9 inch pie plate press the mixture on to the bottom and sides of pie plate using a tablespoon. Bake until crust is brown and crisp for 15 to 17 minutes. Transfer the pie plate to a wire rack and cool for 15 minutes.

Prepare the pudding according to directions. Pour over pie crust. Chill for one hour, sprinkle with lemon zest. Enjoy!!

Almond Flour Muffins

By SUSIE

Here is a very, very simple recipe that is made with just a few ingredients taken from a wonderful baker named Elena from Elena's pantry. She is on a special low carb diet and only uses almond or coconut flour for her baked goods.

This muffin is very versatile. You can add in berries or whatever you like. Basically this is a "basic" muffin recipe, just using almond flour and not wheat flour, high in protein and fiber. Make sure you get "blanched" almond flour because the unblanched is too heavy and oily. I like the Honeyville brand the best. This brand is only sold online, but worth it. It is very light and fluffy and produces a far better baked good.

RECIPE

4 ounces blanched almond flour (not almond meal) (about 1 cup)
4 ounces eggs (about 2 large eggs)
1 ounce honey (around 1 tablespoon)
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon apple cider vinegar

INSTRUCTIONS

In a medium bowl, combine almond flour and baking soda.

In a large bowl combine eggs, honey and vinegar.

Stir dry ingredients into wet, mixing until combined.

Scoop about ¼ cup of batter at a time into a paper lined muffin pan

Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes, until slightly browned around the edges

Cool in the pan for ½ hour.

Serve with butter and jam.

Free Public Tours Saturday At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road in Quincy, will be open for free tours Saturday, June 17th.

Tours will begin on the half hour and last about 40 minutes, with the last tour beginning at 2:30 p.m. The next open house is scheduled for Saturday, July 8.

The Quincy family first settled here in 1635 when Edmund Quincy I built a 2-chamber house on a grant of several hundred acres stretching from what is now Hancock Street through Wollaston. In 1686, his son Edmund Quincy II built a house quite near it, on Furnace Brook.

The house is freshly painted and the west door, newly restored with Quincy Community Preservation Committee funding, is open to the breeze. Bring a friend, come with family and think about who else stepped through that door…Judge Samuel Sewall of the Witch Trials? Benjamin Franklin? John Hancock? Abigail Quincy Smith and John Adams?

The property also features a garden with period appropriate plantins that are in full bloom.

The Quincy Homestead is listed as a National Historic Landmark and is on the National Register of Historic Places It is owned by the MA Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) and operated in partnership with the National Society of Colonial Dames in The Commonwealth of Massachusetts. (NSCDA-MA).

The homestead is located at 34 Butler Rd., on the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road, just south of Furnace Brook and the Armory.

For questions or more information on the history, the architecture, how to book private tours or even to donate, visit www.nscdama.org and on Facebook at Quincy Homestead 1686.

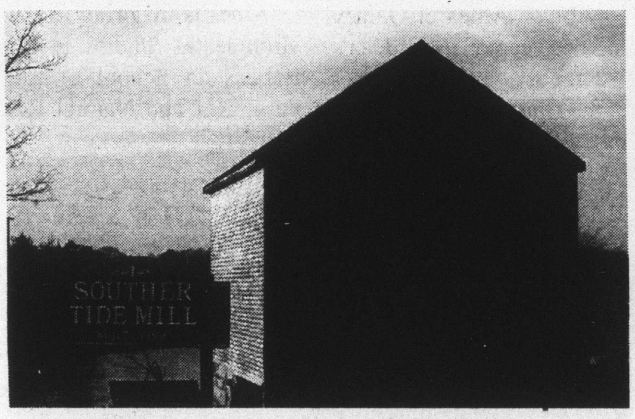
Fundraiser June 21 To Benefit Historic Souther Tide Mill

The Friends of Souther Tide Mill will host a social fundraiser with musical entertainment Wednesday, June 21st at the Squantum Yacht Club.

The public is welcome to attend.

Proceeds from the event will support the restoration of the Souther Tide Mill.

A presentation of the Mill's rich history, a recap of the work done in the past few years, and anticipated future efforts will be made by Doug Morrill, president of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill. Morrill will further discuss the intricacies of the milling process the Tide Mill was originally built for. Board member Kathy Hogan will describe the little known connection between the Souther Tide Mill and Quincy's rich quarry history.



Entertainment will include singing by 10-year-old Quincy resident Sofia Hurley, and the "King of the Classics: Songs of Stage and Screen" with Ken Morrell on the piano.

Several years ago the City of Quincy and Jay Cashman combined efforts to make a substantial improvement to the Mill. However, there is much more work still to be done - for example, educational signage, a security system to protect the Mill from vandalism and squatters, and many other capital improvements at the Mill. The Friends will dedicate all funds raised towards the restoration and improvement of the Mill.

"It is our hope that our efforts will show the City that the Friends are committed to more than just advocating, but are willing to put our own effort forward towards the preservation of the Mill," Morrill said.

Carolyn Marks, a longtime Mill advocate and past Friends president, added:

"We continue to explore additional fundraising grant opportunities, but feel that it is equally important that a local public commitment from the citizens of Quincy be made to show the support that exists for the Mill's preservation."

The cost of the event is $25 per person or $40 per family, with kids under 12 free.

Cocktails will be at 6:30 p.m. with the event starting at 7 p.m. at the Squantum Yacht Club, on Wollaston Beach.

For more information, call Doug Morrill at (617) 471-3628. Refreshments will be served and a cash bar will be available.

Quincy Lions Club Peace Poster Contest

The Quincy Lions Club recognized winners from its annual Peace Poster Contest at a recent luncheon.

Posters created by Sierra Rodriques, Atlantic Middle School; Melanie Moy, Central Middle School; Varshini Raman, Point Webster Middle School; and Susan Hoare, Sterling Middle School were among more than 450,000 entries submitted worldwide in the annual Lions International Peace Poster Contest. Lions Clubs International sponsors the program to emphasize the importance of world peace to young people everywhere.

The students, parents and teachers were welcomed at a recent Quincy Lions Club meeting for presentation of art ribbons and donations to their school's art programs.

Karen Giovanniello, president of The Quincy Art Association and a member of the Quincy Lions Club, coordinates the Club's Peace Poster Contest. She said she was impressed by the expression and creativity of the students.

"It is obvious that these young people have strong ideas about what peace means to them. I'm so proud that we were able to provide them with the opportunity to share their visions," Giovanniello said.

Getting To The Bottom Of Diaper Rashes

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-F

Diaper rash is a generalized term representing any skin irritation that develops in the diaper covered region. While there are several broad categories of causes of diaper rash, contact irritation is the most common culprit. While diaper rash is commonly thought to affect infants and toddlers, any individual wearing a diaper, for example an incontinent adult, is a candidate to acquire this dermatitis.

Parents often mistakenly feel that the rash is a visual representation of inadequate caretaking skills. However, parents need to understand that the basic origins for this common kind of skin irritation are still under active discussion in the field of dermatology and that neglectful parenting is not among the probable factors. In the United States, diaper dermatitis represents about 10%-20% of all skin disorders managed by a general pediatrician. While the rash may arise as early as the first week of life, the most frequent time period is between 9-12 months of age.

There are numerous categories of causes for this dermatitis. First and foremost is contact dermatitis. Skin involvement may contrast from mild redness to erosion of the top layers of skin. What differentiates contact diaper dermatitis from other causes of diaper rash is that it rarely involves the skin fold regions; therefore it rarely affects areas not in contact with urine or stool.

Skin infections comprise the next most common category of diaper rash. Bacteria (Staph and Strep) and yeast/fungal (Candida) are common causes of diaper rash. Normally both of these types of infections tend to result from a disruption of skin integrity and overwhelming the usual defense mechanisms of skin in this diaper region. Staph and Strep bacterial infections are commonly termed impetigo. Characteristic descriptions of impetigo include small (1-2 mm) blisters and pustules that tend to easily rupture leaving multiple erosions in an area of generalized skin irritation. Candida diaper dermatitis also has several unique patterns. The rash is characterized by zones of bright red skin with a sequence of distinct 2-4 mm lesions at the borders of the irritated skin. In contrast to contact dermatitis, Candida is commonly only found in the skin folds creases and often around the anal region. These infectious causes of diaper dermatitis can, as a rule, be diagnosed by visual inspection alone.

Allergic reactions are a less common cause of diaper rash. Frequently associated allergens are fragrances and components of the diaper and wipes. These regions often have well-defined regions of redness with superficial vesicles and erosions.

In addition to the common place causes of diaper rash, there are also a few very atypical causes of this problem. Unusual infections, metabolic and nutritional deficiency issues, immunodeficiency problems and malignancies can all be implicated. Unfortunately, child abuse (hot-water immersion, extreme neglect to infant hygiene) can also present as a diaper rash.

Due to the fact that a diaper rash may involve erosion of the superficial skin layers, pustules or small blisters, diaper changing may be mildly uncomfortable to the child.

The best treatment for diaper rash is avoidance of the causative agents which led to the contact irritation and to regions developing secondarily infected by skin bacteria or yeast. Frequent diaper changes limit exposure of stool and urine to the area and remain the basis for prevention and management of diaper dermatitis.

Should a rash develop, modest cleansing with water and soft cloths tends to be less irritating to the injured skin than disposable wipes. Recurrent application of one of the many diaper ointments containing either petroleum jelly (Vaseline) or zinc oxide (Desitin) provides an effective barrier against skin irritants and reduces friction to inflamed skin. If the diaper rash is markedly irritated by the rubbing necessary for suitable hygiene, then using a cream or ointment such as Vaseline as a barrier may be an important consideration. If sticky stool hinders cleaning, it may be more easily removed after application of mineral oil to the area. Generally pediatricians find little benefit from using cornstarch or talcum powder and the potential risk of aspiration of these powders underscores their general lack of significant effectiveness. High-concentration baking soda or boric-acid baths are to be avoided due to possibility of toxicity correlated with an increased rate of absorption due to skin breakdown.

If circumstances allow, open-air exposure of the irritated skin is also extremely effective in helping clear up diaper rash. Many children have a therapeutic response to merely sitting in a warm-water bath twice daily for 15-20 minutes per session.

Should these measures not provide a substantial response within two to three days, the possibility of a secondary bacterial or yeast infection must be considered. The area affected should be examined by a pediatrician for a definitive diagnosis and treatment options. Several topical antibiotic ointments are available for therapy in these situations. High-potency steroid creams and neomycin-containing ointments are to be avoided and can lead to additional irritation.

Parents often speculate if switching from disposable to cloth diapers will lessen the likelihood of contact type diaper rash. In reality, the opposite seems to be true. The absorbent gel material found in most of today's disposable diapers draws wetness away from the skin area, thus aiding in promoting a healthier diaper area.

The prognosis for diaper rashes is excellent. The routine therapies discussed should provide a speedy and successful response. If little or no improvement is observed then this should alert parents to have an evaluation by their pediatrician to rule out uncommon conditions associated with a diaper rash. Regrettably, diaper rashes often may recur. It is very important for parents to recognize that development of a diaper rash is not a reflection of their parenting skills. Instead, it is just one of the multitudes of challenges associated with parenthood.

DOVE, Inc. Expands Services To Better Serve Chinese Survivors Of Partner Abuse

DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended), Inc. announces it has received funding from the MA Department of Public Health to build tailored services for survivors of partner violence who are Chinese or of Chinese descent.

DOVE is in the process of hiring a Chinese advocacy & outreach coordinator, who will work with community service providers and colleagues, as well as with DOVE staff, to build bridges to ensure that survivors can get needed assistance. The recent charge of a Quincy resident, Yan Long Chow, with first degree murder of his ex-wife Zhen Li at their home in Wollaston last September serves as a testament to the need for such bridges.

DOVE is taking guidance from QARI (Quincy Asian Resources) to reach in to community members who know and trust QARI as a community resource. DOVE intends to listen to community members' feedback about what are some of the barriers for Chinese survivors, and recommendations about how DOVE can best help individuals and Chinese communities. DOVE will also work with Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center's (BCNC) Quincy office, South Cove and Manet Community Health Centers, and area churches and other groups to provide information and education about partner abuse.

Simultaneously the Chinese Advocacy & Outreach Coordinator will work with DOVE to strengthen knowledge, policies, and practices in an effort to grow trust and relationship with the Chinese community and create culturally responsive and affirming services for adult survivors and their children.

Approximately 33 percent of women and 28 percent of men in America have been victims of physical violence by an intimate partner according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Among Asian women, forty one to sixty one percent (41 – 61 percent) report experiencing physical and/or sexual violence by an intimate partner during their lifetime. This is higher than the rates in a national study reported by Whites (21.3 percent), African Americans (26.3 percent), Hispanics of any race (21.2 percent), people of mixed race (27.0 percent), and American Indians and Alaskan Natives (30.7 percent). Twenty-four percent (24 percent) of the Chinese survey participants in a survey conducted for the Asian Family Violence Report said they knew woman who had been abused. In terms of recommendations on where survivors should go for help, respondents suggested the police (52 percent), a shelter (36 percent), friends (37 percent), or family members (36 percent).

For complex reasons, Chinese communities are often reluctant to reach out to law enforcement or formal service providers for help. Nonetheless, Asian Family Violence survey responses provide insight into the types of services that potentially will be utilized most by the community for assistance with partner abuse Thus there is a strong need for consistent, culturally competent, culturally integrated, linguistically appropriate resources for assistance.

City Council Honors Daniel Quirk

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently presented a commendation to local automotive dealer Daniel Quirk in recognition of his 40 years in business.

Quirk, who owns dealerships in Quincy, Braintree, Marshfield and New Hampshire, received the commendation at the council's May 1 meeting. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall presented the commendation, highlighting Quirk's support of various causes in the Quincy community.

"In recognition of over 40 years of business in the city of Quincy, we honor your extraordinary commitment to your staff, customers and community," Croall said.

"Your countless acts of generosity and dedication to so many worthy civic causes throughout Quincy and the South Shore – including sharing space with the Quincy Fire Department at the Fore River Shipyard, supporting kids of the community with your annual Drive For A Cause program, your financial contribution to the city of Quincy's first all-inclusive playground designated for Fore River Field as well as your sponsorship of the annual Flag Day fireworks finale – truly shows you care for the community.

"You're a true friend of the city of Quincy and we are grateful for your dedication."

Quirk said the residents and elected officials in Quincy make it easy to give back.

"I've always believed in being a good corporate citizen," he said. "Quincy, with the elected officials, the people that live in Quincy, the people who do business with us and the people that live in Quincy that work at the Quirk organization – it's very easy to be a good corporate citizen.

"On behalf of the Quirk Corporation, I really appreciate the acknowledgment. Thank you very much."

Social Security Matters

Spousal Benefits Lost

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: I took my Social Security at 62 since I had to stop working to care for my mom when I was 57. I was widowed at the time but remarried when I was 58 1/2 years old.

I collected on my own work record, which was low. Why didn't I get half of my present husband's benefit when he started benefits at his full retirement age? I am 70 now. Will I get his full Social Security if he dies before me? Signed: Missing Benefits

Dear Missing: Yours is an issue which we unfortunately see occasionally with folks who have been collecting their own benefits for a long time and later become entitled to more than they have been receiving. This situation arises with couples where the lower-earning spouse filed for Social Security before their higher-earning spouse applied.

The lower-earning spouse (spouse #1) got benefits based upon their own work record only and received no spousal benefit because the higher-earning spouse (spouse #2) had not yet filed. Later on, when spouse #2 finally filed for benefits, spouse#1 became eligible for a "spousal boost" (if their spousal benefit was more than their own), but it did not happen automatically; that "spousal boost" had to be applied for when spouse #2 started benefits.

Unfortunately many people didn't realize this, assuming that the benefit they received when they first filed is what they get for the rest of their life. They might also have assumed that Social Security automatically made the spousal adjustment for them, which wasn't the case. As a result, we find that some spouses have lost thousands of dollars in benefits, simply because they did not know they had to actually apply for spousal benefits when they became eligible for them.

A similar situation might exist where someone who was single and already receiving benefits marries a higher-earning person already collecting Social Security benefits. Again in this case, spousal benefits must have been applied for to be received. Note that since the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015 was enacted, everyone applying for Social Security is "deemed filing" for both their own and spousal benefits, but that doesn't mitigate this particular issue because both spouses applied for benefits prior to the new rules becoming effective.

In your specific case, you became eligible for your additional spousal benefit as soon as your present husband's benefits began. Assuming your husband is about the same age as you, if ½ of your husband's benefit at his full retirement age of 66 was more than your own benefit, this means that you have gone for about 4 years without receiving the added spousal benefits you are entitled to.

So, the first thing you should do is to contact Social Security as soon as possible and apply for your spousal benefits (or do it online at ssa.gov). When you do this, be sure to make the effective date of those benefits 6 months prior to the date you file, because Social Security will pay you up to 6 months of retroactive benefits. Unfortunately, the remaining 3 ½ years of the benefits you were entitled to but didn't claim may be lost.

There is at least some chance, if your husband listed you as a spouse when he applied, that Social Security might give you more than six months retroactive, so you should make an appointment and explain what happened to see if anything more can be recovered.

As to your second question, yes, upon your husband's death you will receive 100 percent of the benefit he was receiving, instead of the benefit you are already receiving.

Council OKs $1.1M For CPC Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously approved nearly $1.1 million in projects that will be funded by Quincy's Community Preservation Committee, almost half of which will go towards an affordable housing project and the restoration of Bethany Congregational Church's bell tower.

The council approved funding for the projects on June 5. The projects were reviewed and approved by the Community Preservation Committee earlier this year.

One of the largest allocations of CPC money will go to NeighborWorks of Southern Mass. for construction of The Watson, a 114-unit apartment building planned for 116 E. Howard St. in Quincy Point. The building will feature 28 market rate units, 86 workforce housing units for middle-income earners and 26 affordable housing units for those will lower than median incomes.

NeighborWorks will receive $250,000 in community preservation funds for the project.

Nine historic preservation projects received a total of $528,770 in funds.

Bethany Congregational Church will receive $260,000 for the repair and restoration of its bell tower; the City Clerk's Office will receive $44,529 for records preservation; the City Assessor's Office will receive $25,000 for records preservation; St. John the Baptist Church will get $96,740 for fence replacement; $17,500 will go towards the restoration of the dining room and east parlor of the Josiah Quincy House; the Houghs Neck Congregational Church is getting $30,000 for the repair and restoration of its granite façade; $35,000 will go towards developing a master facilities plan for the United First Parish Church; the Quincy Yacht will receive $10,000 to restore historic photographs; and $10,000 is for the renovation of the Sailor's Sing Harbor Door at Quincy Housing Authority.

Six open space projects, totaling $216,563, will receive funding. Those projects include $101,000 for the Quincy Housing Authority to renovate the Germantown Circle Shedd Memorial; $64,000 to study permitting and stormwater retrofit for Sailor's Pond, a joint project by the Department of Public Works and Friends of Sailor's Pond; $30,000 to the Quincy Environmental Network for open space site identification; $16,425 to the DPW for a study of Manet Lake; $4,918 to the Squantum Seaside Gardeners to purchase daylilies; and $400 for the purchase of materials needed for an Eagle Scout osprey platform in Squantum.

Two recreation projects will receive funding: The Quincy Police Department Marine Unit will get $50,000 for the repair of floats at Bayswater Ramp/Parkhurst Beach, and the Houghs Neck Garden Club $10,000 to revitalize Leo Kelly Park.

Quincy's voters adopted the state's Community Preservation Act by referendum in 2006. The CPA fund is financed through a one percent surcharge on property taxes. The first $100,000 in assessed value for each residential property is exempt from the surcharge, as are residential properties owned by some seniors and those who qualify for low-income housing. The state also matches a portion of CPA funds in each community that has adopted the act.

Councillor Noel DiBona, a member of the CPC, said the average taxpayer pays about $30 or $40 each year toward the community preservation account. The projects funded by the committee, he said, have made a difference in the community.

"You look on your taxes every year and you see that 1 percent – it's roughly between $30 and $40 – and you see it going into the uses in the city," DiBona said. "[It's a] very important allocation of funding – $30 or $40 that each of us puts up to see the differences in the community."

Councillor Joseph Finn said the community preservation funding has made a tremendous impact over the past decade.

"It's really been, in my mind, a real gift to the city," he said. "It's worked tremendously."

$5.3M In Preservation Funds Sought For Playgrounds

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials hope to repair and upgrade playgrounds across Quincy over the next two years using a $5.3 million bond funded by community preservation money.

Mayor Thomas Koch submitted the bond request to the City Council June 5. The bond was referred to finance committee for further review. The $5.3 million would be used for the repair of 19 playgrounds, including the purchase of new equipment for five playgrounds, and new swings and slide repairs at four playgrounds.

Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said Koch and the Community Preservation Committee came up with the plan to address all playgrounds in the city, except those that have been upgraded and repaired in recent years. The goal is to ensure all playgrounds throughout the city receive needed repairs and upgrades, Walker stated, not just the playgrounds in areas with active community groups.

"We were getting a couple requests every year for different playgrounds at different schools in different areas of the city. The mayor thought it was probably worthwhile to consolidate them into one program that will give the CPC a little bit more flexibility and also provide a measure of equity to all the playgrounds getting done," Walker said.

"Some of the areas with the most well-organized school groups and other groups, they were mobilizing on replacing the playgrounds, and there are some areas of the city that don't have that capability within the community so the mayor thought it was appropriate to come in with a plan that will take care of all the playgrounds in the city."

Walker said the projects would be completed within two years. By financing the projects through a single bond, he said the city would be able to save money.

"They've been spending about $500,000 a year on playgrounds," Walker said of the Community Preservation Committee.

"By financing it like this, that number will drop to about $300,000 maximum, so this will give the CPC, we think, a little more flexibility to deal with other issues."

The Community Preservation Committee is financed by a 1 percent surcharge on property taxes collected in the city, as approved by Quincy voters during a 2006 referendum. The first $100,000 in assessed value for each residential property is exempt from the surcharge, as are residential properties owned by some seniors and those who qualify for low-income housing. The state also matches a portion of CPA funds in each community that has adopted the act.

Community preservation funds can be used for the purchase of open space, restoring historic sites, and affordable housing in addition to recreation projects like playgrounds.

City officials hope to repair and upgrade playgrounds across Quincy over the next two years using a $5.3 million bond funded by community preservation money.

Mayor Thomas Koch submitted the bond request to the City Council June 5. The bond was referred to finance committee for further review. The $5.3 million would be used for the repair of 19 playgrounds, including the purchase of new equipment for five playgrounds, and new swings and slide repairs at four playgrounds.

Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said Koch and the Community Preservation Committee came up with the plan to address all playgrounds in the city, except those that have been upgraded and repaired in recent years. The goal is to ensure all playgrounds throughout the city receive needed repairs and upgrades, Walker stated, not just the playgrounds in areas with active community groups.

"We were getting a couple requests every year for different playgrounds at different schools in different areas of the city. The mayor thought it was probably worthwhile to consolidate them into one program that will give the CPC a little bit more flexibility and also provide a measure of equity to all the playgrounds getting done," Walker said.

"Some of the areas with the most well-organized school groups and other groups, they were mobilizing on replacing the playgrounds, and there are some areas of the city that don't have that capability within the community so the mayor thought it was appropriate to come in with a plan that will take care of all the playgrounds in the city."

Walker said the projects would be completed within two years. By financing the projects through a single bond, he said the city would be able to save money.

"They've been spending about $500,000 a year on playgrounds," Walker said of the Community Preservation Committee.

"By financing it like this, that number will drop to about $300,000 maximum, so this will give the CPC, we think, a little more flexibility to deal with other issues."

The Community Preservation Committee is financed by a 1 percent surcharge on property taxes collected in the city, as approved by Quincy voters during a 2006 referendum. The first $100,000 in assessed value for each residential property is exempt from the surcharge, as are residential properties owned by some seniors and those who qualify for low-income housing. The state also matches a portion of CPA funds in each community that has adopted the act.

Community preservation funds can be used for the purchase of open space, restoring historic sites, and affordable housing in addition to recreation projects like playgrounds.

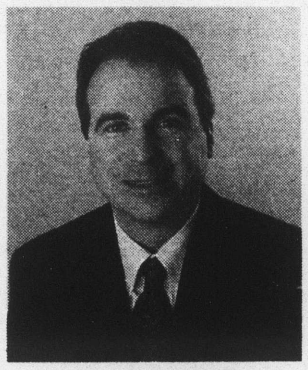
Gutro Seeks School Committee Seat

Pledging a focus on neighborhood schools and advocacy for investments in education, former city councillor, and City Council president, Doug Gutro announces his candidacy for the Quincy School Committee.



DOUG GUTRO

"As a father of two boys in the Quincy Public School System, I have a vested interest in working to sustain and improve our public school system," said Gutro. "I've seen, first hand, the value of our school system and recognize its importance to our children as well as to our a community as a whole."

Gutro's son Brian will be attending Quincy High School in the fall and son Scott will be entering the 8th grade at Central Middle School. Both boys attended Beechwood Knoll School.

"During my time on the City Council, I've had the privilege to visit all 11 elementary schools, five middle schools, and both high schools. I've been proud to cast votes to bolster school budgets, fund capital improvements, and support important programs like literacy, media services, ELL, foreign language, and music. I'd welcome the chance to continue that advocacy as a member of the Quincy School Committee," Gutro said.

"I believe my experience in City Government and first hand knowledge of our school system will be helpful at a time when two long time School Committee members are stepping down. As a parent, I wish to express my gratitude to Ms. (Barbara) Isola and Ms. (Anne) Mahoney for their many years of service to the city's school system," Gutro added.

Isola is not seeking re-election this fall. Mahoney announced last week that she will be running for a councillor at-large seat instead of a fourth term on the school committee.

Gutro served five terms as Ward 5 city councillor, representing the neighborhoods of Wollaston and Quincy Center. He served two terms as councillor-at-large. He was voted by his peers to serve as City Council president in 2006-2007. He chaired many council committees during his tenure including committees on Education, Downtown & Economic Development, and Veterans Affairs.

"As a ward councillor, I often said - you can name a street in my district, and I could name someone who lives there and what the issues were that matter most to them," Gutro said. "I pledge to bring the same attention and understanding to the unique needs of each neighborhood school. I'd welcome the opportunity to listen and learn about those issues from parents at PTO meetings across the city."

According to Gutro, "Quincy has many terrific teachers, administrators and staff working each day to improve educational opportunities for our children. They are extraordinary people and an important resource with ideas for improvements. I welcome their input."

Gutro noted he has a long history of civic involvement in Quincy. He served as president of the Ward 5 Community Association and Wollaston Beach Task Force. He served as a member of the Board of Directors for DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) and Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission. He is the founder, and current president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach, who advocate for events and amenities. Gutro is the city's representative on the state beaches commission.

Gutro is the acting director of Public Affairs for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's New England office, where he manages programs on environmental education and children's health, media and government relations, and community involvement.

Since 1999, Gutro has served as an adjunct faculty member for Suffolk University teaching graduate and undergraduate courses in local government, environmental policy and administration, and public service communication.

Gutro will kick off his campaign with a reception on Monday, June 26, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Cagney's, 214 Washington St. This event is open to the public.

Farmers Market Opens June 23

The Quincy Farmers Market marks its 35th Anniversary with over 30 vendors participating this season, a dozen new vendors, and a live summer music lineup in Merrymount Park, Fridays June 23 to Nov. 17.

Holly Hill Farm from Cohasset, an organic farm whom helped launch Quincy's Farm-to-School program begins their first year at the market. They offer produce as well as education. On Point Solutions, which has been restoring the historic Frohloff Farm in partnership with the East Quabbin Land Trust in Hardwick will begin regular visits. They join Stillman Farms of New Braintree, David Freitas & Sons of Middleboro, and the Undisputed Chicken's eggs from Holbrook.

New bakers include Chrissy's Crumbles producing vegan granola made from seeds and nuts, no grain, from Waltham. Chrissy started by addressing the dietary needs of her own family and was encouraged by her friends to get into business. Spritzal is a Weymouth girl that makes shortbread cookies with her mother. Smackadoodles from Rockland produces sweet and savory buns. Swiss Bakers of Allston returns. D's Lectables cookies of Seekonk and Vermaje' teas and pastries of Randolph return as well.

There are two new prepared food vendors. Mr. Tamale of Dorchester makes all kinds of tamales from his mother's home family recipes. And Addy Kettlecorn from Weymouth will be popping fresh popcorn at the market. They join the Kabob House of Chelmsford producing Middleastern cuisine, Homestyle Caterers of Quincy, and the Bonez Brothers massive smoked barbecue operation out of Florida for the summer.

Two more Quincy residents are using the market to promote their small business. Euphoria starts their first full time season producing personal care and beauty products – started by a Quincy girl. Heather Dinino is a Quincy resident who will conduct storytime and crafts activities.

Ackerman Maple Syrup is coming down weekly from Cabot, VT, Golden Rule Honey is traveling from Leominster, Westport Rivers Winery, and Omega Olive Oil of Kingston all continue offering their ambrosia.

Manet Health of Quincy will provide healthcare information along with The Quincy Woman, Infants and Children Nutrition program.

Hughs Energy Conservation guides sustainability options through services such as insulation. They join Resolusun and Solar City promoters of solar energy solutions on the sustainability front.

Northeast Community Bank of Quincy has served local entrepreneurs, artists, and crafts-people as a host to help them get started for several years now. In addition they serve as an information booth and provide activities promoting financial literacy.

And we don't forget your dogs. Carberry Kitchen brings treats for them.

Key to a farmers market is "activity beyond mere sales transactions." At our market this includes conversation, community building, communal eating / picnicking, rural-urban partnership, risk sharing with the farmers through Community Supported Agriculture, access to fresh produce through Department of Agriculture Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Programs, Senior Nutritional Assistance Program, and Federally sponsored Woman, Infants and Children program, nutritional and cooking education, recipe exchange, gardening education and related children's activities, early childhood education through storytelling, reading and "Math-at-the-Market, financial literacy programs offered by local banks, information delivery for renewable energy and energy conservations programs, municipal recycling presentations, local historical presentations such as the Souther Tide Mill, education about sustainable fisheries, organic farming, and other sustainability practices, demonstrations, presentations and interactive activities with artists and crafts-people, musical entertainment, information sharing by local non-profits, hosting field trips such as by the High School Culinary Program and primary school groups, presentations by city departments such as the Department of Public Works, Police, Fire Department, and presentations of city development, and engagement through social media about related activities.

Those interested in becoming involved in the market in any way can contact Market Manager Janet Little at janet.little@comcast.net or 339-225-2607. More at quincyfarmersmarket.com.

Two More Residents Pull Election Nomination Papers

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twenty-four residents have pulled papers to run for office in this fall's municipal election, which could feature preliminary contests in three City Council races.

The latest two residents to enter the field are Daniel Davis of Babcock Street, who pulled papers on Monday, becoming the fourth candidate for the open Ward 1 seat on the council, and Dong Fang Xiao of Bicknell Street, who on June 8 became the seventh person to pull papers to run for the three at-large council seats.

In the at-large contest, first-term incumbents Noel DiBona of Chickatabot Road and Nina Liang of Williams Street have both pulled papers to run for re-election. Also running are Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, a Rock Island Road resident who is giving up that seat to run at-large; three-term School Committee member and former mayoral candidate Anne Mahoney of Ferriter Street, who is likewise giving up her seat; Domenic Papile of Ridgeway Drive; Robert Ross of Howe Street; and Xiao.

Rumors have also been swirling around other potential candidates who may enter the at-large field, including former mayor William Phelan.

The third incumbent at-large councillor, Joseph Finn, announced earlier this year he would not run for re-election. Finn, a Williams Street resident, has served on the council since 2002 and is its longest serving current member.

Residents running for the at-large seats need to collect signatures from 50 registered voters before July 25 to secure a spot on the fall ballot. A preliminary election would be held Sept. 12 if more than six at-large candidates qualify for the ballot.

The final election is set for Nov. 7.

Preliminary elections are also shaping up in Wards 1 and 6.

Four candidates have emerged in the race to replace Laforest in Ward 1. They are: David McCarthy of Whitney Road, a former three-term member of the School Committee who unsuccessfully ran for an at-large seat on the council in 2015; Michael Falcione of Graham Terrace; Joseph Murphy of Macy Street; and Davis.

In Ward 6, incumbent William Harris of Ashworth Road is vying for a second term. Ashly Eikelberg of Quincy Shore Drive and H.A. 'Alie' Shaughnessy of Essex Street have both taken out papers to challenge him.

Incumbent Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, a Willow Avenue resident, is also facing a potential challenge. Mary Lally of Weston Avenue has begun circulating papers to face off against Hughes, who is presently the council president.

The remaining incumbent councillors – Brad Croall (Ward 2), Ian Cain (Ward 3) and Brian Palmucci (Ward 4) – have all taken out nomination papers. All three are unopposed so far.

The residents seeking a ward seat must collect signatures from 50 voters within that ward. If more than two candidates qualify for the ballot for any ward contest, a preliminary election would be required.

Mahoney's decision to run for the City Council means there will be two open seats on the School Committee this fall; Barbara Isola announced earlier this year she would not run for re-election.

The third incumbent school board member, Emily Lebo of Highland Avenue, is running for re-election. She is joined by former city councillor Doug Gutro, a Marlboro Street resident who unsuccessfully ran for mayor two years ago; Anthony Andronico of Charles Street; David Jacobs of Dunns Court; and Mark Sauter of Longwood Road.

The candidates for School Committee must also collect 50 signatures from residents to land a spot on the ballot. A preliminary election would be held if more than six qualified for the ballot.

Mayor Thomas Koch is not on the ballot this fall. In 2015, Koch defeated Phelan to win the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history.

Deadly Opioid Found In Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

The dangerous synthetic opioid carfentanil was recently seized by Transit Police in the Quincy area, Massachusetts State Police announced.

The drug sample taken by Transit Police in Quincy is one of three samples to test positive for carfentanil, State Police said June 7. The other two samples were recovered by the Brockton Police Department.

These confirmed tests represent the first, and to date the only, carfentanil that State Police have seen in Massachusetts. The state of New Hampshire recent confirmed several suspected overdose deaths caused by carfentanil. To date, the Massachusetts State Police are not aware of any carfentanil overdose deaths in the Bay State. State Police urged residents and first responders to be aware of carfentanil's dangerous nature.

"Carfentanil is a serious danger to the public, first responders, and medical and laboratory personnel," State Police said on Facebook. "It can be absorbed through the skin or through accidental inhalation of airborne powder."

Carfentanil is a Schedule II drug with no approved medical use for humans; it is used to tranquilize large animals, including elephants. Carfentanil is 100 times more powerful than fentanyl, which can be lethal in the two-milligram range and is many more times powerful than heroin. Most of the carfentanil seized in the United States was manufactured in China or Mexico.

One of the tested samples confirmed as carfentanil by the State Police Crime Laboratory was mixed with cocaine; the others were purely carfentanil. Users of illegal opioids likely would not know if they are ingesting carfentanil just by the appearance of the substance they are taking, police said.

Symptoms of exposure include respiratory depression or arrest, drowsiness, disorientation, sedation, pinpoint pupils, and clammy skin. The onset of these symptoms usually occurs within minutes of exposure.

State Police said first responders should avoid field testing fentanyl or fentanyl-related compounds. Only specially-trained and outfitted law enforcement professionals should handle any suspect substance, State Police said, and the appropriate officials within the agency should be notified.

Meetings On Proposed Downtown Investments Wednesday, Thursday

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents will have the chance to comment on proposed city investments into Quincy Center at meetings scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday.

The first meeting, at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in the lower-level meeting room of the McIntyre Government Center, will provide the public with the chance to comment on a $46.6 million garage proposed for what is now the Hancock Lot.

City officials are reviewing two plans for the garage – one with 720 spaces and the other with room for 810 vehicles. A portion of the cost for constructing the garage would also go towards replacing the century-old drain line that flows under the Hancock Lot.

On Thursday at 6:30 p.m., the City Council's finance committee will convene in the Great Hall of the McIntyre Government Center to discuss Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed $80 million bond to pay for the new garage and other improvements meant to the support the redevelopment of the Hancock Lot site and prepare the Ross Garage site for development in the future. The improvements include infrastructure upgrades and the acquisition of several parcels of land.

A public hearing will be held at the start of Thursday's meeting.

The $80 million would be financed through the District Improvement Financing program. Under the DIF program, the city would repay the $80 million bond using new property tax revenue generated in Quincy Center. City officials have said the new developments proposed for the Hancock Lot and elsewhere in Quincy Center would create more than enough new revenue to pay off the bond.

Officials Discuss Marijuana Legalization

By SCOTT JACKSON

The joint committee on Beacon Hill tasked with rewriting the state's recreational marijuana law could issue its recommendations within the next month.

Sen. John Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, provided an update on the Legislature's efforts to regulate recreational marijuana in the Bay State during a public forum June 8 at City Hall. Walpole Police Chief John Carmichael and Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for Mayor Thomas Koch, also spoke at the meeting.

Massachusetts voters approved the legalization of recreational marijuana in a November 2016 referendum, with 54 percent of voters in favor of legalization. In Quincy, 51 percent of voters were in favor of legalization.

Keenan said the Legislature is now trying to address holes in the ballot question while at the same time honoring the intent of the voters.

"It was not a very well written ballot question. It left a lot to be desired, so the Legislature is struggling with taking what's in the ballot question, trying to be true to the intent of the voters while making sure they put proper regulations in place as they have a responsibility to do with any new industry here in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," Keenan said.

"The stakes are pretty high. This is a big money industry across the country. It is a big money industry here in Massachusetts."

Possession and use of marijuana become legal for all persons over the age of 21 in Massachusetts in December 2016, following the referendum. Those of age are also allowed to grow marijuana at home; individuals can grow up to six plants at once, and households are allowed up to 12 plants.

Smoking marijuana or consuming marijuana-infused edibles remains illegal in public, and the sale of the drug is also illegal. The referendum would have allowed stores to begin sales of marijuana as soon as Jan. 1, 2018, but the Legislature has already delayed that by six months as lawmakers draft new legislation.

The Joint Committee on Marijuana Policy is responsible for crafting the new law; Sen. Patricia Jehlen (D-Somerville) and Rep. Mark Cusack (D-Braintree) are the committee chairs. Keenan, who is not on the committee, said Jehlen's major concern is eliminating the black market for marijuana.

"If we are going to have marijuana for recreational purposes here in Massachusetts, her goal is to eliminate as much as possible the black market and she is hopeful she will be able to do that," Keenan said.

"She is looking at two ways of doing it – one is through the tax structure and the other is through the location and licensing process and permitting process for marijuana facilities, making sure there is an adequate supply."

The 2016 referendum imposes a 10 percent tax rate on marijuana sales – the state's 6.25 percent sales tax plus a 3.75 percent surcharge – and allows communities to impose an additional 2 percent tax.

Keenan said the 10 percent the state collects would likely not be enough to regulate marijuana and provide education on its use. The Legislature is also wary of making the tax too burdensome, which would encourage illicit sales.

"Massachusetts, I think, is going to look closely at trying to find the right balance between a tax rate that generates enough revenue to regulate what we have to do…without it being so high it's burdensome," Keenan said.

Colorado, which has a 29 percent tax on recreational marijuana sales, spends $30 million annually on regulations and educational expenses, he stated. Washington state has an even higher tax rate, 37 percent.

Keenan also highlighted several of the other areas the committee is looking at.

The committee had considered raising the legal age for recreational marijuana to 25 but is unlikely to do so, he said, though it could increase the legal age for tobacco to 21.

"The thought there is if you're going to have alcohol at 21 and marijuana at 21, why not have tobacco at 21 and then it's across the board easy to enforce," Keenan said.

Another area the committee will look into is the ability of municipalities to regulate where dispensaries can open. Keenan said uncertainty exists over whether the referendum prohibits communities with a medical marijuana dispensary from banning recreational facilities through a ballot measure. Quincy is among those affected by that provision – Ermont, a medical marijuana dispensary, opened in October 2016 on Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy.

Keenan said he was concerned about what effect the normalization of marijuana would have on children. He said the state would need a public awareness campaign, similar to its anti-tobacco efforts.

"With tobacco, we've been effective in sending the message that it's dangerous," Keenan said. "We saw usage (of tobacco) drop once we were able, through education and everything else, to show it should not be normalized."

Carmichael passed around several types edibles – food products infused with THC, the active ingredient in marijuana – including cookies, brownies and rice crispy treats to the two dozen attendees present. Carmichael said he was concerned about the potency of the edibles; one chocolate chip cookie, he stated, contained 160 milligrams of THC, 16 times the 10-milligram serving size.

"I don't typically eat one-sixteenth of a cookie," Carmichael said. "In this case, you should."

Since recreational marijuana was legalized, Carmichael said Walpole police have seen children using THC-infused products including cookies, lollipops, pretzels and ziti.

"What adults want to do, that's their thing, but when these things start seeping down into our youth, then we have to pay attention to that," he stated.

Carmichael said he was also concerned about drivers operating under the influence of marijuana and the ability of law enforcement to test for that. Colorado and Washington both have limits on the amount of THC drivers can have in their blood, but the drug can linger in the bloodstream long after it is used, unlike alcohol. There are police officers in Massachusetts certified in drug recognition, Carmichael said, but only about 130 statewide.

Walker noted Koch has proposed an ordinance regulating recreational marijuana facilities in Quincy, which is now pending before the City Council.

Marijuana establishments, as the zoning ordinance refers to them, would not be allowed to open within 1,500 linear feet of any residential district; public or private school with students under the age of 21; child care centers; athletic fields, playgrounds, beaches, skating rinks, libraries and recreation centers; and public transit facilities. Walker said those restrictions are similar to the ones approved by the City Council concerning medical marijuana dispensaries, which essentially limited them to Ricciuti Drive and the Fore River Shipyard.

The proposed ordinance also includes hours during which a recreational dispensary could sell marijuana. Those hours would be 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

Walker said the administration is unsure whether Quincy can outright ban recreational dispensaries from opening via a ballot measure because Ermont is already open in the city and Koch has not decided whether or not he would advance such a referendum.

"A ballot question is something that has come up and we're still seeking that answer as to whether or not the law would allow the city to have a referendum on that question," Walker said. "The mayor is open to that. He has not made a definitive decision on whether or not that will be the best way."

Retired Teachers Award $70,500 In Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Board announces the winners of its 2017 scholarships.

The organization awarded 35 scholarships to graduating seniors from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools during a ceremony held recently at Central Middle School.

"This ceremony is a highlight of this and every year for retired educators," said Miss Linda Lew Hanson, president of the QRTA Scholarship Board. "We love to see the excellence of the Quincy Public Schools mirrored in the achievements of these wonderful students."

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association, parent organization of the QRTA Scholarship Board, consists of retired Quincy Public Schools staff, teachers and administrators. The fund was established in 1978 when it received a contribution from the estate of Warren Findlay, math teacher at Quincy High School for the purpose of awarding scholarships. Since that time the fund has grown to approximately $1.7 million benefiting from numerous bequests and memorial contributions honoring retired Quincy educators.

Recipients are chosen by a Scholarship Committee comprised of staff and the guidance departments from each high school.

This year new scholarships were established in memory of Supt. Eugene Creedon, A. Catherine Roeder, retired director of Library and Media Services and Gregory Buck, a North Quincy High Graduate who died suddenly as a young adult and was remembered by his close friends and classmates.

"The contribution to the youth of Quincy from its retired teachers is unique in the Commonwealth," said Kathleen Mitchell, president of the Retired Teachers Association

Since its inception, the QRTA Scholarship Fund has given over 1,000 scholarships to graduating Quincy High School and North Quincy High School seniors, totaling over $1 million.

"Quincy is very, very lucky to have an organization like the QRTA and their generosity to our students is truly wonderful," said Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, who attended the ceremony. "Tonight showed once again that Quincy's educators give unselfishly to our children while they work, when they retire and even after they pass away. I am proud to be part of this group."

Quincy Credit Union Awards Scholarships

Quincy Credit Union announces the following student Members have been selected as recipients of the 2017 Scholarship Lottery Awards.

Amanda Lee, Emma Kimmell and Nicole Flora of Quincy and Brendan McManus of Milton, were each awarded a $1,000 QCU scholarship for secondary education expenses.

Amanda Lee is currently attending Bentley University as an Information Design and Corporate Communications major. This summer she will intern at Dell EMC in the marketing department.

Emma Kimmell attends University of Massachusetts Boston. Kimmell will transfer to Bridgewater or Salem State University in the fall to pursue a degree in Art Education. She coaches the Mass. Pats Volleyball Club and plays intramural volleyball for UMass Boston.

Brendan McManus is studying business at the University of New Hampshire. McManus plays intramural soccer at UNH.

Nicole Flora, a 2017 graduate of North Quincy High School, plans to attend Assumption College in the fall as an Education Major. Flora was very involved at NQHS as a member of the dance team, S.A.D.D., drama club, and student council.

QCU Scholarships are available to high school seniors of the current year's graduating class and for enrolled college students for each of the years they are enrolled in a two or four-year accredited college or university.

Applicants must be Members of QCU. Non-selected applicants are encouraged to apply each year they meet the scholarship criteria. Applications are available online at www.qcu.org or at any QCU location starting in January of each year.

LR Furniture Fabrics, Easy Chairs: Wood Vs. Upholsterered Arms

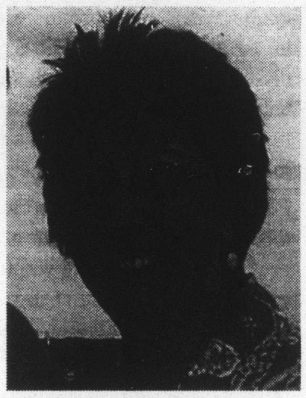
I need to replace my living room furniture. What fabrics do you recommend for pet owners? Eileen

Of course not every cat and dog are the same when it comes to shedding hair or the tendency to claw your furniture. Here are a few tried-and-true tips.

Leathers are easy to clean and pet hair does not stick to them. However, scratches and claw holes will be visible should Frisky or Rover misbehave. Microfibers do not allow claws to penetrate the fabric like nubby or textured furniture alternatives including chenille, linen, silk, tweed, velvet, and wool. Outdoor fabrics are terrific, too; in fact, consider a slipcover made from outdoor fabric which now comes in lots of colors and patterns.

Speaking of patterns, look for a patterned fabric or one the same color as the pet's hair to help hide the hair.

Finally, get your new furniture with a fabric protector like Scotchguard and look into repellent sprays at the pet store which help keep your pets from chewing or peeing on your furniture. The products cost about $15 per bottle and you may use them every few days to protect your furniture.



BARBARA GRACEFFA

When choosing a new easy chair, do you recommend wooden arms over upholstered arms? It seems to me that wood would last longer and not be subject to stains and general wear-and-tear. Trixie

Although you are right about those advantages to wooden arms, I prefer upholstered arms for reasons of pure comfort. I find wooden arms far too hard but, of course, it is personal preference.

Register O'Donnell: May Real Estate Sales Better Than Expected

Despite a monthly trend of limited inventory, total real estate sales in May 2017, both residential and commercial, showed a solid 10 percent increase year over year.

"Surprisingly, Norfolk County real estate sales for May totaled 1,706 compared to 1,554 in May 2016," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell. "What was unsurprising is the low number of properties on the market which has given rise to competition, particularly for first-time homeowners, bidding against each other, resulting in healthy increases in both the average sale price and total sales.

"The average sales price for May, again for both residential and commercial, was $766,499, a 14 percent increase compared to the previous year. Total real estate sales volume increased a whopping 25 percent for the month coming in at $850 million. In light of the continuing low levels of real estate inventory, it will be interesting to see if this growth can be sustained." O'Donnell said.

Lending activity for the month was a different story. A total of 2,426 mortgages were recorded during May, a 14 percent decrease from the previous year. Total mortgage financing for the month was $1.1 billion, a 3 percent reduction year over year.

"An uptick in mortgage rates," noted O'Donnell, "triggered these downward numbers. With the Federal Reserve projected to increase rates during the second half of 2017, I see the mortgage lending activity trend lines continuing for the foreseeable future."

A bright spot for the month of May 2017 was Norfolk County homeowners continuing to take advantage of the Homestead Act. A total of 1,153 Homesteads were filed during May 2017, a 4 percent increase compared to the previous May.

"The Homestead Act," O'Donnell noted, "is an important consumer tool. A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000."

Additional piece of good news was seen in the area of foreclosure activity. The total number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process was 60, a 28 percent reduction from the previous year. Foreclosure deed recordings, the final step in the foreclosure process, were flat. A total of 22 foreclosure deeds were processed in May, the same number recorded in May 2016.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Information you need might be coming in sporadically, but at least what you're getting is valuable. Continue to wait until more is available before acting on that career move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue on an upbeat cycle, and with that strong Taurean energy you should see favorable results from your hard work. A pleasant surprise awaits you in your private life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding needs more time to be worked out. Don't give up on it just yet. Remain open to providing explanations, if called for. Another friend offers good advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Fast action can correct a seemingly minor problem that has taken on some unexpectedly difficult aspects. Stay with it until it's resolved. News on a more positive note is due soon.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some snags could cause delays in those plans you're eager to see put into operation. But be patient. The Clever Cat will soon have good reason to celebrate a job well done.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let that Virgan sensitivity dissuade you from being the hardheaded realist you should be at this time. Your goals are in sight. Stay focused on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive aspect opens up, allowing you to make some important changes in a personal situation. Remember to seek balance and avoid extremes as you proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good week to get out and enjoy the fine times you missed while you were so deep in those workaday projects. Be sure to share it with that special person.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Work and play are in balance this week. However, expect news that could tip things toward the workplace for quite a while. But all to a good end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're more productive on the job than you have been in some time. That's good. But be careful not to overlook some situations developing in your private life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been doing a lot for others (as usual). But now it's time to focus on your needs, including finally going on that long-delayed trip you've been hoping to make.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's all smoothly going on 'twixt you and that very special person in your life. But a colleague causes some disruption on the job that you might be called on to help settle.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to the needs of others. But you're no pushover. You would make a fine teacher, psychologist or minister.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Will Daniel Craig play 007 for a fifth time? He made 21 films prior to "Casino Royale" (2006), but none of them could touch the success of his Bond debut. "Casino Royale" gave him a $3.4 million paycheck, cost $150 million and grossed $600 million. "Quantum of Solace" (2008) earned him $8.9 million, cost $200 million and grossed $586 million. "Skyfall" (2012) made him $17 million and earned $1.1 billion, and "Spectre," which paid him $39 million and grossed $880 million. Craig's net worth has been estimated at $95 million, and producers are offering a hefty increase for him to do his fifth "Bond" film. Can he really walk away from that kind of money and prestige?

His next two films (which we're sure won't have a quarter of the windfall of "Skyfall") are "Lucky Logan," due Aug. 18, with Channing Tatum, Riley Keough (Elvis' granddaughter), two-time Oscar winner Hillary Swank, Seth MacFarlane and Katie Holmes; and the romantic "Kings," opposite Oscar-winner Halle Berry.

Roger Moore, who passed away May 23, starred in seven Bond films from 1973-85, once told me, "I kept telling them I was too old to keep playing 007, but they kept saying, 'We'll be the judge of that.' Finally, at 60, I said it's time for a new 007!" Moore was an amazing Bond, but his own personality was suave and charming because of his sense of humor. Prediction: Craig will not only do a fifth "Bond" film, but probably a sixth or seventh, just to tie Moore's record.

Now that "The Mummy" is hitting screens, Tom Cruise has announced that the next film on his list will be "Top Gun 2," the sequel to "Top Gun," which cost just $15 million to make in 1986 and grossed $357 million. Val Kilmer (Iceman) is the only original cast member returning. The screenplay is in the hands of Peter Craig ("Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 1 & 2), Justin Marks (the upcoming "Jungle Book 2"), and Ashley Miller and Zack Stentz (they wrote the sequel to "Big Trouble in Little China" for Dwayne Johnson). Maverick and Iceman 31 years later; they have their work cut out for them!

Two-time Oscar-winning actress Glenda Jackson served more than 20 years in the British parliament before hitting London's West End last year playing the title role in "Macbeth." Now she's headed to Broadway in Edward Albee's play "Three Tall Women," with "Roseanne" and "Big Bang Theory" cast member Laurie Metcalf.

While you're in New York seeing Glenda Jackson, you might be able to catch the musical "King Kong," in which King Kong sings! What will they try next?

Q: I have two War Ration Books, and I wonder if they are worth keeping or should I cash them in. – Helen, Decatur, Illinois

A: Millions of ration books were issued during World War II. They were intended to prevent the hoarding of such goods as coffee, sugar, meat and other items in short supply due to the war. Ration books generally sell in the $5 to $25 range, but unlike savings bonds, you can't cash them in as you wish.

Q: I have two crocks that were made in Parkersburg, West Virginia, by A.P. Donaghho. I believe they were probably produced in the 1940s. What could they be worth? – Leonard, Salisbury, Maryland

A: Alexander Polk Donaghho moved to Parkersburg from Fredericktown, Pennsylvania, in 1870. He built a kiln there because of the rich clay deposits and continued in Parkersburg until 1903, when he ceased operations. Your crocks are more than a century old, much earlier than you suspected.

Donaghho is best known for his hand-decorated stoneware. He later used stencils, but it is his earlier pieces that bring record prices. A salt-glazed crock with a cobalt design recently sold at Cowwan's Auction Company for $270.

Q: I have an RCA Victor Collectors Issue of Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, which I purchased for my husband in 1963. Does it have any value? – Barbara, Albuquerque, New Mexico

A: I found your set referenced in the Goldmine Standard Catalogue of American Records 1950-1975, compiled by Ted Neely (Krause Books). According to Neely, your limited edition was originally issued in 1953, and that first pressing is valued in the $75 to $150 range. Since your set is a later issue, it would be worth less. I found several sets listed on eBay, mostly in the $50 to $75 range.

Q: I have some baseball record books called "Who's Who in the Major Leagues," by John Carmichael. The ones I have are 1944, 1945 and 1947. These are baseball history and I am curious about values. – Ken, Leland, Illinois

A: Your baseball record books would retail in the $25 to $50 range, depending on condition.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was beloved English author J.R.R. Tolkien, best known for fantasy tales "The Hobbit" and "The Lord of the Rings," who made the following sage observation about his chosen genre: "I have been a lover of fairy-stories since I learned to read. Why should a man be scorned if, finding himself in prison, he tries to get out and go home? Or if, when he cannot do so, he thinks and talks about other topics than jailers and prison walls?"

* You might be surprised to learn that thieves, too, have a patron saint: Saint Dismas. Incidentally, he's also the patron saint of prisoners and funeral directors.

* You're probably aware that nocturnal animals are active at night and that diurnal animals are active during the day. But what about creatures that prefer the twilight hours? Yep, they have a name, too: They're crepuscular.

* Those who study such things say that ecdysiasts – those performers better known as stripteasers – are likely to be first-born children.

* In a recent survey of Americans and Britons, conducted on behalf of meditation app Calm.com, respondents reported that they get their best sleep of the week on Thursday nights, while Sunday night is the worst for sleeping.

* In India at one time, it was believed that eggshells held clues to the future. Fortune-tellers would smash a hen's egg against a special board, then interpret the pattern made by the fragments of shell.

* Add this to the list of America's puzzling small-town festivals: Every June, the town of Ainsworth, Nebraska, puts on the Middle of Nowhere Celebration.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "When packing for the kids to go to camp, here's a tip we've used over and over again: Put all elements of each outfit (top, bottom, undergarments, socks, etc.) folded into a gallon-size zipper-close bag. I add a plastic grocery bag as well. Each day, the child puts on a fresh outfit, then puts yesterday's clothes into the plastic grocery bag. You can tell what's been worn, and it's all ready at the start of day – no looking for socks or underwear!" – M.H. in North Carolina

* Keep your car's back seat clean with a sheet. Drape a twin-size sheet over the back seat. Tuck in all around. Use scissors to make a small opening for the seat belts. Now dirt and crumbs will be contained in the sheet, and you can shake it off when you get to your destination or home! Works great for road trips and beach days.

* When Mom or Dad travels for work, it can be hard on the parent and kids staying home. Try this trick: Record yourself reading a story. The child can play the recording as he or she follows the story in the book. Or, make a video for younger kids.

* Need a quick travel cup or kids' sippy cup? Use a plastic cup, then cover it with a square of plastic wrap secured with a rubber band. Finally, insert a straw through the plastic. There you go!

* "Here is a guaranteed no-scrub tip for a clean coffeepot: Fill coffeemaker with water, drop a dishwasher pod in the carafe, and brew the hot water right on top of it. After brewing, let sit 10-15 minutes, and it'll be clean as a whistle." – C.L. in Oregon

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, June 5, at 3 p.m., Officers Paul Matthews and Siobhan Connolly were dispatched to an Appleton Street house on a report of a male/female disorder. While en-route to the location, Quincy Dispatch informed the responding officers that there was an active restraining order for the address.

Upon arrival, the officers proceeded inside the single family residence in search of the "911" caller, announcing "Quincy Police" as the walked in. A very upset female emerged from the kitchen and identified herself as the caller. She said her boyfriend just verbally threatened to kill her during a heated argument. The female victim said the argument started when she told her boyfriend to get out of the residence and he responded that he would kill her.

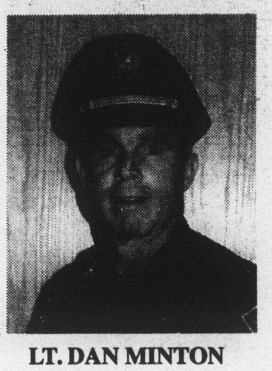
Officer Matthews contacted Quincy Police dispatch in order to check the stipulations contained in the victim's restraining order. The order, issued on May 30, 2017 and active until June 16th, specifically read that this was a no abuse order (they could be together but no abuse).

Officer Matthews proceeded into the master bedroom where the male suspect was located. As the officer entered the bedroom, he could clearly see the male suspect was in a highly agitated state. When told he was going to be placed in custody for the restraining order violation, the male began screaming at the officers that he was not was not going to jail.

The suspect suddenly turned and leaped onto the master bed and with one motion unsheathed a four-foot Samurai sword he had concealed behind the pillow. He turned toward the officers and began to raise the sword in an upward motion above his head with a two-handed grip. Upon seeing this aggressive behavior, Officer Matthews pushed the suspect down on the bed and pinned both his hands which contained the sword against the bedroom wall.

Officer Connolly leaped on top of the suspect and used palm strikes against his upper body in an attempt to get him to relinquish control of the sword. At this point, the suspect let go of the four foot sword but continued to resist arrest by stiffening both his arms to prevent the officers from handcuffing him. Officer Matthews told the suspect that if he did not stop resisting, he would be pepper sprayed. The suspect then put both hands in the small of his back and he was handcuffed.

A search incident to arrest was conducted by Officer Connolly which uncovered four more knifes on the suspect. Once the suspect was transported to the station for booking, Officer Matthews advised the victim about upgrading her restraining order so that there would be no contact as opposed to the existing order which said to refrain from abuse. The victim stated she could drive to Quincy District Court in the morning and obtain a full 209A order.



LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect, a 54-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with the restraining order violation as well as assault by means of a dangerous weapon, to wit: Samurai sword. The sword was logged into evidence and the four knives were confiscated.

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Saturday, June 3, at approximately 11:15 p.m., Officers Bryan Donovan, David Sansevero and Steve Kelly were dispatched to Kelly's Cellar for a report of a disorder. Upon arrival, Officer Donovan notified dispatch a large crowd of people were inside and there were approximately 25 people standing outside of the bar, looking toward the alley that leads to Hancock Street.

The general manager of Kelly's Cellar came running up to Officer Donovan's Police cruiser and said, "He's over there. He's threatening to stab my employees. He's wearing a red shirt." Officer Donovan walked into the alley and located the male, recognizing him from numerous past interactions. As the officer walked down the alley toward the suspect, numerous patrons told him the suspect may have a knife on him.

Upon seeing the officer, the suspect suddenly screamed belligerently, "F@#$ you n*&&@, f@#$ you, come get it, come get it." Officer Donovan attempted to diffuse the situation by asking the suspect to quiet down but the suspect continued his rant while telling the Officer, "Don't come near me." Officers Sansevero, Dabilis and Kelly arrived to assist.

The suspect began walking away toward Hancock Street. Officer Donovan told the suspect to stop but he continued walking while screaming foul language. The officer placed his hand on the suspect's shoulder to stop him from walking away, which resulted in the suspect blading his body and clenching both fists. When advised to relax, the suspect warned the officer not to put his hands on him again.

The suspect suddenly threw a punch with his right hand, striking Officer Donovan in the arm. Officers grabbed the suspect by his shirt and brought him to the ground. The suspect continued to hold his left arm under his body, despite being instructed multiple times to place it behind his back. During this time a large crowd was gathering around so Community Police Officers Matt Miller and William Mitchell responded to assist.

The suspect was handcuffed and brought to the ground, where he started spitting and again making rude and profane comments toward the officers. Due to his completely uncooperative and belligerent behavior, the wagon was called to transport the prisoner. When the wagon arrived, the suspect refused to stand up and had to be lifted to his feet by the officers. At one point, the suspect stopped walking and dropped his body weight towards the ground, causing Officer Kelly to fall to the ground and strike his back and head on a cement jersey barrier.

Once the suspect was removed from the scene, Officer Donovan interviewed the manager/caller, who said the suspect threatened to have his "boys come back and shoot up the place." The manager showed the officer a broken door, which was damaged when the suspect shoved an employee in the chest with two hands, causing the employee to stumble back into the door, which caused the glass to shatter and a piece of the door hinge to break. The employee declined to press charges against the suspect for the assault and battery or the threats.

A 20-year-old Dorchester resident was charged with malicious destruction of property over $250, assault and battery on a police officer, and resisting arrest.

Nice Work!

SIXTH GRADE STUDENTS at the Central Middle School got their hands dirty for a great cause last week planting flowers and other plants at the Korean War Memorial at the corner of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway. The students paid tribute to the veterans while sprucing up the memorial that is located adjacent to Veterans' Memorial Stadium and across the street from Central Middle School. The city's Korean War veterans were honored as the grand marshal at Saturday's Flag Day Parade. Photo Courtesy Jayne Magown

Friends Of Rachel Donation

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Friends of Rachel Club recently donated $600 to support the Jimmy Fund. The donation was raised by the group this year and was given to the Jimmy Fund just prior to their annual "Scooper Bowl" event held at Boston's City Hall Plaza. The Friends of Rachel group along with co-advisors Laura Marstjepovic and Keriann Hart attended the all-you-can eat ice cream festival and presented the check at the event. Kenny Sorensen On NECC Academic All-Conference Team

Junior Kenny Sorensen of Quincy, a member of the Eastern Nazarene College men's volleyball team, has earned a spot on the Academic All-New England Collegiate Conference list.

A biochemistry major, Sorensen was one of 17 men's volleyball players from the conference's seven programs to earn the distinction.

A total of 201 student-athletes were named to the NECC Academic All-Conference team for the winter and spring semesters, marking the largest number of recipients for winter and spring sports.

In order to be eligible for NECC Academic All-Conference recognition, a student-athlete must post a minimum grade-point average of 3.40 on a scale of 4.00 and must be a sophomore or higher in class standing.

Sorensen collected All-NECC second team honors at the conclusion of the Lions' inaugural season of competition. He paced the team with 225 kills and 203 digs while adding 39 aces, 17 assists, and nine total blocks on the year.

Eastern Nazarene finished with a 12-10 overall record and a 5-7 league mark in its first year of competition.

Emma Glavin To Play In All-American Softball Games

A Quincy youngster will be suiting up to play in USA Softball's Inaugural All-American Games in the 12U age bracket.

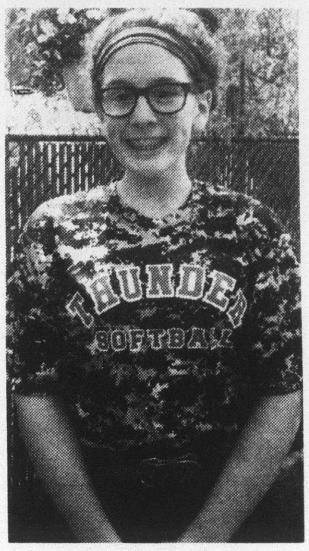
The games are set for Aug. 18-20 at USA Hall of Fame stadium in Oklahoma City, OK.

Emma Glavin, a Quincy resident, has been selected to be a member of the USA Northeast Region team.

The 12-year old has played In-House and Travel softball for QYBSL and she is also a member of a local club team - the Bay State Thunder Softball which plays out of Braintree.

Emma will be one of 40 girls (three teams) representing the Northeast Region which consists of New England/New York/Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Overall, there will be up to 24 teams and 360 athletes from 10 regions across the country participating in the weekend tournament.

Her primary position as a catcher is what earned her an invitation, but she also plays the corner infield positions (3rd and 1st base).



EMMA GLAVIN

When asked about the accomplishment, Emma said:

"It is really exciting to be chosen from so many other girls and it will be an honor to wear the USA uniform - plus it puts me one step closer to my goal to someday play in the Olympics, especially now that women's softball will be back in 2020 Tokyo."

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

MORTAL DANGER

It is often pointed out that four out of five individuals will suffer back pain at some point in their lives. Now, there is new information that may lead us to believe that back pain is as potentially harmful to overall health as it is pervasive. According to a study of nearly 4,400 adult twins aged 70 years and older, those with spinal pain (back and neck) had a 13 percent higher chance every year of dying. This finding should come as significant news to anyone who thinks that back pain is more of a hindrance than it is potentially life-threatening. Spinal pain may be part of a pattern of poor health and poor functional ability, which increase mortality risk.

Regular chiropractic treatments usually focus on spinal manipulation and alignment to aid pain management and stimulate the body's self-healing abilities. Realignment of the spine is thought to reduce pressure on the central nervous system. To schedule an appointment for chiropractic care, please call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy.

P.S. Low back pain is ranked as the highest contributor to disability in the world.

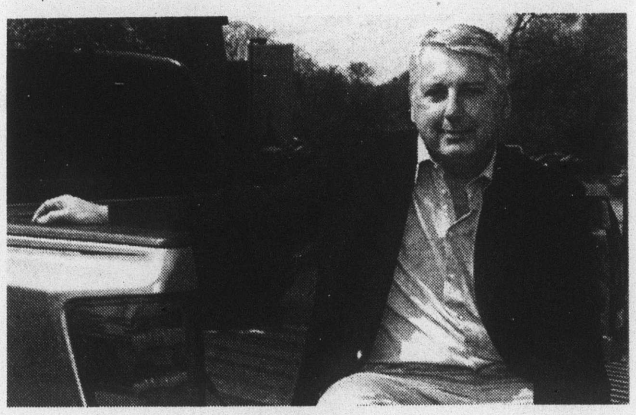
Low Oil Pressure, Tire Pressure Light; CVT Transmissions

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor



JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

I have a 1997 Chevrolet S-10 pickup. The odometer shows just less than 100,000 miles. The engine was taken out to replace the clutch assembly. At the same time a high volume oil pump was installed. Prior to the oil pump being replaced the oil pressure gauge would read zero pressure when at idle. With the new oil pump the oil pressure remains at zero idling. The vehicle does not burn oil. Do you have any suggestions what I can do to fix the problem?

The first place to start is testing the oil pressure with a mechanical gauge just to rule out any misinformation. If the mechanical gauge reads zero then you need to look at the engine itself. Typically main and rod bearing are most responsible for maintaining oil pressure. A worn bearing(s) could be the issue. At this point the next step would be removing the bearing caps and measuring clearances looking for wear.

In 2004 I purchased a Chevy Silverado pick-up. From the very beginning it has been rough shifting, when I complained General Motors gave me an extended warranty which has since expired. When shifting there was a sticky/clunky sensation in the lower gears which has gotten worse lately, other than the transmission issue this has been a good truck. I have had it checked many times at the dealer, no answer, no mention of any service bulletins. The garage that services my truck changed the slip-joint and the universal joints in the driveshaft because of a bulletin that mentioned clunking noises. Nothing much has changed-a little smoother, but not 100 percent of the time. GM will not do anything about this now. Have you heard of this problem?

I have heard of this problem over the years, the answer is there is no real answer. Many shops have replaced the u-joints, lubed everything and even replaced driveshaft and on the four-wheel-drive model the transfer case. The issue/noise as in the case with your truck doesn't seem to affect the longevity of the vehicle which may be why Chevrolet has come up with no real fix for the issue. .

I am considering a Hyundai Tucson 1.6 turbo engine with a dual-clutch transmission. I test drove one and liked it. However, some say to stay away from it because of the transmission. Any input would be appreciated.

Many vehicle manufactures are using dual-clutch transmission some with better success than others. The overall shifting characteristic is different than a conventional automatic transmission with a crisper and at times a bit of a harsh feel. I would rank the Hyundai as one of the better dual-clutch transmissions and combined with Hyundai's 10 year 100,000 mile warranty should take away any long term worries.

You recently had a transmission question from an owner of the 2015 Honda Accord. We own the same car. When driving under light throttle in slow moving local traffic and the traffic increases somewhat in speed our Accord with CVT transmission does not respond at all to added throttle. It's necessary to lift off the accelerator completely off the throttle then squeeze it back down again in order to have the computer downshift the unit and restore normal behavior. Is this an unavoidable feature of CVT transmissions? Is something wrong, or should Honda perhaps provide another software update to the transmission? (There has already been one such update: I don't know what would happen if a driver pushed more and more on the unresponsive throttle. Perhaps the car would suddenly leap ahead and cause an accident.)

I have driven many CVT style transmissions and have never experienced what some Honda owners are experiencing. I believe some of it has to do with the style of driving and how the vehicle reacts. Today, we see CVT transmissions in Nissans, Subaru, Honda and many other vehicles and I find them okay, although I prefer transmissions with actual gears. At this point, I would continue to work with Honda and have them perform any updates as they become available.

I took my 2012 Ford Escape hybrid into a major repair shop for their special $19.99 oil change. Once in the shop I was told, my hybrid wasn't eligible for the basic oil change. I would need to spend $50 additionally for a synthetic oil change package. Is that true? The car's manual lists several different oils and doesn't seem to specify synthetic oil.

Here is what Ford Motor Company states about your hybrid Escape: use of synthetic or synthetic blend motor oil is not mandatory. Engine oil need only meet the requirements of Ford specification WSS-M2C930-A and the API Certification mark. Now over the years I have become a proponent of synthetic oil, I believe it reduces engine wear, reduces friction and allows for easier starting in cold weather.

My last vehicle was a 2012 Silverado Duramax diesel. I used 5-40w full synthetic Rotella T6 for 200,000 miles with no oil used with routine oil changes. Alas I would still be driving it today except the whole vehicle was starting to rot off the engine. My new 2017 Chevrolet Silverado 5.3 liter V-8 gasoline engines specify the Dexos 1, 0W-20 blend oil. To me it seems like General Motors invented the oil and then decided they should design a vehicle to put it in. This seems ridiculous to me! In any event after doing some research I found that Penzoil and some other oil manufacturers make a Dexos 1 fully synthetic oil. In 40 years of driving I have always used synthetic oils with complete satisfaction. What are your thoughts on switching to the full synthetic oil and whatever GM was thinking in reinventing the wheel?

You are correct that Dexos 1 oil is a semi-synthetic and recently various manufacturers have developed full synthetic oil that meets the Dexos 1 specification. As long as the oil meets or exceeds the specification you are complying with the manufacturer's requirement. General Motors did in fact design their engines to use very specific oils and although unusual here in the states, this is a more common practice in Europe. Volkswagen for example required a very specific oil for their engines. This is just the beginning, in the future many engines are being designed to run on 95 octane gasoline. So in fact the gasoline is being developed before the engine. The reason behind this is vehicle emissions and improved fuel economy. In the very near future AAA will be coming out with a synthetic versus conventional oil study.

My dream car is a 1980 Mercedes 450SLC. Is it better to buy one with low miles (40,000) or one that's been well used at say 140,000 miles? A car that sits can be worse off than one that gets run daily or weekly. Assume both have service records. What do you think?

The Mercedes 450SL is a great car and like all 37 year old vehicles it is more about maintenance than mileage. Any low mileage car that didn't see regular service could be in much worse condition than a higher mileage vehicle that was serviced throughout the years. The other issue with a low mileage car, is that part of its value is in the fact it has low mileage is what adds value and the more you drive it (and what is the fun of having a car like this if you don't drive it) the more you chip away at the value. I would look for a well-kept car with moderate mileage and have it checked out by a technician familiar with older Mercedes Benz models.

I took my 2004 Chrysler Crossfire to a local shop for a state inspection and they refused the car because the tire pressure light was on. They checked the entire car, re-inflated the tires and told me the light should go off in 10 miles. Two weeks later the light is still on and my sticker is now overdue. Do you have any suggestions short of taking out the bulb?

The tire pressure monitoring system is a safety system and can't be disabled. Depending where you live the TPMS system may or may not be part of the safety inspection. In Massachusetts where I live the TPMS light and operation of the system is not part of the current inspection program. In Rhode Island where I work, TPMS function and operation is part of the inspection system and a vehicle that comes in with a TPMS light on will fail inspection. At this point the TPMS system needs to be evaluated to see what is wrong. At 13 years old it is possible some of the sensors have started to fail and will need replacing.

I have a BMW 430xi with four winter tires and was wondering when I should swap them over to the summer tires? Do I need to wait until actual summer? When I asked at my local garage they told me to keep them on longer because they are better in wet weather than the summer tires. I feel like they should be changed, help!

Winter tires work as well as they do for two major reasons: tread design and composition of the rubber. When the temperature is cold the rubber compound has much more grip. Summer performance tires go from sticky to hard rubber when the temperature drops below 40 degrees. Since we are solidly into some warmer weather here in the Northeast (I hope) it is safe to switch to your summer tires. Most performance tires work very well in wet weather, but keep in mind even the best tire in heavy rain that ponds on the roadway can lead to hydroplaning.

About two years ago I had a new starter put in my car and now it is acting up. The first starter lasted six years. How long should a replacement last?

Most replacement starters are not new but rebuilt or remanufactured. How long the replacement lasts is really determined by what was replaced in the rebuilt starter and the quality of the replacement parts. I replaced the starter in my car about 16 months ago and it recently failed, fortunately the starter had a limited-lifetime warranty. I was happy it was under warranty and disappointed I had to replace it again.

I have a 2015 Audi Q5. It has approximately 50,000 miles on it. The Audi dealer indicated that the rear brakes will need to be changed in a year. The estimated price I received from the dealer was $750. I feel that this is quite expensive as I have had brake and rotors replaced for half that amount in other cars. Knowing the brakes have sensors in them, is $750 a reasonable price? My follow up question is: can other car mechanics perform the same job with factory Audi parts?

The brake rotors on your vehicle are pricey at $175 each and the brake pads are about $100 for the set. Add in two hours labor to perform the work and it is easy to see how $750 is possible. Certainly any competent technician can perform the repairs but your only real saving would be the difference in the labor rate between an independent shop and a factory dealer. Now of course you could save a little more money with aftermarket parts. If this were something you were tempted to do I would use only a high quality part to prevent any brake noises.

When driving my 2013 Toyota Camry and slowing down I hear a squeezing/squishing noise. The other issue is when I'm stopped there is kind of shivering noise. The car has 45,000 miles on it and it was purchased used. Any thoughts on what could be wrong?

The problem could be related to the power brake booster. This is the part of the brake system that provides the extra "foot" power in the power brake system. As with any brake issue, you should bring the car into a repair shop as soon as possible.

I have a 10 year old Mercury Marquis that my grandpa gave me. The problem is that sometimes it runs rough to the point it almost stalls. Other times it runs great, any ideas?

That vintage Ford/Mercury uses many vacuum controlled devices. I would start by looking and listening for vacuum leaks (hissing). The other common issue with this model is the exhaust gas recirculation (EGR) valve sticks open and causes a very lean engine running condition which can cause the engine to stall.

Reader help: Do you have any suggestions for a compact car (manual, hybrid, electric) with good sight-lines for a 5' 1" driver. If you are vertically challenged and have recently found the perfect new car please email me jpaul@aaanortheast.com.

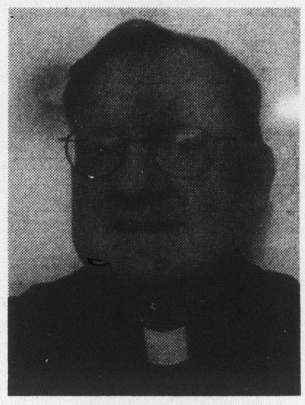
Fr. Martin Dzengeleski New Pastor Catholic Collaborative



FR. MARTIN DZENGELESKI

Fr. Martin Dzengeleski (jen-gel-es-ski) has been named as the new Pastor of the Catholic Collaborative of Holy Trinity Parish to succeed Fr. Robert Carr effective June 1. The transfer of Fr. Carr has been met with both sadness and deep gratitude by the parish for his service to the Holy Trinity Parish community over the last five years.

The June 1st date and the transfer of the two priests to their respective new assignments marks a change in status for Holy Trinity parish from a stand-alone parish consisting of Most Blessed Sacrament church in Houghs Neck and Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merrymount, to the new collaborative model which essentially combines the peninsula parishes, so-called, while also recognizing and incorporating the parishioners and history of the former St. Boniface parish in Germantown.

Fr. Martin hails from Braintree where he grew up and went to school, and where he developed an interest in agriculture which "grew" from working in his father's vegetable garden to employment as a teenager in one of the last working farms in Braintree, now long since sold for development. After high school, Fr. Martin attended the Stockbridge School of Agriculture at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, graduating with a degree in Agricultural Science. For many years after graduation Fr. Martin was the field manager and foreman for Volante Farms in Needham, a large commercial farm-to-table operation in the Needham area.

He began to seriously discern a call to the priesthood in his 30s and entered St. John Seminary College Brighton where he received a degree in philosophy in 1999, followed by further study in the house of Theology at the Seminary where he also received a Masters of Divinity degree. He was ordained to the Priesthood at Holy Cross Cathedral by Cardinal Archbishop Sean O'Malley on May 26, 2007.

Fr. Martin comes to his assignment as Pastor with a rich and varied history of service and ministry. During his seminary years he interned pastorally at Franciscan Children's Hospital, Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital, Metro West Medical Center and in prison ministry at the Billerica House of Correction. Since ordination, he has served as parochial vicar at Holy Name, West Roxbury, St. Patrick's, Watertown and Administrator of St John's, Chelmsford. He comes to Quincy from his most recent assignment as a parochial vicar at the Billerica Collaborative of St. Andrew, St. Mary and St. Theresa parishes.

When he is not engaged in pastoral work Fr. Martin enjoys spending time with his 89-year-old father, Edward, visiting national parks, biking, and photography.

Fr. Martin is eager to master not only the details of day to day operation of the parish, but also to engage the issues and challenges facing the parish and the community at large. Since June 1st he has "hit the ground running" tackling all the business of being a new Pastor with the vigor and purpose that comes from his own love of Priesthood, as expressed in his own words: "Priesthood has been a tremendous blessing for me and I can't imagine a more fulfilling, happier life than as a priest."

OBITUARIES

Elaine Cochrane, 72

A funeral Mass for Elaine (Keefe) Cochrane, age 72, of Quincy, formerly of South Boston, was celebrated June 9 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Cochrane died peacefully after a long and courageous battle with cancer on June 5 at home, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in South Boston to the late Gertrude C. (Stokinger) and Thomas L. Keefe, B.P.D., Retired. She was raised and educated in South Boston and was a graduate of Nazareth High School. She had lived in Quincy for over fifty years and enjoyed winter vacations in Marco Island, Fla., for several years.

She was a well-known waitress at the former Villa Rosa Restaurant in Quincy for over thirty-five years. Mrs. Cochrane was also a dedicated homemaker, devoted to her family and especially to her grandchildren and great-grandson, actively supporting all their activities and accomplishments. She enjoyed gardening, working in the yard and traveling.

Beloved wife for fifty-five years of Edward H. Cochrane. Devoted mother of Edward T. Cochrane of Quincy, Thomas J. Cochrane of Quincy, Judi Borowski and her husband Kevin of Warwick, R.I., and the late James M. "Jamie" Cochrane, Quincy Police Department, and his wife Maria of Quincy. Loving grandmother of Corinna, Jack, Rekelle, Joseph and the late twins, Caroline and Mia Cochrane. Cherished great-grandmother of Cole. Dear sister of Thomas P. Keefe and his wife Arlan of Niantic, Conn. and the late Marie Hartnett and her husband Ted of Quincy. Also survived by many nieces, nephews, grand nieces, grand nephews, cousins and friends.

Interment Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Officer Jamie Cochrane Memorial Scholarship Fund for deserving Quincy students, c/o Eastern Bank, 34 Chapman St., Quincy, MA 02170 or to the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, MA 02169.

My Dad

If I could write a story
It would be the greatest ever told
Of a kind and loving father
Who had a heart of gold
If I could write a million pages
But still be unable to say, just how Much I love and miss him
Every single day
I will remember all he taught me
I'm hurt but won't be sad
Because he'll send me down the answers
And he'll always be MY DAD

Dad, I'm missing you...Your son, Declan

Barbara J. duJardin

Visiting hours for Barbara Joan (Le Cornu) duJardin were 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. duJardin was born on March 5, 1933. She was born in Guernse, Channel Islands. Her parents were John Thomas and Joan Le Cornu from Guernsey. She had 2 sisters and a brother who predeceased her.

Mrs. duJardin was married in 1957 to the late Percival James duJardin from Manchester, England. She is survived by her loving son James and his wife, Elaine of Quincy. She is also survived by 3 stepchildren, Ann Sylvestre, Robert duJardin and Gary duJardin and their many children and grandchildren who still reside in Guernsey. Through her many trips to Guernsey, Mrs. duJardin remained beloved by this extended family.

When the Channel Islands were occupied by Germans in WWII, Mrs. duJardin was among a group of Guernsey children sent to London for their safety. She spent the blitz being rushed to London underground stations during bombings. She was twice buried under rubble and had to be dug out by the civil brigade. Not surprisingly London was never her favorite city! She did however learn sewing and tailoring from the primary seamstress to the royal family. These skills served her family and her neighbors well, as she would make original Halloween costumes and christening gowns, wedding dresses for all who asked.

Sewing was not her only skill. Mrs. duJardin was also a skilled hair stylist who owned and operated her own shop, Babs Coiffeurs in North Quincy, for many years.

"No matter how talented, rich or intelligent you are, how you treat animals tells me all I need to know about you." All you need to know about Mrs. duJardin was that from ants to zebras, she never met a critter she couldn't love and care for. Dogs and cats petitioned the courts to be adopted by her. She met her best friend, Jean, when she stepped in to nurse her dog Puto after his fight with a pit bull. She was a familiar figure at the local markets buying chicken and the occasional T-Bone steak on sale for her dog Fenway.

The family is eternally grateful to Debra Beaton who provided such compassionate care to Mrs. duJardin in her final days; Mrs. duJardin loved her dearly.

Mrs. duJardin will never be forgotten by those of us who experienced her kindness and generosity. Her credentials as a mother and an advocate for all animals cannot be faulted.

Memorial donations may be made to South Shore Hospice or the Milton Animal Hospital.

Maureen J. Barber

A funeral Mass for Maureen J. (Vince) Barber, of Quincy, formerly of Dublin, Ireland, was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Barber died June 6 surrounded by her loving family.

Beloved wife of the late Erik Barber. Devoted mother of Malcolm Barber and his wife Geraldine, Tanya Adamson and her husband Paul, Erica Pittman and her husband Christopher, and Nadia Barber, all of Quincy. Loving sister of Joan Costello, George Vince, and Theresa Donaghey, all of Ireland. Cherished grandmother of Erik, Brooke, Michael, Heidi, Ellareen, and Theodore. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

MAUREEN J. BARBER

Interment at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Boston.

Brother-in-law to Marianne DeCelles of Tewksbury, Michael Nardelli, Jr. of Woburn, Susan Nardelli of Hudson, NH, Stephen Nardelli (Cathy) of Hudson, NH, and Judi Scalley (David) of Twin Mountain, NH.

Mr. Moran was blessed to have many life-long loyal and loving friends. A graduate of Franklin Institute in Boston, he was employed as a diesel mechanic at Eversource (N. Star) Corporation for 33 years. Proud union member of Local 369.

Mr. Moran enjoyed vintage General Motors cars from 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. He especially enjoy his August vacations in Prince Edward Island, Canada, where he visited with his large extended family of cousins and told a story or two on more than one occasion. He was also a member of North Quincy Knights of Columbus #2259.

Visiting hours are 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held in the funeral at 9:45 a.m. Friday, prior to the Mass.

Memorial donations may be made to Special Olympics, 1133 19th Street NW, 12th Floor, Washington, DC 20036-3604.

Barbara J. McCormack, 86

Funeral services for Barbara J. (Smith) McCormack, age 86, a longtime resident of Quincy, were private.

Mrs. McCormack died peacefully at home on May 31, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston and at the age of fourteen moved to Quincy's Houghs Neck neighborhood. She went on to raise her family in Houghs Neck, living there for fifty years. Mrs. McCormack lived at Granite Place in Quincy for the past twenty years.

As a mother and homemaker, she was dedicated to her family and especially to her grandchildren and great grandchildren. Over the years, she actively supported their many activities and accomplishments. Mrs. McCormack enjoyed travelling, especially trips to Florida with her friends.

Beloved wife of the late Charles R. McCormack, Jr., Quincy Police Dept., Retired. Devoted mother of Patricia M. McCormack of Braintree, Mark P. Police Lt. Found Guilty days and jurors deliberated for about seven hours on Friday and Monday.

The charge of mail fraud provides for a sentence of up to 20 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000. The charge of fraud involving federal funds provides for a sentence of up to 10 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of 250,000. Sentences are imposed by a federal district court judge based upon the U.S. sentencing guidelines and other statutory factors.

Corliss had been off duty since September 2015, when he was placed on paid administrative leave pending an internal investigation into the hours and details he put in for. The investigation began after an officer brought his concerns about Corliss to others in the department.

Koch imposed a six-month unpaid suspension in December 2015 following the investigation. The internal investigation, Keenan said at the time, found 21 instances of Corliss working city time overlapping with private details and/or other city time and that the lieutenant took nine vacation days that were not recorded in department attendance records. The value of those incidents, according to Keenan, was $11,000.

As part of Corliss' punishment, the mayor also reassigned the lieutenant away from his post as commander of the Special Operations Unit. Additionally, Corliss was barred from working details for 12 months and forfeited 20 vacation days.

Corliss was placed on paid administrative leave in June 2016 after the six-month suspension ran its course. He was indicted by a federal grand jury on the fraud charges in August of that year; Koch suspended him without pay two days after the indictment was unsealed.

Corliss was sworn-in as a Quincy police officer in 1993 and promoted to lieutenant in 2004. He was the commanding officer of the Special Operations Unit from 2005 until being stripped of that post in December 2015.

Corliss received $265,568 in compensation in 2015, according to the federal indictment, including $83,383 in salary, $27,580 in additional salary because of his educational degree, $104,498 in overtime and detail pay, a uniform/clothing stipend of $1,912, a stipend for meals and weekend differential pay of $1,572, a yearly stipend for reading for $4,169, and cashed-in, unused vacation days totaling $4,035.

Car Dealership Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's licensing board paved the way for a used car dealership to open in Quincy Point with up to 50 vehicles available for sale on its lot.

The Board of License Commissioners on June 6 approved Hy Motors Inc.'s request for a motor II used car license for 134 E. Howard St., previously home to Hajjars Auto World and Yaz's Place; the latter, a bar, had its licensed revoked by the board in July 2015 days after a man was stabbed on the premises.

Ion Bulmagh, Hy Motors' manager, said the new dealership had agreed to lease the entire property. The lot on site has room for 66 vehicles. Fifty of those spaces will be used for vehicles on sale, 10 will be for Hy Motors' customers and staff, and the remaining six are leased out to Yellow Cab.

Hy Motors will have its offices in the space that formerly housed Yaz's Place. The company might sublease part of the building on site in the future to a third party, Bulmagh said, but would only do so to a business with a low-traffic impact, like a storage company.

The new dealership will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

No repairs will take place at the East Howard Street location, Bulmagh said. Hy Motors is currently located at 36 W. Howard St., and will continue to repair vehicles at that location.

In other business June 6, the Board of License Commissioners:

Approved a request for an alteration of premise for Hot Water LLC d/b/a The Water Club, at 319 Victory Rd. in Marina Bay. The owners plan to extend the restaurant farther out onto the boardwalk, but will not be adding any additional seats.

Approved an alteration of premise for PJC of Massachusetts d/b/a Rite Aid, 132 Granite St., allowing the store to add additional coolers for alcoholic beverages.

Also approved was a request for a change of manager from Nicholas Pfieler to Alison Beam.

Approved a common victualler license for JW Tea Inc. d/b/a Oh My Tea, 1441 Hancock St. New owner Xiao Wi Lu has taken over the business but plans to keep the operations the same, including the menu and hours.

Approved a one-day special use permit for the second annual Victoria Schuerch Memorial Walk on Sept. 9 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Houghs Neck.

Allowed Boston Maya Corp. d/b/a Danny's Hardware, 53 Billings Rd., to withdraw without prejudice a request for a license to sell propane. Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson said current location is too small to sell propane under state code. Jackson further noted the building was inspected by the Fire Department, and inspectors found two empty fire hydrants, a blocked back exit and emergency lights that were not on.

May RE Sales Better Than Expected

"As I have said many times one foreclosure filing is one too many," O'Donnell said. "With that said, I am heartened by the reduced foreclosure activity seen in Norfolk County. Please be aware the Registry continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950.

"These two non-profits are there to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333."

In summation, O'Donnell said:

"Considering where we are in Norfolk County with low real estate inventory, I was pleasantly surprised by the upsurge of May's real estate sales numbers. However, an important factor we need not overlook is the continued desire of individuals and families to live and work in Norfolk County. The strong quality of life and sound economy in eastern Massachusetts should be able to sustain the local real estate market through the rest of 2017."

66th Annual Flag Day Parade

QUINCY'S FLAG DAY Parade also featured several bands and specialty units including (clockwise from left) - Quincy Fire Department Color Guard with department mascot "Sparky;" combined Quincy-North Quincy High Schools marching band; Revolutionary War militia re-enactors; and a float with local residents promoting the city's Quincy 400 Initiative that will commemorate the 400th anniversary of Quincy's initial settlement of 1625 in the year 2025.

Hancock Lot Closing Early 2018

For Construction Of Two Mixed-Use Developments, Municipal Parking Garage

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy Center's Hancock Lot will close in the first quarter of 2018 with construction of two mixed-use developments – with 295 apartments and 19,000 square feet of retail space between them – and a municipal parking garage with room for 730 vehicles underway.

William Geary, Mayor Thomas Koch's special counsel for downtown development, on June 15 said the Hancock Lot would close entirely for construction of the garage and the mixed-use projects – Peter O'Connell's 124-unit Chestnut Place on the Dennis Ryan Parkway and LBC Partners' 171-unit Nova Residences at 1500 Hancock St. The City Council has approved land disposition agreements with each developer; LBC has received approval from the Planning Board as well, while O'Connell's project is pending before the board and could be approved as early as Wednesday.

Councillors Croall, Palmucci Vote Against Borrowing To Pay For New 730-Car Garage On Hancock Lot

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday night approved borrowing $80 million to pay for a new 730-car garage on the Hancock Lot and other improvements needed to support the redevelopment of Quincy Center.

The council approved Mayor Thomas Koch's request for the $80 million bond in a 7-2 vote, with Councillors Brad Croall and Brian Palmucci voting against it. The bond includes funding for the garage, infrastructure improvements necessary for the redevelopment of the Hancock and Ross parking areas, and several land takings. The City Council will hold a special session next Monday, June 26, at 6:30 p.m. on the land takings, which require additional approvals.

The garage is the largest piece of the bond, with a total price tag of $45.3 million.

The garage structure is projected to cost $29.9 million and the city also expects to spend $1 million on a custom façade for the facility. Other costs associated with garage construction in the bond measure include $3.2 million for final design and engineering; $3.5 million for site work, including construction of access ways to the facility; $2.3 million to relocate a century-old storm drain under the Hancock Lot; $1.6 million in environmental work, including soil and groundwater management; and $3.8 million for escalation and contingency.

Croall and Palmucci advocated for a less costly alternative at Monday's meeting, which would have saved nearly $8 million by eliminating the subterranean level of the garage and making it one-story taller, losing three parking spaces as a result.

Wes Wilson of Desman Associates, the Chicago-based firm helping plan the new garage, said eliminating the subterranean level would reduce maintenance and operation costs because the basement level requires

School Water Quality Now In Compliance

By TOM GORMAN

Following months of upgrading plumbing systems to address high lead levels, water quality in the city's public schools is now meeting standards and officials are striving to lower the levels beyond the standards.

"As of this date, we are in full compliance with state and federal law with the water in the bubblers and classroom faucets," Commissioner of Public Buildings Paul Hines told the school committee on June 14.

Last fall, tests revealed elevated levels of lead in water samples taken from water fountains and sinks in many of the district's schools. Affected bubblers were immediately shut off and sinks were labeled for hand washing only. A total of 126 fixtures were affected.

The city council appropriated $275,000 earlier this year to address the problem and upgrade water systems in all of the city's 20 school buildings by the first day of school in the fall. Work is continuing and will go through the summer.

Workers, however, have run into some obstacles in trying to finish the project in a timely manner. Hines explained that the main service valves in the street at many of the schools are broken preventing workers from simply shutting off the water supply so they can replace fixtures during overnight hours.

"We have to shut the building down, drain the building, replace those valves and recharge the building and have it ready for school," he said. "So, we have that delay."

Despite that glitch, Hines said the project will be completed by the first day of school.

"It's a challenge, but we are advancing," he said. "We have absolute confidence that we will meet our task. We still have our goal for the fall to be completed."

A significant portion of the work has been completed at the Bernazanni and Lincoln-Hancock schools, according to Hines. He noted that the city's appropriation is funding an on-call mechanical and plumbing service that will be used this summer to augment crews working in the schools to speed up the work.

Hines said the priority is replacing the bubblers that were found with the elevated lead levels. He noted that bottled water was been brought into the affected schools when water fountains were shut down.

"Our first goal is the water bubblers," he said. "That's the most significant risk. We have bottled water in the schools so that the bubblers that were taken offline do not impact the students. They have the fresh bottled water available to them."

Affected sinks in classrooms, nurses' offices and food preparation areas are

Quincy Students Win MWRA Video, Writing, Poster Contests

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announces six Quincy students have won MWRA's annual video, writing and poster contests.

Theresa McMillen, Nichold Salvatore and Daniel Driscoll, students at Quincy High School, won first place in the video contest for their video, "Rain or Shine."

Caitin O'Regan, grade 7 at the Atlantic Middle School, won second place in the writing contest, and Kobe Khuong, grade 7 won honorable mention.

Vera Killorin, a kindergarten student at the Beechwood Knoll School, won honorable mention in the poster contest (shown with this story).

This year, students across the MWRA service area were challenged to create posters, essays and videos about how MWRA workers do their jobs in all kinds of weather. An awards ceremony was held May 26 at the Deer Island Treatment Plant. State Rep. Takey Chan attended the ceremony and presented the winners with special citations. All of the winning videos, posters and essays are on the MWRA website.

Palmucci Eyes Changes To Reduce Property Tax Burden On Homeowners

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced a pair of measures Monday that he hopes will reduce the property tax burden on homeowners who reside in the city.

The first item he proposed is a home rule petition that would enable Quincy to tax privately-owned, for-profit apartment complexes with 50 or more units at the commercial rate instead of the residential rate. The second item is a resolution asking Mayor Thomas Koch's administration to work with the council to craft an ordinance that would give residents who own and occupy their own home an exemption on a portion of their property taxes.

Both items were referred to committee for further review. Monday night's meeting was the final regular council meeting before the body recesses for the summer.

The home rule petition would require approval from the Legislature. If approved on Beacon Hill, the mayor and council would then have to separately vote to tax the apartment complexes at the commercial rate, which is higher than the residential rate. The 2017 tax rate on commercial properties in Quincy is $28.71 per $1,000 of assessed value, while the residential rate is $14.17. The change would not affect

Fourth Candidate In Ward 6 Field

A fourth resident has begun circulating nomination papers to run for the Ward 6 seat on the City Council.

Steven Striffler, a Huckins Avenue resident, pulled papers for the seat on June 16.

Incumbent William Harris of Ashworth Road is seeking his second term on the council. The other two residents to pull papers for the seat are H.A. 'Alie' Shaughnessy of Essex Street and Ashly Eikelberg of Quincy Shore Drive.

The residents must collect the signatures of 50 voters who reside in the district, which includes Squantum, Marina Bay and parts of North Quincy, by July 25. If more than two candidates qualify for the ballot, a preliminary election would be held Sept. 12.

The final election is set for Tuesday, Nov. 7.

EXPANSIVE DIAMOND SETTING

One of the most elegant and eye-catching settings is the "pavé" setting, which refers to the French word for "paved." In fact, it is a setting that resembles a cobblestone street of diamonds that are set together in clusters without any visible prongs holding them in place. The result is an expanse of small diamonds held tightly together in a configuration without spaces or metal showing between them. The setting can be flat or dome-shaped and may be constructed so that the piece appears to be one large single stone. Work of this fine detail is very demanding and requires a high degree of expertise. The result of such effort is sufficiently dramatic to warrant the higher cost.

The diamond collection at Rogers Jewelry contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. School Water Quality In Compliance also being remediated as part of the project.

Although the water quality is now in compliance, Hines said that the city, on the direction of Mayor Thomas Koch, is working to bring the lead levels well below the state and federal 15 ppb (parts per billion) standard.

"We are taking it further than that (standards) to bring our lead in the water level to no more than .05 ppb which is substantially less than is the standard," said Hines. "A bottle of pure mineral spring water has up to 15 ppb. We are going for a third of that."

School committee member Anne Mahoney asked Hines to update the committee during the summer on the progress of the project, saying that parents are concerned over the issue.

"Maybe by the middle of summer if we have an idea of where we are at with the schools," she said. "Potentially you could be complete, but if you are not complete and what school is not, any accurate information would help with any communication with the parents."

The state requires districts to test water in schools periodically for lead. Two samples are taken from each fixture and the samples are sent out for testing.

Health officials say that preschool and elementary-aged children are at the highest risk of developing health issues from ingesting water with high levels of lead including kidney, brain and red blood cell damage.

Last year, the state legislature earmarked $2 million from the Massachusetts Clean Water Trust to pay for water testing in schools statewide. The monies help with testing, upgrading infrastructure and providing training to school officials on the issue.

Pedestrian Struck, Killed On Quincy Shore Dr.

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 45-year-old Quincy man was struck and killed by a vehicle Friday night on Quincy Shore Drive.

Massachusetts State Police were called to Quincy Shore Drive at Alstead Street shortly before 10:15 p.m. Friday for reports of pedestrian struck by a vehicle. The pedestrian was reported to have serious injuries.

Upon arrival, Troopers James DeAngelis and Ryan McLeod discovered that a 2005 Saab 93, operated by a 31-year-old man from Quincy, struck a pedestrian. The pedestrian, identified as Scott D. Rooney, 45, of Quincy was transported to Boston Medical Center where he was pronounced deceased as a result of injuries sustained from the crash.

State police closed two lanes of traffic as they responded to the scene and the subsequent follow-up investigation. They re-opened around 2 a.m. Saturday.

The remaining facts and circumstances of the crash are currently under investigation by troopers from the State Police South Boston Barracks and Troop H Headquarters in South Boston. State Police Crime Scene Services Section (CSSS), State Police Collision Analysis Reconstruction Section (CARS), State Police Troop H Headquarters, Quincy Police Department, and Quincy Fire Department all assisted on scene.

The name of the driver of the Saab will not be released until the investigation determines if charges will be filed.

Quincy Officer Credited For Saving Suicidal Man

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy police officer is being credited for helping save the life of a suicidal man who threatened to throw himself over a bridge and into traffic in Kingston.

Lt. Daniel Minton praised Officer Ryan Donnelly – a member of the Quincy Police Department for more than 11 years – for his actions in a letter to Police Chief Paul Keenan.

Donnelly, who was off duty at the time, was traveling on Route 3A headed toward Plymouth shortly before 5 p.m. on June 11 when he noticed two motorcycles pulled over near the Route 3 overpass.

As Donnelly slowed down, he observed a man hanging off of a fence over the northbound traffic of Route 3, Minton said. He pulled over, exited his truck and observed the male crying and yelling. Donnelly spoke with one of the bystanders who was talking with the man. He told the bystander that he is a police officer and a crisis negotiator and was going to take over the scene.

"Donnelly then walked closer to the distraught man and could see that he was upset and shaking. He was barefoot and was clinging to the fence with his fingers and toes through the holes," Minton said.

Donnelly began speaking with the man, using his training, and learned that because of a series of life-changing events, the man said that he was a failure and wanted to die.

"Donnelly reassured the man that the issues could be worked out; however, the man kept threatening 'I'm going to jump in front of the next truck I see,'" Minton said.

The traffic coming north on Route 3 was not slowing because the operators could not see the man dangling from the bridge. The man began crying again and asked for a cigarette. One of the bystanders handed Donnelly a cigarette, who then told the man that if he came back over the fence he could have all the cigarettes he wanted and they could talk the problems out.

After about a minute of considering the offer, the man began to climb back over the fence. Once he was half way over the fence, Donnelly reached over and with the help of other bystanders, grabbed the man so that he would not have a second chance to jump. Donnelly and bystanders consoled the man and awaited the arrival of the Kingston Police Department. Minutes later, four Kingston police Officers arrived along with the Kingston Fire Department ambulance. The man was then escorted into the ambulance and transported to the hospital.

"Without the prompt and professional response of Officer Donnelly, the distraught man may have jumped before emergency response personnel could have intervened," Minton said.

Scenes From Yesterday

Metropolitan Police Station, W. QUINCY, Mass.

THIS IS A 1916 postcard view of the old Metropolitan Police station on the corner of Cross Street and Furnace Brook Parkway in West Quincy. This was one of two police stations built on the new Metropolitan Parkway that was built through Quincy at that time. The other one was on Wollaston Beach. The road ran from Atlantic along Wollaston Beach to Black's Creek and then on to the Blue Hills Reservation. This was part of the extensive Metropolitan Park and roadway system built throughout Boston and its surrounding communities. The policeman in the doorway was an example of the original community-policing concept. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Uncontested GOP Primary Slate

Massachusetts Republicans picked a slate that is expected to run uncontested in the Sept. 13 primary. The stakes are high because a U.S. Senate seat that has been Leverett Saltonstall's since 1945 will have a new occupant in 1967 and because the state's Constitutional Officers will be elected in November for four-year terms for the first time in the state's history.

The Republican nominees included Governor John Volpe for re-election as governor; for Lt. Governor, Francis W. Sargent; Attorney General Edward W. Brooke for U.S. Senate, and Lt. Governor Elliot L. Richardson for Attorney General. The ticket was rounded out to include Raymond Trudel, Secretary of State, Joseph Fernandes for State Treasurer and John Buckley for State Auditor.

QUINCY HOSPITAL'S NURSING SCHOOL RE-ACCREDITED

The Quincy City Hospital Nursing School was accredited for another six-year period according to Hospital Director Harlan L. Paine, Jr. He said hospital officials have been notified of the accreditation, which has been continued by the National League for Nursing through 1972. The six-year accreditation is the maximum attainable. The League inspected the school's facilities in March. A class of 46 students was scheduled to graduate on July 28 and 56 students were scheduled to enter the school Sept. 14.

COUNCIL, SCHOOL BOARD CLASH OVER DRAIN PROJECT PAYMENT

A drain which crosses Faxon Field near the new Vocational-Technical School is the latest cause for friction between the city council and the school committee. Some $72,000 was spent on the drain project and charged to the School Construction Account when it should have been charged to the city account. The school committee wanted the money back. The council balked at paying back the monies.

Quincy Climate Action Network Thanks City Council

For the second time in as many months, the Quincy City Council has spoken out for the future of our planet, as well as sound fiscal management and Quincy residents' health.

On May 1, councillors passed a resolution on the use of electric vehicles in our city fleet, which would save the city money, help clean up the air we breathe, and help reduce the emissions of the greenhouse gases that are causing worldwide climate change. Then on June 5, they passed a resolution related to the justly unpopular plans for the Fore River gas compressor station.

A report commissioned by Attorney General Maura Healey has found that Massachusetts simply doesn't need more gas, lending credence to suspicions that the gas that would be pumped by the new compressor is intended for Europe, not for us. Meanwhile, academic studies have found that, because of leaks at wellheads and in transmission and distribution pipelines, fracked gas is just as bad as coal in its effect on climate.

As to the proposed compressor station, the June 5 city council resolution points out that limited monitoring in the Fore River Basin by Curtis Nordgaard, M.D., M. Sc. has found that a witches' brew of toxins are already in the air in that neighborhood, several of them known to increase the risk of leukemia, liver cancer, aplastic anemia, and bone marrow damage, among other ailments. The levels of these toxins found by Dr. Nordgaard far exceed those predicted by Spectra, the corporation proposing the compressor station, and levels of most exceed those deemed safe under state guidelines. With air so toxic, why would Quincy want to add yet another pollution source such as the compressor station?

Because reliable air pollution figures are essential for predicting the overall hazard to public health posed by the compressor project, the city council resolution calls on the state Department of Environmental Protection to monitor the air near the compressor site, starting immediately. It also enumerates a number of sound reasons why the state should deny a waterways license to the project, and it calls for the passage of Senate Bill 469, cosponsored by Quincy's Sen. John Keenan. Should this important bill be enacted into law, it would prohibit the siting of compressor stations within a half mile of any church, school, playground, daycare center, protected waterway, residential area, or environmental justice neighborhood.

On behalf of Quincy Climate Action Network, I'd like to thank the city council, and especially Councillors Margaret Laforest and Brad Croall, the cosponsors of the June 5 resolution, for weighing in on an issue that's so crucial to the health of Quincy residents and to the planet we all live on.

Hirings Follow Civil Service Guidelines

In response to the recent comments in the Letter to the Editor entitled "Where's The Diversity?" I assume the writer did his homework and researched information giving him the number of non-white and female applicants who applied for those positions on the Quincy fire dept. It would also be fair to check their scores.

If there is a discrepancy he is certainly in his rights to make an issue of the results.

If not, he should not be pointing fingers of racism and misogyny at City Hall without some facts. I do believe those hirings come under the Civil Service Act which have the ultimate say.

'John Quincy Adams: A Spirit Unconquerable'

Jim Cooke Performs June 29 At United First Parish Church

By SCOTT JACKSON

Actor Jim Cooke will take audience members on a theatrical journey through the last decade in the life of John Quincy Adams in a one-man performance based on the diaries of the sixth U.S. president.

Cooke will perform in "John Quincy Adams: A Spirit Unconquerable" at 7 p.m. on June 29 in the sanctuary of the United First Parish Church, Quincy Center. The hour-long performance will be followed a talk-back session with Cooke and audience members will have a chance to tour the Adams crypt, the final resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Adams.

The performance is free to public and is being offered as part of the church's celebration of the 250th anniversary of the birth of John Quincy Adams. It is being offered with the support of Discover Quincy.

Cooke said he presents Adams as he is sitting for what he believes will be his final portrait. The artist taking the photograph, who is unseen, invites audience members in to watch his work in progress and converse with Adams.

Among the highlights of the performance is Adams' fight against the gag rule in the U.S. House of Representatives that prevented congressmen from discussing the abolition of slavery. Adams, who was elected to Congress after his term as president, successfully had the gag rule repealed.

"Under the gag rule, you could not discuss slavery and it is something that angered John Quincy so much that he worked for eight years to defeat it," Cooke said.

The performance also features The Amistad case before the Supreme Court, Adams' fight to ensure money left to the United States by James Smithson went to its original purpose and was not siphoned off, which led to the Smithsonian Institution's founding, and Adams visit to Cincinnati to dedicate the nation's first astronomical observatory, something the sixth president wanted built in the U.S. after seeing them throughout Europe as a diplomat.

Additionally, Cooke said Adams wrote a lot of poetry in his later years, and those are incorporated into the performance as well.

Cooke, a Quincy resident, has been portraying Adams for about 15 years. He started doing so not only because he and the sixth president look alike, but also because he was impressed with how much Adams accomplished in the last 10 years of his life.

"He is a tremendous example of what a man can do at the end of his life if he really tries," Cooke said.

Cooke has portrayed Adams across the U.S. and also made appearances on C-SPAN and NPR. In 2007, the U.S. State Department sent Cooke to Russia for a ten-day tour, with stops in Moscow and St. Petersburg among others, as part of the celebration of the bicentennial of diplomatic relations between the two countries. Adams was the United States' first ambassador to Russia.

Cooke, who has acted and directed for various Boston theater groups, has been performing solo history since 1985. He presented "Calvin Coolidge: More Than Two Words" that year – he no longer portrays the 30th president – and has also presented "Daniel Webster: I Still Live" and "Edward Everett: The Other Speaker At Gettysburg."

The Founding Fathers had the radical idea that a government should be for the people.

Today, America's 400 plus National Parks represent this exact idea. Join Adams National Historical Park at the "Continental Congress" to debates, defend, compromise, and consider the meaning of independence.

Experience history through the performing arts as two of our nation's most celebrated Founding Fathers, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson and Founding Mother, Abigail Adams, are saluted in the stage play: Jefferson and Adams, by Howard Ginsberg.

There will also be a reading of the Declaration of Independence and a celebration of the 241st anniversary of the adoption of this historic document.

July 4 activities include:

Independence Forever: The Continental Congress
2 to 3:30 p.m.
The Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and re-enact the passage of the Declaration of Independence in the Adams Carriage House. This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the debate about whether to remain loyal to the British crown, or to create a new nation.

The Reading of the Declaration of Independence
3:30 to 4 p.m.

Join the delegates at John Adams's Old House at Peace field and lend your voice to the ceremonial reading of the Declaration of Independence.

Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play
4 to 6 p.m.
The Beale House, 181 Adams St., Quincy

Witness a compelling dramatization of the friendship between John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Abigail Adams. Colonial Williamsburg reenactors Bill Barker and Abigail Schumann join actor Sam Goodyear in bringing to life the 50-year relationship – often contentious, sometimes turbulent, and ultimately enduring – of this dynamic trio who hold forth on life, love, and loss in their now famous correspondence.

The play will take place under the tent at the neighboring Beale House.

The day's events are free and open to the public.

There is limited street parking. A free trolley from the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center (Presidents Place Galleria, 1250 Hancock St.) will be available. Validated parking is located on the 4th and 5th floors in the Galleria Parking Garage.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of the 2nd and 6th presidents of the U.S., John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with the Old House at Peace field, home to both presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

During the open season, April 19 through Nov. 10, tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy. A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field for a two and a half hour tour. The first tour leaves at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays.

Tickets are $10 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

For a listing of tours and events visit the park website at www.np..gov/adam, or call (617) 770-1175.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton Awards $6,000 In Community Health Grants

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) recently awarded three human service agencies in Quincy $6,000 in grants to help support programs that address the hospital's community health priorities.

BID-Milton awarded a $2,000 community health grant to Quincy Community Action Programs for nutrition education workshops for families in the Head Start Program. The workshops, known as "Tasty Tuesdays," will provide an overview of healthy eating habits, nutrition and childhood development, meal planning/budgeting and a cooking demonstration/tasting.

The hospital also awarded a $2,000 grant to DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), Inc. for the translation, design and production of brochures and materials to promote awareness about domestic violence and resources available for the Chinese community.

Finally, the hospital awarded a $2,000 community health grant to Father Bill's and MainSpring to assist in connecting homeless individuals with health care services at the shelter.

"People who live in Quincy have long used the health care services at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton, and the hospital is committed to improving the health of the city's residents," said Rich Fernandez, president and CEO of the hospital. "These community health grants will help support these three vital agencies in improving the health and well-being of countless individuals in the Quincy community.

The hospital's Community Health Grant Program distributes grants each spring to non-profit agencies and organizations throughout the region to help support programs that address one of the hospital's community health priorities. These priorities are identified through a comprehensive Community Health Needs Assessment which the hospital conducts every three years. The last assessment, conducted in 2016, identified the community's health priorities as behavioral health resources, chronic disease management, healthy aging and access to care.

During the last eight years the hospital has awarded an estimated $75,000 to 37 community organizations through the grant program.

Lamb Tart

By MARIE

There are so many different ways of using lamb. My daughter, Rita, made a delicious lamb tart out of her left overs and when she brought me a slice to try I decided to share this easy and tasty treat with all of you.

Also with this recipe you can use ham, chicken or any favorite.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

RECIPE:

1 9-inch pie crust (I bought mine)
6 ounces of fresh mushrooms, chopped
1 small onion chopped
1 to 2 cups of leftover lamb (whatever you have on hand)
½ cup of cream
2 table spoons of olive oil
1 egg beaten - for egg- wash topping

In the hot oil sauté onion, add the chopped mushrooms, then sauté for a few minutes until onion is translucent.

Add the lamb mix well. Then add the cream and mix until well blended.

On a cookie sheet lay out the crust in a round circle. In the center of the crust, place the lamb mixture.

Fold all around the edge making a tart, the center will not be covered. Brush the crust with egg wash.

Bake at 425 degrees for 10 minutes and then reduce oven heat to 350 degrees and bake tart until lightly browned. Tarts can be served topped with arugula.

Hummus Made With Fava Beans

By SUSIE

In addition to being a lean protein choice with lots of fiber, fava beans contain vitamin K, vitamin B6, zinc, copper, iron, magnesium and more.

If that isn't enough, they're also some of the top high-folate foods around. You gain 177 micrograms of folate in just one cup of cooked fava beans!

That is why I am showing you this delicious recipe for hummus made with fava beans rather than chick peas.

DIRECTIONS

In a blender, or food processor, mix 2 cups cooked fava beans, 2 minced garlic cloves, and ¼ cup extra virgin olive oil with half of an avocado, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and some sea salt.

Mix until blended.

This is great on a baguette with some sliced radishes and fresh herbs sprinkled on the top. Enjoy!

Mike Marre Participates In Best Buddies Challenge

Quincy resident Mike Marre participated in the annual Best Buddies Challenge in Hyannis Port on June 3.

As a first-time participant on Team Natixis, Marre raised $5,000 toward the total $200,000 raised by Team Natixis, which was sponsored by Marre's employer Natixis Global Asset Management.

Natixis supports the Best Buddies mission to bring opportunities and inclusion to people with intellectual and developmental disabilities and took the "I'm In To Hire" pledge in 2011, hiring Untwon Jones in Boston and Natalie Spring in San Francisco through the program.

"Although I'd never run a 5k before, I was happy to do my part to raise money and awareness for Best Buddies," said Marre. "Seeing Untwon at the finish line was all the inspiration I needed."

Carfentanil -The Next Deadly Street Drug

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-F

In August 2016, at least 96 heroin users overdosed in one brutally, destructive week in a single county in Ohio. It was determined that they were not only victims of their addictions to heroin, but of a synthetic opioid that some drug dealers are adding to the narcotic to give it an even more powerful and entirely deadly boost; Carfentanil. Massachusetts State Police are cautioning that this exceedingly dangerous opioid has been found in the state. This is the first time the opioid has been seen in Massachusetts and authorities want to forewarn the public and first responders about its extreme lethal potential. Previously, the DEA has found the drug in a number of states: Florida, Georgia, Rhode Island, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, West Virginia, New Jersey and Illinois, and the agency is still tracking its presence and its proliferation.

Carfentanil is the most potent commercial opioid in the world, according to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency. It is 10,000 times stronger than morphine, and at least 100 times more powerful than the similar opioid, fentanyl. Carfentanil's only officially established use is to sedate large zoo animals like moose, buffalo and elephants. It takes just two milligrams of Carfentanil to anesthetize a 2,000-pound elephant, and the veterinarians who administer the drug utilize gloves and face masks to prevent exposure to it. Keep in mind a dose the size of a grain of salt could kill a person and may be lethal even when absorbed through the skin. The presence of Carfentanil is a novel and perilous dilemma for first responders. In many law enforcement agencies, only specially trained officers are allowed to handle any suspected Carfentanil. It possesses the ability to be absorbed through the skin or inhaled, posing a threat to the public, first responders and laboratory workers. In many cities, it is standard practice for police to do roadside test kits to see if a drug is cocaine or heroin. Executing that now may be just too dangerous.

Though clearly, Carfentanil is not for human consumption in any way, this does not deter drug dealers from enhancing heroin with a microscopic amount of it, giving the drug an even more powerful, but often fatal high.

Carfentanil seems to mainly be coming from China, where it is illegal, but unlawfully manufactured in underground labs, prior to being shipped to the U.S. People order it online and ship it through the U.S. Postal Service, before it ultimately makes its way into the local heroin supply. Dealers cut heroin with Carfentanil because it requires only minuscule amounts, smaller than a grain of salt, to increase the heroin's potency. For this reason, dealers are able to enlarge their supplies without considerable additional costs and provide users with a nearly lethal bang for their buck. Users in turn will give the dealer a good review, just like you do with a favorite restaurant, conveying to other users that this dealer has quality drugs. Dealers rapidly build up a customer base, and if three or four of their customers die it is not an important issue, they still have a hundred or two hundred customers lined up. The end result is a deadly game of supply and demand.

One reason that Carfentanil-laced heroin is so lethal, is that the majority of heroin users have no clue that they are ingesting it. In its liquid form, it is odorless and colorless and used in such minute amounts that even drug laboratories and medical examiners have a challenging time testing for it. Users may take their customary dose of heroin, not recognizing that something far more deadly is in the mixture, and as a result an overdose ensues.

Overdosing on Carfentanil is not the equivalent of overdosing on pure heroin. Aside from the fact that Carfentanil is incredibly potent, it is also extremely resistant to naloxone, also referred to as Narcan, the opioid antidote that functions as the final line of defense against a heroin overdose. A conventional heroin overdose usually necessitates one or two shots to work, but when heroin is laced with Carfentanil, it may require a substantially larger amount to counteract the drug, or may not work at all. Many first responders report that it takes IVs of Narcan in order to just sustain people, when Carfentanil is involved. In summary, if you overdose, first responders may not be able to save you. The dire warning to all seems to resonate, that if you choose to acquire and use any forms of heroin, you don't know what other drugs may be mixed in or substituted and you may be literally gambling with your life.

Furthermore, while first responders do their utmost to save overdose victims, Carfentanil is depleting supplies of Narcan in certain areas of the country and the ultimate cost for that is starting to tally up.

Ohio Senator Rob Portman has co-sponsored a bill, the Synthetics Trafficking and Overdose Prevention, or STOP act. The new bill would assure that the sender is required to give you a valid name, address, content size of the package, and who they're sending it to in the unit. The STOP act stalled in the Senate last year, but Senator Portman reintroduced the legislation in April of 2017. In the meantime, the Chinese government has taken action of its own. Essentially, at the request of the U.S., China announced the banning of the export of Carfentanil along with three other opioids.

So far, there have been no known overdoses in Massachusetts due to Carfentanil, though several have previously been reported in New Hampshire. A Department of Justice drug task force chief based in Ohio, commenting on the increase in Carfentanil related overdoses, told the Associated Press, "You feel like a kid with his finger in the dike and we're running out of fingers."

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Quincy Credit Union Honors EMS Professionals

During the 49th Annual EMS Appreciation Week, Quincy Credit Union honored local EMS professionals. Emergency Medical Service professionals provide local communities essential services through urgent care and often do it under immense pressure.

In support of National EMS Appreciation Week, Quincy Credit Union personnel visited both Fallon Ambulance Quincy and North Quincy locations along with Brewster Ambulance in Quincy, Braintree and Brockton to demonstrate appreciation for the commitment of EMS professionals. QCU collaborated with local merchants like T-Shirt Master and Montilios to provide QCU custom branded cupcakes and EMS appreciation T-shirts. Adding to the festivities, QCU sponsored an ice cream truck that brought cool treats, fun music and positive vibes for EMS employees to enjoy during their special day.

Quincy Credit Union, currently celebrating their 80th anniversary, provides financial services to over 33,000 Members operating from two locations; 100 Quincy Avenue, Quincy and 519 Columbian Street, Weymouth. Membership is available to those who live or work in Norfolk, Plymouth Counties and the communities of Dorchester.

CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL chorus sings, "Season of Love" during the Emily Zarnoch bench dedication Monday at the school.

Central Middle School Honors Memory Of Teacher Emily Zarnoch

By TOM GORMAN

As visitors and students make their way up the main walkway at Central Middle School, they will pass by a granite bench dedicated to Emily Zarnoch, a 24-year-old teacher who inspired many with her enthusiasm, an infectious smile and a hard working spirit.

Emily's parents, John and Gwen, and her brother, Kyle, joined staff and students on Monday to honor the memory of the beloved teacher who was struck and killed by a drunk driver in Maine two years ago. They gathered by the bench inscribed "forever in our hearts, her smile and warm hello, teacher-friend-athlete."

"I really think Emily's spirit is here with us today and is embodied in this bench," John Zarnoch told the gathering. "I am very happy that we have this memorial bench here that will remind us and all those who come to us, of a young lady who worked hard, had a great positive attitude, a beautiful smile and wasn't afraid of anything in the world."

Emily was a 2009 Quincy High School graduate. An avid runner, she was a long-time member of the Quincy Track Club. After receiving her teaching degree from Framingham State College in 2014, Emily worked as a substitute teacher in the Quincy school system. She was going to start her full-time teaching career a month before she died.

John Zarnoch said his daughter's dream was to be a teacher.

"When she had the chance to come here (at Central Middle School) and start a teaching career, it was a dream come true," he said. "She was so excited."

He said that Emily was a "natural teacher."

"She really had a talent to reach out to the kids and a get a message across and help them focus on getting where they needed to go," John Zarnoch said. "It was a great experience for her, but it was far too short."

He said his daughter's memory will live on.

"If we keep her in our hearts and if we keep her memory alive, she will be forever with us all and she can inspire us and make us do better and to work harder and be there when things get tough," he said. "Because, we know that's what she would do. She would smile and she would work harder to get over what she was trying to conquer. That's just the way she was."

He invited everyone to enjoy the memorial bench.

"So, be happy and sit on it and draw inspiration from this lovely bench," he said.

The Central Middle School Chorus sang "Seasons of Love" with the lyrics "525,600 minutes. How do you measure the life of a woman or a man?" Following the performance, the Zarnoch family unveiled the bench.

Principal Richard DeCristofaro Jr. said the bench will be a reminder of what Emily stood for.

"It's a great thing for our teachers and our students when they come into this building and be able to see this bench, because it will be a constant reminder to enjoy your day and have an easy day, but, but know why we're here," he said. "When Emily was here, all she cared about was the kids. That's what we preach to our staff every day. That's what we want our students to know, that we are here for the kids."

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said Emily's memory will live on.

"This school system, this city and our family have never forgotten Emily," he said. "Although Emily's time here was brief, she leaves an incredible amount of memories for the staff and our kids. Although it may be cloudy today, her sunshine will be here forever."

CHEW YOUR FOOD

Most mothers have told their children not to gobble down their food and eat it more slowly. As it turns out, this piece of advice is as wise as almost every other bit of guidance that mothers give their children. Chewing food completely (try ten times per bite) not only helps with digestion and nutrient absorption, but it may also help protect against infection. Researchers recently found that chewing food (known as "mastication") can stimulate the release of "T helper 17" (Th17) cells in the mouth, which fight off harmful bacteria. However, too many Th17 cells can be counterproductive to the health of the gums. Researchers hope to find a healthy balance that might someday lead to reduced infection.

Your smile is important. It's one of the first things you notice when you meet someone. A whiter, brighter smile with beautiful teeth can help you feel better about yourself and make a memorable impression. If you are looking for a cosmetic dentist, we would love to welcome you to our office as a new patient. Whether you need one tooth restored or a full smile makeover, we will make sure your teeth look beautiful and feel natural. To schedule an appointment, please call our office. You can also visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because it takes approximately 20-25 minutes for the hormones in your body to reach your brain to tell you that you are full, eating slowly helps prevent overeating.

Social Security Matters

Social Security's 'Full Retirement Age'

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: I was born in 1955, am 61 years old, and starting to think about when I should collect Social Security. I spoke to my local Social Security office and got confused when they started talking about my "full retirement age" and now I don't know whether that's 62, 65, 66, or something else. Can you please clarify?

Signed: Confused

Dear Confused: "Full Retirement Age," often referred to by Social Security pundits as "FRA," can be confusing to those approaching retirement and wondering when they should start collecting their Social Security benefits. That's because there isn't just one age which Social Security considers the "full retirement age"; rather each person's full retirement age depends on which year they were born.

And why is FRA so important?

Because it is one of two primary factors which determine how much your personal Social Security retirement benefit will be, no matter when you start collecting. (The other is your "Average Indexed Monthly Earnings," or "AIME," which is the subject of a different question).

First of all, when the Social Security Administration (SSA) refers to "full retirement age," they mean the age at which you become eligible to receive 100 percent of the benefit you are entitled to from your lifetime earnings record, if you were to start collecting benefits at that age. That age was fixed at 65 until 1983 when Congress changed the law to slightly increase the FRA for folks born in 1938 and later.

Under current law, anyone born between 1943 and 1954 has a full retirement age of 66, while the age for those born after 1954 increases by 2 months for each year between 1955 and 1960 when the maximum age of 67 is reached. FRA then stays at 67 for anyone born after 1960.

So for Social Security purposes, your full retirement age can be anywhere from 65 to 67 depending upon the year you were born (Persons born on January 1st of any year are, for FRA purposes, considered to have been born in the previous year). For people approaching retirement today, their FRA will be 66, or 66 years and some months if they were born between 1955 and 1959, or 67 if they were born in 1960 or later.

Since you were born in 1955, your full retirement age is 66 years and 2 months, and this is the age at which you will be able to collect 100 percent of the Social Security benefit you have earned by working over your lifetime. But if you start collecting your benefits earlier than your FRA your actual benefit will be less than 100 percent of what you've earned. And if you wait until after your full retirement age, you can collect more than 100 percent. Note, too, that the significance of FRA also applies to both spousal and survivor's benefits, in that applying early will result in a reduced benefit amount.

Successful Outcomes Of Collaborative Internship Program

The Quincy Collaborative Internship Program (QCIP), a collaboration between Quincy College, the City of Quincy, and MountainOne Bank has resulted in the gainful employment of two of the first students to participate in the program.

Quincy College graduates Ilyass Hhamou and Bilal Elezi are now gainfully employed at local healthcare staffing company, Intelycare. This initiative highlights the successful outcome of paid internships, collaboration, and workforce development for the South Shore.

Hhamou is a back-end developer for Intelycare, a Quincy based on-demand healthcare staffing agency. Elezi is a UX/Front End Developer. They crossed the stage with diploma in hand gainfully employed, thanks to an internship opportunity sponsored by the Quincy Collaborative Internship Program.

Reflecting on the QCIP internship experience that lead to his gainful employment,Hhamou stated: "My internship via the Quincy Collaborative Internship Program has been nothing short of amazing. This was the first step toward a career. This afforded me the practical opportunity to apply concepts learned directly in class to assignments on the job."

From a small business perspective, paid internships help relieve the payroll burden for small business, allowing access to a talented student pool locally. Qualified, paid student interns can support a business holistically, leading to increased productivity, allowing the employer more time for higher-level tasks, and rejuvenating the workforce with new skills and talents, particularly offering insight into new and emerging technologies like social media, mobile, and web development.

"The Quincy Collaborative Internship Program was the perfect fit for Intelycare. We are in a significant growth mode and the opportunity to work with college students who are adaptable, skilled, engaged, and interested in helping our company grow is critical to our success during this period of exponential growth," said David Coppins, Chief Executive Officer, of IntelyCare. "We look forward to continuing the Quincy Collaborative Internship Program partnership and to creating a workforce development pipeline that will enable interns to transition, based on their performance and work ethic to employment."

In April of 2016, Quincy College in partnership with the City of Quincy, and MountainOne Bank announced the creation of the Quincy Collaborative Internship Program, a partnership between Quincy College, the City of Quincy, and MountainOne Bank. This collaboration offers paid internship opportunities to Quincy College students who will be partnered with a pre-approved small business in the community. Paid QCIP internships were made possible thanks to the financial investment and endowment of the QCIP by MountainOne Bank.

"There is no overstating what can be accomplished when the educational innovation of Quincy College partners with the private sector - for our young people and for our business community," Mayor Thomas Koch said.

Quincy College in partnership with the City of Quincy and MountainOne Bank look forward to fostering students and supporting local businesses.

For more information about the Quincy Collaborative Internship Program, contact Tina Cahill, Director of Institutional Advancement at tcahill@quincycollege.edu or visit our website: www.quincycollege.edu/qcip.

O'Donnell Reminds Homeowners Importance Of Homestead Protection

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds homeowners about the importance of filing for Homestead protection.

Under Massachusetts law, a Homestead recording provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"For most people, their home is the most important financial asset they have," O'Donnell said. "If you own a home, and it is your primary residence, one way to protect it is to file a Homestead.

"The Homestead law also allows for the filing of an Elderly Homestead application, which defines an elder as a person who is 62 years of age or older. This protection can be increased if the elderly couple files jointly."

O'Donnell further stated, "The Homestead Law was significantly enhanced by an act of the Massachusetts Legislature back in 2011. Language in the new law states a valid Homestead cannot be terminated when refinancing a mortgage. Other changes include wording which states that a Homestead can provide protections for a primary home even if it is kept in trust. The definition of a primary residence has been further expanded to include a manufactured or mobile home."

While a Homestead provides important protections for consumers, it is important to note there are certain debts that are exempted from protection under the Homestead Act. These include federal, state and local tax liens, as well as mortgages contracted for the purchase of a primary home and nursing home liens.

Most other mortgages, debts, and encumbrances existing prior to the filing of the Declaration of Homestead, along with probate court executions for spousal and child support, are also not covered under the Homestead protection statute.

Homestead recordings can be filed at the Registry of Deeds for a state imposed fee of $36. To find out more about the Homestead law, or to get a free application, please go online to the registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org or contact the Registry's Customer Service Center at 781-461-6101.

"It is important to reiterate that a Homestead protects consumers against the forced sale of their primary owned residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell said. "While the debt is still owed, homeowners will at least have the comfort of knowing that with a Homestead filed at the Registry of Deeds, their primary residence cannot be forcibly sold to satisfy most debts."

NeighborWorks Homebuyer Workshop

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers in Quincy.

The first part of the course will be taken online; following completion of the online component, participants will attend an in-person class to be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by Daniel Matthews from Direct Finance, the in-person workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 x44 for more information.

CARA PEKARCIK (third from left), North Quincy High School science teacher, was the keynote speaker at the MA Alpha Delta Kappa Honorary Organization for Women Educators' State Conference, held recently at Lombardo's in Randolph. Her presentation on her six-week Polar Trec expedition to Antarctica was the highlight of the day. Educators across the state were enlightened with an enthusiastic, up-close, new world understanding of our most southern continent. Pekarcik was named the 2018 Massachusetts Teacher of the Year the following week. Hancock Lot Closing Early 2018

the 500-space lot is projected for sometime within the first three months of 2018 as construction activity ramps up on site. LBC is expected to begin work on its project in the coming months, and up to 150 spaces inside the Hancock Lot could be lost at that time.

City councillors raised concerns about the garage's closure during a June 15 meeting on the bond bill that will pay for the garage's construction and other downtown improvements – the $80 million bond was approved Monday.

Several councillors asked Geary what would happen once the lot closes for construction of the garage and the private developments, which is expected to take up to 18 months to complete.

"Where will everybody park?" said Councillor Noel DiBona, noting the Hancock Lot is used by a number of businesses for their customers and employees, those going to the Quincy District Courthouse and others.

Councillor Joseph Finn noted the Hancock Lot will be closed at the same time the MBTA station in Wollaston is shut down for renovations and a mixed-use development begins at the North Quincy station's parking lot, both of which will result in a loss of parking spaces.

"I just fear that we're going to be really clobbered here," he said.

Geary said the plan for mitigating the loss of spaces should be completed by the end of the summer.

"That plan is in the process of being assembled," he said. "That will be completed certainly before we commence full construction – we're hoping to have it pretty much formulated by the end of the summer."

The surface lots where the Ross Garage once stood are currently underutilized, Geary stated, and could accommodate the 150 spaces being displaced this summer. Those lots could also be restriped to provide even more spaces, and attendants could be used to park vehicles on those sites to maximize the amount of space there, similar to several lots and garages in Boston, Geary said.

Additionally, city officials are looking at private parking facilities in Quincy Center to see if those could be used. Geary said the parking lot at Presidents Place, located at 1250 Hancock St., has about 100 spaces that go unused during the day and 125 available during the evenings.

The city has also reached an agreement with Norfolk County that allows the public to use the courthouse parking lot after 5 p.m. on weekdays and on weekends and holidays. Geary said the parking lot at the Coddington Building, where the Quincy Public Schools are headquartered, would also be made available outside of business hours.

The construction workers who will be building the garage and the two private developments will be bused in from offsite parking lots, Geary said. The locations of those muster points has yet to be determined.

a ventilation system while the above ground levels do not.

City consultants provided a cost estimate for that alternative prior to Monday's meeting after Croall and Palmucci raised concerns about the price at a committee meeting June 15 – Palmucci at that meeting likened the garage's cost to the Taj Mahal.

Those same consultants said increasing the height from four to five stories, adding about 11 feet to its total height, would increase the massing of the garage structure and impose upon a new civic space being built in the Hancock Lot and developments on site. The councillors said the trade off in height was worth the savings.

"We're looking at a potential cost savings to the taxpayer of almost $8 million," Croall said. "Three parking spaces, 11 feet… which is essentially the size of a basketball hoop visually, and we save close to $8 million."

"I don't know that it makes a lick of difference whether or not it's an extra 11 feet higher when it's next to a 15-story building," Palmucci said, referring to developer Peter O'Connell's 15-story apartment building, known as Chestnut Place, proposed for the Hancock Lot.

Palmucci introduced an amendment to the bond order, which would have prevented the city from building a subterranean parking level. After the amendment was proposed, William Geary, Koch's special counsel for the downtown development, said the city's land disposition agreement with O'Connell, which was approved by the council and the mayor, requires a portion of the garage be built underground.

After that issue was raised, Palmucci expressed frustration that that concern was only raised with the council poised to vote on his amendment and not during the five hours councillors spent deliberating the garage proposal over the past week.

"The ground is always shifting here," Palmucci said. "We asked questions, we're about to take a vote, and now the ground is shifting."

Palmucci asked for a recess to see if James Shea, the City Council's outside counsel for downtown matters, could be asked whether or not the LDA with O'Connell does require a portion of the garage be built underground. No recess was granted, however, and Palmucci and Councillor Nina Liang both voted present on Palmucci's amendment, which failed 7-0.

Palmucci then introduced a second amendment, which would have limited the cost per square foot of the new garage to $88 – the same cost per square foot as the alternative without the underground level. That amendment failed 6-3, with Croall and Liang joining Palmucci in favor of it.

Palmucci then proposed cutting the total amount of the bond to $72 million, which also failed. Croall joined Palmucci in voting for it, with the other seven councillors opposed.

Monday's vote will provide funding for Desman to finalize design of the garage, which Geary hopes is done over the summer. Wilson said Desman could not move forward and complete final design on two garage proposals – with and without the underground level – because it would require more time to do so and cost about $500,000 more.

Under terms of the LDA, the council will have to approve the final design and a contract for the garage construction, which will be built by the same firm erecting Chestnut Place. The contract with the builder will include a guaranteed maximum price the city will pay for the garage.

Resident Thanks Councillors Palmucci, Croall For 'Considering The Taxpayer'

(Editor's Note: A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Councillors Palmucci and Croall,

Thank you both for trying to consider the taxpayers in the consideration of the $80 million parking garage and your request for legal consideration of saving money on the garage being above ground at considerable savings.

I am glad you are not rubber stamps of the mayor and his staff. Unfortunately, my councillor doesn't even answer my concerns or answer email. It appears all the other councillors who voted with the mayor's wishes do not represent their constituents and taxpayers. My councillor is also president of the City Council and represents Ward 5 in which the Hancock Lot is located. She did not ask even one question or comment on any of the discussions of the $80 million project in her ward.

Thank you both for having the courage to try to do what you feel is the right thing to do.

I hope all the voters will remember this at election time and I hope more candidates will challenge those councillors who are just rubber stamps for our mayor.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be prepared to face some challenges stirred up by an envious colleague. Your best defense is the Arian's innate honesty. Stick with the truth, and you'll come out ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your sensitivity to the needs of others is admirable. But be careful to avoid those who would take unfair advantage of your good nature, especially where money is involved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Having an optimistic attitude is fine, as far as it goes. But don't be lulled into a false sense of confidence. There still are problems to deal with before you can totally relax.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel somewhat "crabby," as you fuss over plans that don't seem to work out. Maybe you're trying too hard. Ease up and let things happen without forcing them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Heed that keen Leonine instinct. It's trying to tell you to delay making a decision until you're sure there are no hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to reach out to those who might be nursing hurt feelings over recent events. Best advice: Ignore any pettiness that could delay the healing process.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your understanding helps a colleague get through a difficult period. Although you didn't do it for a reward, be assured that your actions will be repaid down the line.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You score some high marks in the workplace, which will count in your favor when you face the possibility of changing direction on your current career path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your goal lies straight ahead. Stay focused on it and avoid distractions that could throw off your aim and cause potentially detrimental delays.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Keep that burst of exuberance in check and resist pushing through your new project before it's ready. In your personal life, a family member again needs help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Paying attention to your work is important this week. But so are your relationships with those special people in your life. Make time for them as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Good news. Someone is about to repay a long-standing debt. But be warned. That same someone could try to charm you into lending it back unless you say no and mean it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to matters that involve your home and family. You would make a fine family-court judge or social worker.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – "Wonder Woman" has been banned in Lebanon, where the film was pulled from theaters just hours before it was due to open. The Lebanese felt they couldn't let Israeli Gal Gadot's "Wonder Woman" be seen because, after all, they're at war with Israel. This came as a shock to Warner Brothers because Gadot was one of the stars of "Batman vs Superman," which was a big hit in Lebanon. The added fact is that Gadot is not only Israeli, but a woman, and women still are second-class citizens in that part of the world. It created a double-whammy that couldn't be allowed! A strong Israeli woman who can overpower men is obviously unacceptable.

Kristen Wiig, who will play Jack Nicholson's daughter in the upcoming "Toni Erdmann," is currently filming "Mother," with Oscar winners Jennifer Lawrence and Javier Bardem, as well as Michele Pfeiffer and Ed Harris, for director Darren Aronofsky. Jennifer Lawrence also is shooting the spy thriller "Red Sparrow," with Joel Edgerton, Jeremy Irons and Charlotte Rampling for a March release. She has been dating "Felicity" star Scott Speedman.

Apparently, moviegoers did not want to see a fat and bald Matthew McConaughey, in "Gold," judging from its $20 million cost and $10 million gross. His next two films are Stephen King's sci-fi/Western/horror film "The Dark Tower," with Idris Elba, due Aug. 4, and "White Boy Rick," with Oscar nominees Jennifer Jason Leigh, Bruce Dern and Piper Laurie, due in theaters Jan. 12, 2018.

Could it be just a coincidence that both Johnny Depp (who has an estimated worth of $200 million) and Lisa Marie Presley (who has an estimated worth of $100 million) have both had stories in the tabloids claiming they are broke? Could that be because they are both being sued for divorce and are trying to hide their assets? Just asking!

Jennifer Aniston didn't bat an eye over those nude scenes that her husband, Justin Theroux, did numerous times as Kevin Garvey in his HBO series "The Leftovers." The show recently aired its 28th and final episode. Theroux has moved on to the British sci-fi/mystery film "Mute," with Paul Rudd and Alexander Skarsgard (of "True Blood," the "Big Little Lies" series and "The Legend of Tarzan" film).

"Beauty and the Beast" is now the No. 10 box-office film of all time after earning $1.23 billion, followed closely by No. 11 "The Fate of the Furious" with $1.22 billion. "Fate" will probably pass "Beauty," now out on DVD while "Fate" is still earning money at box office. However, "Beauty" earned $501 million domestically, while "Fate" took in only $223 million. Once again "Beauty," has triumphed over brawn!

by Larry Cox

Q: My mom had several pieces of Fiesta. One of the more unusual pieces is a 8-inch vase in turquoise. I have not been able to find it in the Fiesta price guide I have. Can you help me? – Sam, Fort Worth, Texas

A: The 8-inch vase was produced for about a decade and was discontinued in 1948. Your vase is either marked "Fiesta HLC USA" or "Fiesta Made in USA." I found your vase referenced in "Fiesta," by Glen Victorey and published by Krause Books. According to Victorey, your vase is valued in the $600 to $650 range.

Q: I have a hand-cranked Handel Webster pencil sharpener in working condition. I have been offered $75 for it by a dealer. Can you tell me what it is worth? – Walter, Haines City, Florida

A: An antique dealer generally offers about half of what he or she thinks they can sell an item for full retail. That leads me to believe your pencil sharpener is probably worth more, perhaps as much as $150. Remember, this is just my educated guess, not an appraisal. A free appraisal is worth what you pay for it.

Q: I have a World War I uniform in perfect condition. I have the campaign hat, gas mask and other accessory pieces. Whom do you suggest I contact to determine its value? – Norm, Jerseyville, Illinois

A: Although there are dozens of excellent shops that specialize in military memorabilia, one of the better ones is "History by George" in Mesa, Arizona. George Notarpole is the owner and an expert in this field of collecting. He can help you determine the value of your uniform. Contact is 129 W. Main St., Mesa, AZ 85201; notarpole@historybygeorge.com.

Q: I have a porcelain plate commemorating the 56th annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters held in Florida in 1960. How much is it worth? – Judy, Ronceverte, West Virginia

A: I could not find your particular plate in any of my references, but I have seen similar ones selling in the $10 to $20 range. A postal collector might pay slightly more.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was 19th-century journalist and women's rights advocate Margaret Fuller who made the following sage observation: "A house is no home unless it contains food and fire for the mind as well as the body."

* There is a patron saint for everything, it seems. You've probably never heard of Saint Drogo of Sebourg, but this 12th-century Flemish noble became the patron saint of those whom others find unattractive. After he turned 18, he got rid of all his wealth, became a shepherd and made several pilgrimages to Rome. On one of these pilgrimages, he was "stricken with an unsightly bodily affliction" and became hideously deformed. In order to spare others the sight of his deformity, he was confined to a small cell attached to his village church. Until the end of his life, 40 years later, he remained there, subsisting only on barley, water and the bread and wine of communion.

* The longest beard ever recorded belonged to a man named Hans N. Langseth. Upon his death in 1927, it was 17.5 feet long. In 1967, the beard was donated to the Smithsonian Institution.

* Those who study such things say that your ears secrete more wax when you're afraid.

* A recent survey by Baskin-Robbins revealed some interesting trends in parenting. It seems that when trying to get kids to do an unpleasant task, dads are 75 percent more likely to use ice cream as a bribe. Also, dads are twice as likely as moms to use ice cream to resolve an argument, and 90 percent of dads give ice cream to kids who need some cheering up.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "Here's a tip that impressed me so much I love sharing it with everyone! A friend of mine went away for a month, and forgot about a package of ground meat in the refrigerator. When he got home the smell was hideous. We tried pure bleach first, then boxes and boxes of baking soda. The smell was imbedded! Then a buddy of mine told me to use newspaper. Take eight of more sheets and lay a few on each shelf. To my surprise the next day the odor was gone! Imagine that!" – T.D. in Pennsylvania

* "Copy and distribute historical photos, documents and records so that if something happens to the originals, at least someone will have copies, and that part of history will not be lost forever." – M.W. in Saskatchewan, Canada

* C.J. in Idaho writes: "When making lemonade, get the most out of your lemons by heating them before juicing." Good call! You can do this by placing them in the microwave for 15 seconds at a time, or submerging them in hot water for several minutes.

* "My sister is always trying new 'diet' recipes, but she hit on one that I really like. Instead of a traditional crust for a pizza, slice zucchini very thin, brush with oil, then brown in a pan. Transfer to a pre-warmed pizza pan and top with sauce and cheese. It's so good…and low-carb!" – M.D. in Wisconsin

* "I use clothespins to keep the garbage bag in place in my small bathroom can. I line it with paper bags, and to keep them from trying to close, I just use the clothespins. If they get dirty, I just knock them into the trash bag too." – O.C. in Texas

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, June 6, at approximately 9:15 p.m., Officer Paul Foley was traveling southbound on Hancock Street with his K-9 partner when he observed a Honda Accord reversing directly toward his cruiser north bound in the southbound lane.

The officer had to stop his cruiser abruptly to avoid being struck by the Honda, which continued backing up over and across the solid white lines before driving forward and turning right into the driveway of the Howard Johnson's Motel at 845 Hancock St.

Officer Foley activated his blue lights/siren and conducted a stop of the vehicle in the driveway. The driver gave the officer his driver's license and stated he could not locate the registration/rental agreement. He added the car was rented by his front seat passenger.

When Officer Foley asked the passenger for identification, he began reaching into his pockets looking for his ID. As he did this, the officer illuminated the area and in plain view he noticed that the passenger was attempting to conceal a cell phone and a credit card under his buttocks. When asked why he was hiding the items, the passenger did not reply.

Officer Foley requested to see the credit card so the passenger handed it to him along with his license. The name on the license and credit card were different. The credit card (a Navy Federal Credit Union Visa card) appeared to be brand new and had an expiration date of 2021. When asked who owned the credit card, the passenger said, "My cousin, he must have left it in the car." The officer asked him how old his cousin was and where he lived and he responded, "37 years old and he lives on Oxford Street in Boston."

Before returning to his cruiser, Officer Foley noticed two large bags of new merchandise marked, "Saks Fifth Avenue" on the back seat behind the driver's seat. He also noted the rear seat passengers were not wearing seat belts.

The passenger behind the driver handed the Officer a New York license and the other rear passenger handed over a Massachusetts license. Criminal record checks revealed that one passenger was on Federal probation out of New York for distribution of "Dangerous Drugs." Another passenger had open Massachusetts open criminal cases for forgery, uttering and larceny out of Quincy District Court.

Teletype operator Carol Flynn was unable to locate a 37-year-old male or female with the name and address in Boston. To confirm his strong suspicion that one of the suspects was in possession of either a lost, stolen or fraudulent credit card, Officer Foley contacted the toll free number on the back of the card and spoke with an operator of the Naval Federal Credit Union and had her look up the card number. Due to their security policies, the operator could not provide any details over the phone but said she would attempt to contact the card owner and have them contact Quincy PD.

Since the operator referred to the card holder as "she" and "her" the officer knew the card was issued to a female, even though the front passenger had insisted that the card owner was a male. Based on this information, Officer Foley searched the vehicle for further evidence of credit card fraud.

Officer John McGowan arrived on scene to assist. Officer Foley requested the front passenger step out and speak with him and as the suspect exited the vehicle, the officer immediately observed in plain view a large fold of cash next to a large amount of credit cards tucked into the inside pocket of the front passenger side door. The officer seized these credit cards and immediately realized there were approximately ten different credit cards issued by ten different financial institutions in the names of ten different people. Officer Foley placed the suspect under arrest and recovered a total of $1,067 on him and in the door pocket next to him. Inside a large back pack which was at the suspect's feet were the following items;

1. Rental agreement (expired) PV Holdings 2016 Honda
2. Navy Federal Credit Union Visa Card (Zhang, Chenfeng)
3. 76 Credit cards with various names, numbers, and credit companies
4. Three New York State Drivers License with same picture but different names and dates of births
5. State of Illinois Driver License with suspect's picture
6. Massachusetts Drivers License with suspect's picture
7. Pennsylvania Drivers License with suspect's picture
8. New York Drivers License with different name but suspect picture
9. Mass Health Card with name of Ates, Meryem
10. BJs Card with name of Wang, Hui
11. Three cell phones (two Apples and one Samsung)
12. New York City Identification Card with name Zhu, Jiahuan
13. One United States Passport with the name of Zhang, Hui
14. One Passport Peoples Republic of China with name of Zheng, Meirong
15. One black wallet containing NYPD mini Captains badge, two Visa credit cards, and one Mastercard
16. Numerous checks and paperwork with various names and companies.
17. Six folders with assorted paperwork and bank statements
18. Two ledgers with names and addresses
19. $1060.00 U.S. currency
20. One black backpack

Officer Foley asked to see the receipts for the merchandise in the bags. The rear passenger initially checked his pockets and around his seat for a receipt but then said, "Oh, I paid cash for them." The Officer reminded him that he still would have received a receipt even if he paid cash but he had no response to that. Inside a large green and black back pack that was partially tucked under this suspect's leg on the back seat were the following items:

1. New York State license
2. Chinese passport Zheng, Mei
3. United States Passport Vo, Giau
4. Social Security Card Lee, Johny
5. Social Security Card He, Hong Feng
6. Massachusetts Drivers License Chen, Yong
7. 2 Credit Cards Visa (Johnny Lee)
8. 1 Credit Card Master Card Xu, Zuo
9. 6 assorted checks with different names for different accounts
10. 9 separate checkbooks with 9 different names
11. Three $200 Visa gift cards
12. Miscellaneous financial documents
13. Lenavo Laptop Computer
14. Samsung Tablet
15. Two pairs of Gucci brand shoes
16. $2,529.00 U.S. currency
17. Saks Fifth Av. Receipt for $1,258.75
18. Two black t-shirts
19. Two Saks Fifth Av bags
20. One green and black backpack

'Stop Dreaming, Start Doing' NQHS Graduation Message

By JOE REARDON

Speaking under a beating sun and the sweltering temperatures of an early heat wave, North Quincy Valedictorian Ethan Sit challenged his fellow classmates at the school's 84th commencement June 12 not to just "play not to lose" but instead unleash the dreams and fantasies of what they want to accomplish in life, no matter the odds or how hard they seem.

Sit urged his classmates, many of whom were armed with plastic bottles of water to stave off the 90-degree-plus temperatures, to have faith in themselves and believe that they are far more than just a statistic. "You can not let yourself be defined by probabilities, numbers, x and y axes," said Sit. "Too many people have let themselves be restrained by their own self doubt.

"Our vision of the future is easy," Sit told his classmates at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. "Why do we lose our way? Why do we sometimes feel like we are manacled by the whims of the present? Is it because the circumstances are too extraordinary and too far beyond our control? I say not. Human ingenuity has brought us so far, but have our problems become so insurmountable? A lack of intelligence is not the problem. The mental capacity for greatness radiates from us. The fundamental law of the lost is a lack of desire. Human ingenuity is driven by the human desire for a better future. The future of our fantasies can become a reality if we stop dreaming and start doing. We are powerless simply because we feel powerless."

Sit, who will be attending MIT, thanked his friends, family and classmates for being a bigger influence on his life than they could possibly know and dedicated his speech to them. "The experiences I had with such an eclectic and accomplished circle of people have without a doubt defined who I am as a person."

And while some graduates are "stressing out over very legitimate issues like taxes and tuition and politics," Sit kidded that he simply hopes he doesn't burn his dorm to the ground when he has no adult supervision in college.

In one of the more touching moments of commencement, class Vice President Abigail Koch introduced her father, the Honorable Mayor Thomas Koch, to those in attendance. A member of the Class of 1981, Koch brought the greetings of the city and its congratulations for the the students' success.

"Many people have helped you along the way," said Koch. "Many of them are sitting in the stands or amongst the faculty. You owe them a debt of gratitude whether they were teachers, coaches, guidance counselors, deans, cafeteria workers, custodians, bus drivers - whatever part they played in creating the educational environment for your success."

Koch told the graduates of the bell in the steeple of the United First Parish Church and the inscription of words of Reverend John Hancock, the father of the patriot John Hancock. "The inscription says, 'above all things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. This is the bond of union. The cement of societies,'" said Koch. "If you look up charity and its origins ... it means love for all. I encourage you to take that love into our society and make a better world."

Class President Alison M. Radzik got a big cheer from the crowd when she pointed out the last time the North Quincy students were on the field was when the Raiders football team defeated Quincy in the annual Thanksgiving Day game on November 24.

Radzik's speech was bitter-sweet as she said hello to new possibilities and goodbye to cherished memories of life at North Quincy High.

"Tonight we are here together again on this turf to say hello and goodbye at the same time," Radzik said. "And salute to so many experiences and opportunities we're going to have. Hello to the individual paths we're on our way to and becoming the people we always wanted to be."

After playfully pointing out that everyone in attendance was missing out on Chris Sale Bobblehead Night at Fenway Park, Quincy School Committee Vice-Chairman Paul Bregoli, a member of the Class of 1966, urged the graduates to take the time to appreciate and thank the parents and relatives who sacrificed in helping them along the way over the years, culminating with graduation.

"Seniors, this is your moment," said Bregoli. "But it's not just about you tonight. It's all about family. Seniors, look up into the stands where you'll see member of your family. Moms, dads, siblings, grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins - they've been with you every step of the way. A family is where young people learn how to be good citizens, take responsibility and live in harmony with others. Families are the building blocks of a strong, cohesive society. They have given you their unconditional love - always. Although you think you may know everything, your parents have forgotten more than you know."

Principal Robert Shaw told the crowd it was the school's 90th birthday and a campus facelift and expansion have made it look better than ever. Salutatorian Jason Kung said everyone was in attendance to celebrate the accomplishments of the last four years. "When you first step foot into a classroom, this is the goal you've been striving for," said Kung.

City Council President Kirsten Hughes congratulated the Class of 2017 and told them to "be open to life's possibilities" and contribute to the community.

"Remember how important it is to serve and participate," said Hughes. "Whether it be here in Quincy or any other community you chose to call home in the future. Utilize the skills and talent fostered at North Quincy High School."

'Future Is In Our Hands' Message At QHS Graduation

By TOM GORMAN

Quincy High School Class of 2017 President Lucia Buzzell told fellow seniors that the past four high school years – 708 days – were just a blip of time.

"In the grand scheme of life, these four years are only a small portion in each of our lives," she said. "Each of our 708 days at Quincy High School was an opportunity. An opportunity to think for ourselves, work together and share with the world. This small fraction of time carries a huge amount of significance. We have found friends that we will have the rest of our lives. We have memories and learned lessons that will stick with us forever."

Buzzell's remarks were made during the Quincy High School graduation on June 13 where 363 seniors received diplomas. The ceremony, scheduled to be held at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, was moved inside the gym because of the threat of thunderstorms.

Buzzell credited the teachers for setting her class's path.

"We will look back on our teachers who have inspired us," she said. "The last four years have set us up for the future and the future is in our hands. We have learned valuable lessons that we will carry with us through much more than just the classroom. On top of shaping us into better students, our teachers, administrators and coaches have developed our character and shaped us into better people."

Added Buzzell, "Each of our 708 days at Quincy High School were an opportunity. An opportunity to think for ourselves, work together and share with the world."

Referring to when he took the reins of principal, Lawrence Taglieri noted that he and the Class of 2017 started their Quincy High School experience together four years ago.

"From the start, you were challenged to do your best and take advantage of all the opportunities available to you," he said. "You did not disappoint. We are all proud of how you made QHS your home."

Taglieri noted how the seniors rallied around classmates Kijuan Murphy and Brendan Hansbury when they were badly injured in a car crash last December. Both recovered, returned to class, and received their diplomas.

"Your caring ways were never more evident when you all came together to support your classmates Kijuan and Brendan," he said to a round of applause.

Taglieri said the seniors formed the largest and most active student council in the school's history.

"The group worked to make our school a great place to be a student and a teacher," he said, adding that the council received the highest award by the National Association of Student Councils.

He noted the class's accomplishments in the arts, sports, academics and more than 16,000 hours of community service.

Taglieri reminded the seniors how everyone has challenges.

"I admire how each member of this great class of students has worked with their individual challenges," he said. "You will face more challenges going forward. It is our hope that you learn to not to just accept the challenges you encounter, but have the confidence and determination to overcome them. Make them a source of strength and achieve your goals."

Valedictorian Yaseen Alkhafaji, who will be attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the fall, joked about the overflow audience sitting in the air-conditioned auditorium watching the ceremony on cable television.

"We're a little jealous of the air conditioning you have," he said.

Alkhafaji explained that he was chosen as valedictorian because of his academic ranking and that numbers are used to define just about everything and everyone.

"We use numbers to calculate a number so we can label each other with numbers," he said. "Numbers are an inadequate way of describing people. Everyone here is defined by much more than a bunch of numbers. Ultimately, we are all here as equals as we receive our diplomas."

He noted the Class of 2017 is the last class to graduate that were born in the 1990s.

"So much has changed since the '90s," he said "We are living in a time of tremendous growth in technology."

He referred to the explosive popularity of smartphones and social media.

"Social networks have ironically isolated us," he said.

Alkhafaji talked about generations.

"Being born in a different time just means you're a different age," he said. "Age is another ineffective way to try to describe people with numbers. At the end of it all, we are still people and we are all here as equals to get our diplomas."

He noted this generation is the one who dared to ask the world to "Turn down for what?"

Alkhafaji told his classmates to thank their parents and teachers.

"None of us got here alone," he said. "Let's congratulate everyone who helped us get here."

Alkhafaji looked to the future.

"Many of us are afraid of the future," he said. "Some of you are less scared that I am. Truthfully, I don't know what the future holds for us. With the group as open minded and committed as the one right here, I expect nothing less than greatness. Starting today, let's change the world."

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the class how they excelled in all areas and that their teachers and families supported and guided them to help them "be the best you can be."

"You have worked so hard to be here and richly deserve praise and recognition," he said.

Mayor Thomas Koch referred to an inscription on the Church of the Presidents bell that reads in part "charity is the cement of society."

"Whatever road you choose, wherever your journey takes you, put on charity," he said. "Bring that love to all wherever you go and you will change the world."

School committee Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli told the seniors that although it is their moment, it is not all about them.

"It's all about family," he said. "They are with you every step of the way. A family is where young people learn to be good citizens, take responsibility and to live in harmony with others. Families are the building blocks of a strong, cohesive society. They are always there for you, no matter what decision you make – good or bad."

City Council President Kirsten Hughes told the seniors about the importance of community service.

"Remember how important it is to serve and participate here in Quincy or another community you choose to call home in the future," she said.

Morrisette Legion 'Young But Good'

Bows To Braintree After Defeating Hyde Park, Cohasset

By JOE REARDON

Morrisette Post 294 will have plenty of competition in the coming weeks in highly competitive Zone 6 and the squad got a look Sunday night at one of the best and most balanced teams in undefeated Braintree.

Quincy will be eager to take on Braintree again and concentrate on playing cleaner in the field after a flurry of miscues to fall 9-6 on the road. The loss dropped Quincy to 2-1 on the season with two week's worth of games coming up that should define its season. The loss came after Post 294 beat a tough Hyde Park club then came behind to defeat Cohasset.

"We hit well," said Quincy coach Steve Maze. "We played well. Braintree's a good team and Cam (Fox) is a good coach. They'll probably be at the top of the East division for sure. We fought hard and played all night. If you put up six runs you should think that's enough. Tonight it wasn't, and again, Braintree's a good team. You've got to play your A game. My message to the guys after was there's 21 outs in a game and when you give a good team like Braintree three and four and five outs, they're going to capitalize."

Quincy had eight hits against Braintree starter Jack Andrews, but were kept off balance by his off speed pitch which resulted in nine strikeouts.

Braintree struck first in the bottom of the first off Quincy starter Shawn Kelly on an RBI single from Sean Casey and a wild pitch that brought home Joe Vanelli for a 2-0 lead. Quincy answered in its half of the second as Jim McDonald and Bill McCarthy drilled singles and Curtis Frazier ripped a base hit to center to score McDonald. McCarthy came home on an error to tie the score at 2-2.

Quincy, though, saw the tight game evaporate in the second as Braintree sent 12 batters to the plate and struck for six runs to go ahead 8-2. The biggest blow was a deep three-run double to center by Vanelli that was two feet short of being a grand slam. Brendan Donahy and Mike Valicenti also drove in runs for Braintree.

"We had a rough second inning and that killed us," said Maze. "The second inning hurt us. We had a dropped fly ball, a botched run down and it went from 2-2 to 8-2 before we knew what happened. We lost 9-6, but we were right there from innings two to seven they only put up a run."

Quincy got two back in the third with an RBI double to left by McCarthy and a sacrifice fly to center field by Frazier to cut Braintree's lead to 8-4. Another run came in on an error to make it an 8-5 contest. Post 76 added a run in the bottom of the inning for a 9-5 lead and that's the way it stayed until Quincy came back to put up a run in the seventh.

Morrisette Post 294 had a prime chance for a big inning in the third when its first two batters reached, Andrews pitched out of the jam with a fly out to right, a force out and strikeout to keep Braintree ahead.

"We're young, but we're good," said Maze. "They're going to gel and they're going to play some good baseball. Hyde Park was a very tough game. We were losing in the Cohasset game and came back to win."

Quincy was scheduled to face a tough part of its schedule with the home opener slated for June 19 against Hyde Park and a doubleheader against Holbrook two days later, followed by games Thursday and Friday. With its plethora of young, strong arms, Quincy should be in good shape for the grind of so many games on top of each other. "We have a busy week and we have six games next week too," said Maze. "We have enough arms where we can do our thing consistently. We have our pitching lined up for the week so we're ok."

Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race June 24

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 24 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. This is the 11th year the road race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m. Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner, 1st Place Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner and awards to 1st 2nd and 3rd place runners in each age group.

The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt. Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Childrens Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners and $20 for walkers, children walking are free. Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169. Two-Day 33rd Annual Bike MS Begins Saturday Here

More than 2,000 cyclists are expected to raise $2.8 million to help people affected by MS at the 33rd Annual Bike MS: Cape Cod Getaway, 2 days, 150 miles journey.

The ride, Saturday, June 24 and Sunday, June 25, begins in Quincy and finishes in Provincetown. It is the largest National MS Society ride in New England featuring two days of riding from Quincy to the tip of Cape Cod, over the Bourne Bridge and through South Shore communities and coastal towns.

The cyclists will begin the ride Saturday, June 24 at 7 a.m. departing Blue Cross Blue Shield at 1 Enterprise Dr. in North Quincy.

Bike MS, hosted by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is the premier fundraising cycling series in the U.S. for anyone seeking a personal challenge, an amazing experience, and a world free of multiple sclerosis. Each year, Bike MS attracts nearly 100,000 participants nationwide in more than 80 rides. To date, Bike MS cyclists, volunteers, sponsors and donors have raised more than $1 billion so people affected by MS can live their best lives as we stop MS in its tracks, restore what's been lost, and end MS forever.

Bike MS includes people living with MS, their friends, families and neighbors, as well as corporate teams and individuals who are driven to support critical MS research and life-changing services for people living with MS. People living with MS can also participate in "I Ride with MS," a special program recognizing Bike MS cyclists living with the disease.

ACHING HIPS

Located in joints throughout the body, "bursae" are fluid-filled sacs that are positioned between bones and soft tissues, acting as cushions to help reduce friction. "Bursitis" results when a bursa becomes inflamed and swells with fluid. The most common form of hip bursitis, "trochanteric bursitis," involves the broad, flat area of bone ("greater trochanter") at the top of each thigh bone (femur). When the bursae underlying several of the large muscles anchored to the greater trochanter become inflamed, there is chronic, aching pain in the outer portion of the hip. Because bursitis of the hip may result from abnormal hip mechanics due to arthritis, leg-length discrepancies, or back problems, chiropractic treatment may be helpful in addressing the problem's underlying causes.

When the bones of your spine are not moving properly or are out of their normal position, irritation to the nerve or pain in the joints may occur. Chiropractic care and the adjustment/manipulation of the spine restore the proper position and movement of the bones and joints within the spinal column and extremities. To schedule an appointment, please call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220. We accept most major insurance plans. Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy.

P.S. One leg that is significantly shorter than the other affects the way a person walks and can lead to irritation of a hip bursa.

RELIGION

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have a Worship Service at 9:30 a.m. The Rev. Frederick Hayes will conduct the service and preach the sermon entitled "It's Bigger on the Inside." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has an active Missions and Growth Committee doing various charity works.

The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon-1 to 3 p.m. Please visit us at our Web Page: www.bethany-congchurch.org for updates and activities. Thanks to the Video Ministry, if you're unable to attend worship service on Sundays, the Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television on Thursdays at 6 p.m. and 10 a.m. on Sundays on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Quincy Point Congregational

Sunday worship is at 10 a.m. in the air-conditioned sanctuary at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

The church is handicap accessible, complete with an elevator via the Abbey Road side of the building.

Peter Johnston, M. Div will preach a sermon called, "Don't blame me!" After worship, there will be light refreshments in the downstairs social hall.

A "One Room" Summer Sunday school is available during the summer months. If you wish your child to attend, bring them to the children's room on the basement level adjacent to the kitchen before worship.

The summer curriculum is the One Room Sunday school series by Deep Blue, see: www.deepbluekids.com for more details.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Sunday morning Communion service of worship at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. starts at 10 a.m.

Interim Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and preach his final sermon "With Love and Gratitude." He has prepared a special children's message.

Liturgist Nancy Jacobs will call to worship and read the scripture lesson. Janice Hughes, Susan Stimpson, Chris Jacobs and Jeff Craig will serve for the Diaconate. Steve Reed, Minister of Music, will direct the choir.

Pastor Felix and his wife Dannette are leaving to relocate in Texas. A farewell luncheon will be held in M. Alicia Corea Fellowship Hall following the service.

Lighthouse Church Yard Sale Saturday

Lighthouse Church, a new merger of Evangelical Congregational Church of Atlantic and Squantum Christian Fellowship, at 65 Newbury Ave., North Quincy, will hold a yard sale Saturday, June 24 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The proceeds will help the mission team serving in an immigrant community in Maine this summer. A group of 12 adults and youth will lead a Kids Club and other activities at the Root Cellar in Lewiston that seeks to engage, equip and empower their neighbors.

Along with a wide variety of items for sale there will also be home-made baked goods on sale and free coffee and lemonade for shoppers.

Those who have items to contribute to the sale are asked to call 617-786-8691 before Saturday.

Restore Christian Church Summer Block Parties

Restore Christian Church will sponsor five community parties in parks throughout the city this summer.

The free block parties will feature food, live music, inflatables and yard games for families to enjoy.

This is the third consecutive summer that Restore has hosted the block parties. Last year hundreds of people attended, and this year the church hopes even more people will come out to enjoy the festivities.

Jeff Oakes, lead minister at Restore Christian Church, said, "I've been waiting all year for this. These parties are a blast! My family loves inviting our friends and neighbors." He added: "I'm thrilled to be a part of a church that cares for the people in our city and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy themselves with their friends and families."

The first block party was set for today (Thursday) at Brill Field, 29 Island Ave., Houghs Neck.

Other parties scheduled:

•Thursday, June 29, Flynn Playground, 27 South St., Quincy Point.

• Thursday, July 13, Safford Park, 166 Beale St., Wollaston Hill.

• Thursday, July 20, Beechwood Knoll, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston.

• Thursday, Aug. 3, Perkins Playground, 25 Narragansett Rd., Merrymount.

The parties begin at 6 p.m. and end at 8pm.

The public is welcome.

Quincy Access Television Summer Hours

Quincy Access Television will begin summer hours on Wed., June, 5 and will resume regular hours on Fri., Sept. 5.

The Washington Street studio will be open Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. and Friday 9:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

A reminder that Channel 11 is being moved to Channel 9, as of June 22. All your favorite government shows will be seen on Channel 9.

Tickets Available For Fr. Bill's 23rd Annual FoodFest July 25

General admission tickets are on sale for the 23rd annual FoodFest, the largest annual fundraiser hosted by Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS), a 501c3 non-profit organization dedicated to ending homelessness on the South Shore and across Southern Massachusetts.

Proceeds from the event will support the agency's goal of closing the 54 percent funding gap at its emergency shelters.

The fundraiser will be held Tuesday, July 25 from 6 to 9 p.m. at The Launch at Hingham Shipyard and Hingham Beer Works. FoodFest invites nearly 40 of the South Shore's finest restaurants, bakeries, and beverage distributors to offer their best samples, while guests enjoy live music and stunning ocean views. Joining this year's impressive lineup of vendors is Wahlburgers, the popular Hingham restaurant owned by the famed Wahlburg family.

The event will also feature a wine pull, a silent auction and a raffle drawing for a 3-night vacation to the winner's choice of either New Orleans, San Diego or Monterey, Calif.

FoodFest tickets cost $150 apiece. To buy tickets and for more information, visit www.helpfbms.org/foodfest2017. Corporate sponsorship opportunities, including access to 5 p.m. VIP party, are still available.

Gertrude A. Chludzinki Goldrick

A funeral Mass for Gertrude A. "Trudy" (Grindle) Chludzinski Goldrick, age 87, a longtime resident of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in Holy Trinity Parish at the Most Blessed Sacrament Church, 1015 Sea St., Quincy.

Mrs. Chludzinski Goldrick died peacefully June 16 at John Adams HealthCare Center, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Dorchester to the late Joseph R. and Gertrude L. (Jensen) Grindle. She was raised and educated in Quincy and had lived in Quincy for most of her life.

Mrs. Chludzinski Goldrick was a devoted homemaker but had also worked in the special needs field as a job trainer, assisting young adults, with WORK, Inc., in Quincy for 10 years.

She was a civic-minded person and was always active in her community, and served as a former board member of the Harbor View Residence complex. Mrs. Chludzinski Goldrick was a longtime volunteer at the Blind Center in Quincy. She was active in local politics and enjoyed helping the City of Quincy's Election Department. She was also a former Girl Scout and Boy Scout leader.

She was active in the Methodist Church for many years and, after converting to Catholicism in 1988, was a loyal parishioner of the former Saint Boniface Church in Germantown where she served as a religious education teacher and member of the choir.

Mrs. Chludzinski Goldrick enjoyed singing and minstrel shows and had a talent for arts, crafts and crocheting.

She was devoted to her family and enjoyed supporting the activities and accomplishments of her grandchildren and great grandchildren.

GERTRUDE A. CHLUDNINSKI GOLDRICK

Beloved wife of the late Louis J. Goldrick, Sr. and the late John W. Chludzinski. Devoted mother of Susan A. Church and her husband Terry of Brenham, TX, James B. Chludzinski and his wife Joanne of Quincy, John T. Chludzinski of Plymouth, Joseph W. Chludzinski and his wife Barbara of Burlington, and Nancy J. Kefalis of Middleboro.

Loving grandmother of ten grandchildren and several great-grandchildren. She is also survived by the Goldrick children and their families.

One of four siblings, she was sister of Charlie Grindle and his wife Kathy of Florida and pre-deceased by Edward Grindle and Connie Schweinburg. Sister-in-law of Rita Grindle of Quincy. She is survived by several nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Saint Boniface Haiti Foundation, 400 North Main St., Randolph, MA 02368.

Arthur F. LaFleur, Jr., 52

Arthur F. "Sonny" LaFleur, Jr., 52, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, died peacefully on June 13 surrounded by the love, comfort and care of family.

Sonny served his country with honor in the U.S. Navy as a Seabee, and was a member of Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 of the American Legion, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie #841 of Rockland.

For the past year and a half he worked in the Maintenance Department of Colonial Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Weymouth. For many years prior he was the co-owner and operator of Briyel Construction.

He was the long-time, loving companion of Denise Beliveau of Weymouth. Son of Joan M. (Brunstrom) LaFleur of Weymouth and the late Arthur F. LaFleur, Sr. Dear brother of Janine LaFleur of Weymouth, Leigh Ann Zemp and her husband Darin of Weymouth, and Marc LaFleur of Fla.

ARTHUR F. LAFLEUR, JR.

Cherished uncle of James LaFleur, Jenny Healy, David LaFleur, Michael LaFleur, Tiffany Zemp & Tyler Zemp. Also survived by four great-nieces and nephews, many aunts, uncles, cousins, extended family and close friends.

A wake service was offered June 17 by dear family friend, Fr. George Winchester at the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Alexander J. Coutts, Sr., 82

A funeral Mass for Alexander J. Coutts, Sr., 82, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Coutts died at home on June 13, surrounded by his loving family.

The beloved husband of the late Doris (O'Leary) Coutts and Carol (Savard) Coutts of Quincy. Loving father of Donna Sullivan and her late husband Michael of Bellingham, Marion Coutts and her partner Cheryl of Brockton, Edward Coutts and his wife Dawn of South Attleboro, Barbara Piccuito of Quincy, John Coutts of Taunton, Deborah Doherty of Weymouth, Cynthia Kennedy and her husband James of Attleboro, Alexander J. Coutts, Jr. and his wife Lynne of Taunton and Susan Estabrooks and her husband Scott of Middleboro. Stepfather of David Savard of Quincy and the late Yvette Savard. Brother of Frederick Coutts and his wife Caroline of VA and the late Thomas Coutts. Brother-in-law of Lois Coutts of PA. He is also survived by 35 grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

A longtime Quincy resident, Mr. Coutts worked as a painter for more than 30 years for the Quincy Housing Authority. He will be sadly missed by all those who knew him.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284-9168.

Job Well Done

This suspect was asked to step out of the vehicle and when he did, Officer Foley observed a Saks Fifth Avenue receipt on the floor where his feet had just been. The receipt was dated today and for the merchandise in the two bags (see evidence list). The last four numbers of the credit card used to attempt to purchase the merchandise was later located in his back pack along with more credit cards in other people's names. This suspect was placed under arrest and found on him was a total of $2,529.00 that was separated into five different folds in three different pants pockets. He had no bank receipts, pay stubs or any other plausible explanation for why he had so much cash on his person.

As of the typing of the officer's report, it is still not known if any of the four occupants of this vehicle were authorized to operate it. The only rental contract found had an expiration date of "2/8/2016." It had no names listed and showed it had been rented by "Success Driving School" and that the vehicle was owned by P.V. Holdings. For this reason, the vehicle was towed and impounded by Ayers towing. The rental agreement and the credit card that one of the suspects had initially attempted to conceal were seized as evidence. The remaining rear passenger was issued a citation for no seat belt and sent on his way.

The operator was cited for the initial motor vehicle infractions. The two suspects under arrest were transported to the station for booking. The rear seated suspect provided a false name but fingerprints showed his true name. For this reason, the officer had probable cause to believe he fraudulently acquired the New York license using the stolen identity of "Johnny LEE and date of birth.

The front passenger's prints came back to the name, date of birth and social security number associated with the Massachusetts license he provided at the scene, however, a total of five additional driver's licenses were located in his possession. All five had his picture on them but had different names, date of births and addresses. The licenses were issued by New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Officer Foley believed that this suspect fraudulently acquired these licenses using five different stolen identities and along with the second suspect, they used these cards to assist in the commission of numerous credit cards and check related crimes. Both suspects were in possession of numerous check books (belonging to numerous persons with various names), numerous credit cards (in the names of others) two ledgers containing hundreds of names of suspected fraud victims along with their date of births and social security numbers and hundreds of bank and credit card statements with hundreds of different names.

Based on the totality of these circumstances, Officer Foley believed the cash recovered from both men (totaling $3,596) is evidence of their crimes. The two suspects were found to be in possession of a total of 96 different credit cards issued in various names by various financial institutions.

The front passenger suspect had a wallet with a metal badge engraved with "ICE Agent" and the other suspect's wallet contained a metal badge engraved with "NYPD Captain" in it.

Nice Work!

DEAL OR NO DEAL? This "Summer Special" deal usually comes in the form of a fax to offices and companies. There are common problems with offers such as this. The introductory offer seems too good to be true and often is. The initial price in this poster for 6 day/5 night trip is $129 per person and is all inclusive, but does not cover airfare.

There are also hidden fees not covered by the initial price and are under the guise of a variety of taxes, which will boost your costs up significantly, to the level that some buyers will just forfeit their initial payment. Getting your $129 back is rare.

Here's the clincher! No where does the poster state the name of the company, an address or any positive reviews that can be confirmed.

A "Google" check of the telephone number referred to the offer as a scam and not to give out your credit card number or bank account information. Many of these companies make money off of you and then close up. As always, do your homework before giving away money to scammers!

Yakoo Resolution Sent To Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 6 Councillor William Harris has introduced a resolution in favor of protecting North Quincy High School's mascot, Yakoo, and the name used by the school's teams, the Red Raiders.

Harris introduced his resolution calling for the protection of Yakoo and the Red Raiders name at Monday's City Council meeting. The item was referred to committee for deliberation in the future; Monday was the final meeting before the council recessed for the summer.

The resolution was introduced weeks after a hearing on Beacon Hill about a proposed bill that would ban public schools in the state from using Native American imagery or names for their team names, logos or mascots. The bill was introduced by Sen. Barbara L'Italien, an Andover Democrat, on behalf of several of her constituents after a failed attempt to change the Redmen name used at Tewksbury High School.

Yakoo, North Quincy High's mascot, is based on a caricature of North Quincy High graduate Dr. Allan Yacubian, who is not Native American. Yakoo is commonly shown wearing a feathered headdress and carrying a tomahawk.

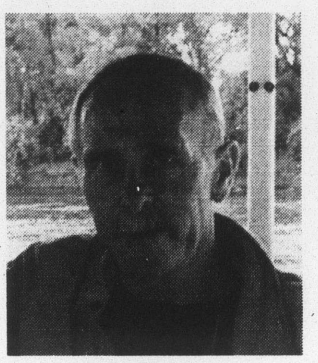
OBITUARIES

George J. Higgins III

A funeral service for George J. Higgins III of Abington will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday in McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Mr. Higgins died June 16.

Born in Boston to the late George and Demetria Higgins, he was a graduate of Weymouth High School. Mr. Higgins was a proud U.S. Air Force veteran, stationed at Tan Son Nhut Air Base during the Vietnam War. He enjoyed reading, traveling – especially to England – and watching Jeopardy. Mr. Higgins was also a history buff, and loved visiting many World War II sites during a recent European tour. The fourth generation of Higgins' to work for the railroad, he retired from Amtrak after more than 40 years.



GEORGE J. HIGGINS III

Beloved husband of 46 years to Jacquelyn A. (Starr) Higgins and loving father of Jillian Starr Higgins, both of Abington. Dear brother of Timothy Higgins and his wife Linda of Hanson and the late Patricia Farmer. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours are 9 to 11 a.m. Thursday in the funeral home.

Interment at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, Quincy Chapter c/o 8 Howe St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Quincy-Born Bill Dana, Famous Comedian

Bill Dana, who was born in Quincy and became one of the biggest comedy stars of the 1960s with his Jose Jimenez character, died June 15 at his home in Nashville, TN.

Mr. Dana was 92.

Born Oct. 24, 1924 in the City of Presidents, he was a 1942 graduate of Quincy High School.

The comedy legend's real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier to remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen show. He would gain a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, Jose Jimenez, that he created on the show.

The character – a bumbling Bolivian bellhop, became a cultural phenomenon in the early 1960s. Mr. Dana was invited to perform the character at the inaugural gala of President John F. Kennedy in 1961.

The character eventually got his own show, The Bill Dana Show, which appeared on TV from 1963 to 1965.

Mr. Dana, who was not Latino but rather Hungarian-Jewish descent, stopped doing the character in 1970 as cultural attitudes changed.

Other credits in Mr. Dana's entertainment career included writing the famous "Sammy's Visit" episode of All in the Family television show. In one scene Sammy Davis, Jr. kisses Archie Bunker, the beloved bigoted working class man portrayed by Carroll O'Connor, on the cheek.

Mr. Dana also served in the U.S. Army during World War II with the 263rd Infantry Regiment, 66th Infantry Division as a 60mm mortarman and machine gunner, as well as an unofficial interpreter.

Neponset River Watershed Association Marks 50th Anniversary

When the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) was founded 50 years ago, its namesake river was so polluted that people feared venturing onto its waters.

Today, paddlers in canoes and kayaks are a regular sight on the river on summer weekends. From its headwaters in Foxboro to Dorchester Bay, the river and its tributary streams flow cleaner and more freely, thanks to NepRWA efforts over the past half-century.

Members from the 14 watershed communities along with local and state officials recently celebrated the anniversary at NepRWA's annual meeting in Norwood. "The Neponset River Watershed Association's work over the past 50 years has given us a much cleaner and more accessible river today," said Steve Brayton of Dedham, a member on the NepRWA board of directors.

In his address, NepRWA Executive Director Ian Cooke reviewed the organization's first 50 years and then turned to the future. "We've come a long way, but the job of preserving and protecting the river and its watershed is never finished. We have plenty of challenges ahead to keep us busy for another 50 years," he said.

Recognition for the 50th anniversary milestone included citations from the state legislature and Governor Charlie Baker. State Sen. Walter Timilty (D-Milton), who presented the awards, praised NepRWA "for your long-time efforts to preserve and protect our watershed."

The Neponset Conservation Association, as it was originally named, was founded in 1967, just a few years after passage of the Hatch Act, the Commonwealth's first wetlands protection legislation. At the time, the notion that the Neponset River, contaminated by decades of industrial waste, could be a recreational resource or a valued wildlife habitat would have seemed fantastical. In addition, a new threat was looming: a plan to extend Route I-95 through the Fowl Meadow into Boston.

But even then some envisioned a different river. In 1966 a small group of activists got a radical idea that led directly to the association's start a year later. The group decided to paddle down the Neponset through Fowl Meadow to Lower Mills with a newspaper reporter in tow. It was far from a pleasant paddle on the river, as the reporter wrote:

The moment we set our canoes into the putrid, murky water…we were overwhelmed by the noxious odor caused by the industrial waste dumped into the river…gobs of sludge floated past us…more gobs of raw paper over a foot thick, so blocked our passage… that we were forced to carry the canoes for about half a mile until we found a clear area.

The Neponset of 1967 is long gone. The Association's early efforts helped defeat the highway plan and start the ecological recovery. In the decades since, NepRWA has succeeded in reducing industrial pollution and stormwater runoff, as well as removing old neglected dams.

Today, NepRWA priorities include water quality monitoring, further reducing stormwater runoff, and improving stream flow in tributary streams to benefit fish and other wildlife.

"As we move into our second half-century, we remain committed to our original mission 50 years ago to preserve and protect the Neponset River, its tributary streams and its wildlife," said NepRWA President Robert McGregor.

The Neponset River Watershed Association is a grassroots, member-supported conservation group working to clean up and protect the Neponset River, its tributaries and surrounding watershed lands. For more information, visit www.neponset.org or call 781-575-0354.

Palmucci Eyes Changes To Reduce Property Tax Burden On Homeowners

condominium buildings.

Palmucci said Quincy would become the first community to tax large apartment complexes at the commercial rate instead of the residential one.

"Although those are residences, those are businesses that are engaged in the business of providing residences," he said. "Therefore, the owners should be taxed at the commercial rate – the same rate that every other business in the city pays."

By taxing large apartment complexes at the commercial rate, Palmucci said the city would collect an extra $12 million. Palmucci said that money could be used to fund the tax exemption he is seeking for those residents who own and occupy their own home or condo.

"If that home rule petition is allowed and authorized that would provide a funding source whereby I believe, based on the number of owner-occupied houses in the city of Quincy and condos, we'd be able to give a $300 or $400 tax break to folks," he said.

"Residents constantly ask me where are the benefits of the development in the city…I think this would provide that benefit."

QYFL Making Bold Move To AYF In 2018
League To Realign As Quincy And North Quincy

By SEAN HALPIN

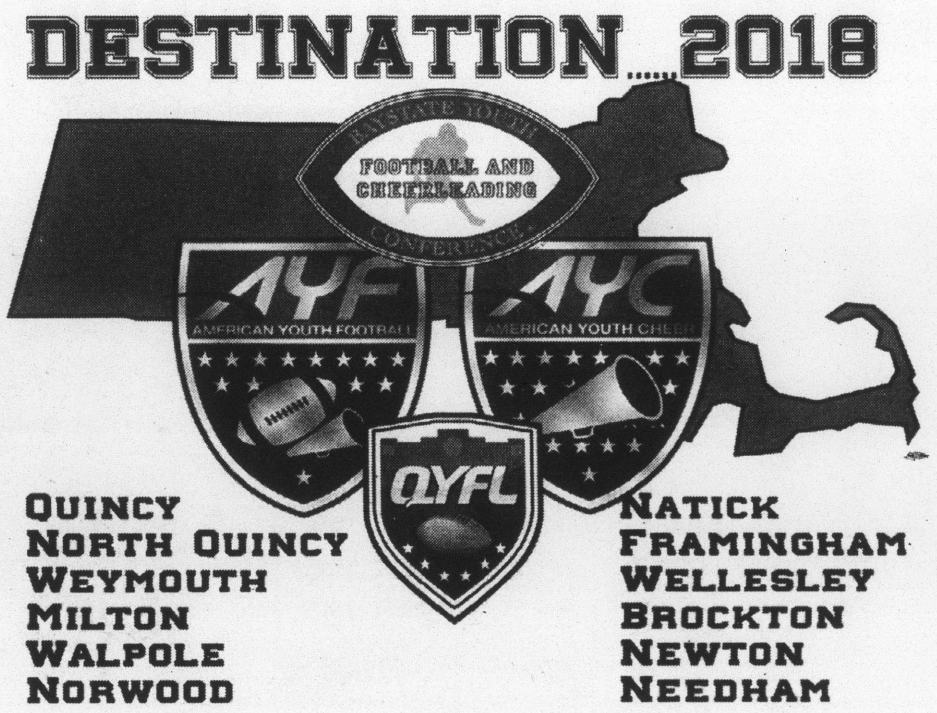
The historic Quincy Youth Football League is making a radical new change to its traditional "Neighborhood based" format.

In 2018, the League will be moving under the umbrella of the National Governing body known as American Youth Football (AYF), the QYFL Board of Directors recently announced.

The move to AYF will include merging the traditional, five Quincy franchises (Apaches, Panthers, Manets, Elks and Storm) and consolidate into two teams or "Associations." Each Association would mirror Quincy's High School Programs: Quincy and North Quincy.

Each of the two Associations will field 6 grade Teams, Squads in both Football & Cheer:

- A TEAM: 8th Grade
- B TEAM: 7th Grade
- C TEAM: 6th Grade
- D TEAM: 5th Grade
- E1 TEAM: 4th Grade (Instructional)
- E2 TEAM: 2nd/3rd Grade (Instructional)



The newly formed Quincy and North Quincy Associations will play in the Local AYF affiliate, Bay State Youth Football and Cheerleading Conference (BSYFCC). Like the QYFL, the Bay State Conference has a long history and has some very well established football and cheerleading programs. The Quincy teams will compete against Towns like: Weymouth, Milton, Norwood, Walpole, Wellesley, Natick, Needham, Brockton, Framingham and Natick.

The decision didn't come easy for the 67-year-old, neighborhood based, League.

"Many factors where considered in making the move to AYF," said QYFL President Steve Koski. "The need for our athletes to compete at a higher level, outside of Quincy and our ability to continue to maintain five franchises within the city, where the biggest factors," said Koski.

The New Quincy Youth Football & Cheer Associations will continue to have a neighborhood-based rivalry the Quincy and North Quincy factions but, will also compete with nearby towns as close as Milton and Weymouth.

The QYFL Committee considered many options while searching for a local league to compete in. The biggest being: Pop Warner Vs. American Youth Football.

Pop Warner was immediately ruled out due to the weight restrictions and the fact they older players to compete against younger kids in same weight class. The League chose to go with AYF because no child would be excluded from playing.

AYF is not weight restrictive and all athletes compete on true, grade/age appropriate levels. There are no "tryouts" or "cuts" of any kind. Athletes will be assigned to teams on a first come, first serve basis. Registration for the inaugural 2018 season under the new format will 2018 registration will likely open on April 1, 2018.

The 2017 season will be the final year competeing in the tradition QYFL format. The QYFL Board and Team Directors are dedicated to making 2017 the best season to date. After the championship Sunday on Nov. 19th, the franchises will unite and begin work toward the AYF Merger in 2018.

All QYFL Teams are still accepting new players and cheerleaders for the 2017 season. For more information, check out their Website at www.QYFL.org. An AYF-2018 Informational Meeting for Parents will be held in August. Meeting location, date and time TBD.

City, QATV Produce Driver, Pedestrian Safety PSAs

Mayor Tom Koch, the Quincy Police Department and Quincy Community Access Television, have partnered to produce a series of Public Service Announcements addressing both driver and pedestrian safety issues across the city.

These video PSAs will be released each Wednesday, over the next five weeks on the City of Quincy's website (www.quincyma.gov), the QPD homepage within the city's site, Quincy Community Access Television and all associated social media platforms.

The PSAs will address issues such as, bicycle safety, school zone safety, emergency vehicle procedures, crosswalk signals, pedestrian awareness safety, distracted driving, mobile phone use and more. All 10 video PSAs are hosted by Quincy Police Officer Paul Coughlin.

Mayor Koch commented on the motivation for producing the PSA's stating, "Improving safety for pedestrians, bicyclists and drivers is a major priority for us a City, and education is a key element of that. We hope these public service announcements will get people thinking about their surroundings whether they are walking, riding on a bike or in a car."

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan added, "As chief of police, I am dedicated to making the City of Quincy a better and safer place for all the thousands of people who live, work or visit this great city. It is important as a City that we provide and allow safe and convenient transportation choices whether it's walking, riding or driving.

"Motorist, pedestrians and bicyclist should practice their due diligence to follow the rules of the road by obeying all traffic signs, signals, crosswalks and lane markings to ensure everyone stays safe. We can enforce the laws and give advice, but ultimately, it's the people of this City who must help us by doing their part to keep themselves and others safe from accidents. As we head toward the warmer months of the year, it is my hope that by educating the public on safety, we reduce the number of pedestrian and bicycle accidents in our great city."

Elizabeth Campbell, executive director of Quincy Community Access TV, said: "One of the roles of Quincy Access Television in the community is to inform and educate the citizens on issues pertaining to their well-being.

"We take our role seriously and partner with many organizations to achieve our mission. The following public service announcements, produced in cooperation with the Mayor's office and the Quincy Police Department, reflect the philosophy and commitment of all the participants towards making Quincy a peaceful and safer place to live."

The first two video PSAs are primarily focused on bicycle safety and school zone procedures.

Two Graduate MA Virtual School

Two students from Quincy were among the more than 70 high school seniors from across Massachusetts who recently graduated from TEC Connections Academy (TECCA), the Commonwealth's largest virtual public school.

They are:

Amber Hurd and Anya King

TECCA's senior class celebrated its in-person graduation ceremony at Mechanic's Hall in Worcester. TECCA is an innovative, technology-enhanced public school option that delivers full-time, tuition-free, public school online to students in grades K-12 from across the state.

The late Stephen J. McGrath and three other Quincy natives were recently inducted into the Archbishop Williams High School Hall of Fame at the third annual Bishops' Ball - A Celebration of Excellence, at the Lantana in Randolph.

The Academic Hall of Fame inductees were McGrath, Laura Sweeney DiMascio, and Dr. Gerald Saluti, Ph.D. Paul Messina was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame.

McGrath, a member of the class of 1971, was a longtime Quincy city official, serving as a five-term Ward Five City Councilor 1977-1987, council president 1986-87, city solicitor 1990-2002, special counsel to the president of Quincy College 2002-2008, and director of human resources for the city from 2008 until his death in 2013.

"He served for many years as head attorney in our legal department and really did a brilliant job in that role," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch whose pre-recorded interview was shown on a screen to the 330 guests in attendance. "He was a real Hall of Fame politician," said Koch, who was present at the event and who had appointed McGrath as director of human resources for the city.

At Williams, McGrath was the school's director of development for five years.

"He always represented the school with class and dignity and was effectively able to articulate the case for support," said fellow attorney and friend, school President Dennis Duggan, who read McGrath's biography at the ceremony. "He was an empathetic listener, a skilled advocate, a trusted advisor, a principal fiduciary, and a dedicated, selfless representative."

Duggan welcomed McGrath's widow, Jane Madden McGrath, sister Pat McGrath, brother David McGrath, and Mayor Koch to the dais for McGrath's induction.

McGrath excelled at Williams academically where he was voted "Most Likely to Succeed" by his classmates. He served as president of the Student Council, participated in the performing arts, wrote for the school newspaper and published the yearbook. He attended Boston College and Suffolk University Law School, and was admitted to the Mass. Bar in 1978.

DiMascio, class of '98, earned the school's highest honor at graduation, the Williams Award. She was a member of the National Honor Society, the Student Council, the choir, and the tennis and volleyball teams. She was elected to the National Society of Collegiate Scholars at Providence College, and merited a full scholarship to Boston College graduate school where she received her Master of Art in Italian Language and Literature. Living in West Roxbury, she is an Italian teacher at Newton North High School where she leads the Italian exchange program.

Messina, class of '76, a four letter athlete, was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame for his accomplishments in hockey and baseball. In hockey, he scored the winning goal in the state tournament in 1975. He lead AWHS in scoring his senior year and made the Catholic Conference All-Star team. The program, Hockey Night in Boston, awarded him an Honorable Mention, and identified him as a "Player to Watch." As a shortstop In baseball, he was on the team that won the Catholic Conference Championship and was named to the Catholic Conference All-Star team. The Boston Globe praised the infield on the AWHS 1975-76 team as one of the best in the state.

DR. GERALD SALUTI, Ph.D., Class of 1962, currently of Brick, New Jersey, formerly of Quincy, was inducted into the Archbishop Williams High School Academic Hall of Fame at the third annual Bishops' Ball at the Lantana in Randolph on April 1. From left, school Principal Dr. Michael Volonnino, Saluti, student presenter Margaret Slein, and school President Dennis Duggan '70.

Messina, now of Randolph, is employed by the U.S. Postal Service as a mailing requirements representative.

Dr. Saluti, class of 1962, was a scholar-athlete at Williams. A four-year Honor Roll student and a member of the Student Government, he was also a three-year letter winner in basketball and baseball and was named Most Valuable Player as a senior of the post-season basketball Catholic Tournament.

He attended Providence College on scholarship, where he made Dean's list each year, graduating with a degree in Chemistry. Under a National Defense Education Act fellowship, he earned a Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry from Boston College. He later finished first in his class at Carnegie Mellon, where he earned an MBA degree.

He has worked as a research chemist and company owner and president, and has been awarded four patents. Living in Brick, New Jersey, he currently has his own consulting company.

City To Buy, Raze 2 Center Buildings

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will purchase a pair of buildings on Cottage Avenue near the Hancock Lot and demolish them by the end of the year.

The City Council approved taking the buildings at 23-29 Cottage Ave. and 31-39 Cottage Ave. for $3.5 million by eminent domain Monday night during a special session. The two parcels are owned by separate legal entities – 23 Cottage Avenue Trust and 31 Cottage Avenue Trust – with the same trustee, James Sullivan.

The council approved the land takings in a series of 6-0 votes. Councillors Ian Cain, Brad Croall and Nina Liang were not present Monday.

William Geary, Mayor Thomas Koch's special counsel for downtown development, said the city needed to take the buildings to support development on the neighboring Hancock Lot. By demolishing the buildings, the city will be able to relocate a sewer line that now runs under the Hancock Lot – the sewer line needs to be moved before a new 730-

Planning Bd. OKs Chestnut Place

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board has approved plans for Chestnut Place, a 15-story building in Quincy Center that will be the tallest building in Quincy upon completion.

The board gave the go-ahead to the proposal at its meeting June 22. Peter O'Connell, a Quincy developer whose other projects include Marina Bay and State Street South, first unveiled plans for the project in April 2015.

Bob Davis, an attorney for O'Connell, said construction of the high-rise structure could begin this fall but would more likely commence in early 2018.

Chestnut Place will be located at 43-73 Dennis Ryan Parkway, in what is now the city-owned Hancock Lot. The building will include 124 high-end apartments with 4,200 feet of retail space on the ground floor.

The City Council in January approved a land disposition agreement negotiated by Mayor Thomas Koch and O'Connell for the purchase of the city-owned land on which Chestnut Place will be built. The developer will pay $940,000 – the appraised value of the land – for the 13,526-foot parcel. O'Connell will close on the lot after financing for the project is secured and the city issues building permits.

Under the city's agreement with O'Connell, the Independence Day Events Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Board of License Commissioners granted special-use permits to several Independence Day events.

The board on June 20 granted the Merrymount Association a special-use permit for events it will host on July 3 and 4.

The association will hold a road race at 5 p.m. on July 3, followed by a beach party at Merrymount Beach that will last until 10 p.m. Beer, wine and food will be sold during the beach party; the association will have two food trucks on hand.

Mark Sauter, the association's president, said the July 3 beach party attracts 500 to 600 people each year.

The association's parade will start at 3 p.m. on July 4.

Also approved at the meeting was a special-use permit for the Houghs Neck Community Council's annual Family Fun Day at Edgewater Drive Beach. The event will be held 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on July 3. Aaron Cavin, the council's chairman, said hot dogs, soda and chips would be served during the Family Fun Day.

In other business, the board approved a common victualler license for SGD Tofu & BBQ, which will open inside the former Radio Shack at 225 Quincy Ave. The restaurant, a Ko-

Concern Raised Over MCAS Essay Textbox

By TOM GORMAN

Some school committee members are raising concerns over the essay portion of the new online MCAS exam.

Curriculum Director Madeline Roy and Special Education Director Erin Perkins gave a power point overview to the school committee on June 14 of the new MCAS 2.0 exam that was administered to students this spring. The presentation included video testimonials from several students who took the exam.

During the power point, a screenshot was shown of the essay page that includes a small textbox where students transcribe four pages of text from their prewritten essay. The textbox only shows several sentences at once and requires students to constantly scroll.

Committee member Emily Lebo said the textbox is much too small and prevents

Quincy Native Helps Dedicate Flag Pole For Late Marine

Quincy native and World War II Army veteran Lou Pasquale was the guest of honor at a recent Flag Day ceremony and dedication held at National Grid maintenance yard in Braintree.

Pasquale, 92, is well known throughout the South Shore and Boston area for his good works with the DAV and veterans affairs.

He helped raise the flag at a new flag pole dedicated in memory of Christopher J. Orlando. Orlando, a Hingham native and U.S. Marine corporal, died Jan. 14, 2016 off the Hawaiian Islands. Orlando, a flight crew chief, and 11 other Marines were killed when two Marine helicopters crashed during a nighttime training mission.

A small Marine Corps flag, with Christopher's name on it, was presented to his father Richard, and attached to the lanyard during the flag raising ceremony. Richard Orlando works for National Grid.

A larger flag will be presented to the Orlando family at a later date.

National Grid, with Pasquale's help, raised these flags in honor of all those who have served, and continue to serve, in the U.S. military protecting freedom and democracy throughout the world.

rean barbeque, will be open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week. The former Radio Shack needs to be renovated to make way for the restaurant, which will seat about 60 patrons.

Also approved were the special-use permits for Stop & Shop's fourth annual Summer Concert Series, which will take place from noon to 1:30 p.m. on nine Wednesdays this summer between July 5 and Aug. 30 outside the supermarket chain's headquarters at 1385 Hancock St.

The June 20 meeting was dedicated to Cindy Manning, as it was her final meeting as the licensing board's secretary. She is retiring after a 30-year career with the city of Quincy, 12 with the assessor's office and the last 18 as secretary for the licensing board.

"You've been an invaluable asset," said Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the board's chairman.

"You've just been tremendous and I'm going to miss you so, so much. The work you do on the board is just absolutely phenomenal – it's top shelf – and the research you do to make sure all the T's are crossed and I's are dotted, I can't say enough about it.

"I just want to thank you for all your service," Scheele added.

Manning said she has enjoyed her time working with the board.

"Thank you all," she said. "It's been great, really. I never minded coming to work. After 30 years it's time."

Polling Places For Fall Election Set

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council has approved the location of polling places for this fall's municipal election.

The polling places for the municipal election – the preliminary will be held on Sept. 12, if necessary, and the final on Nov. 7 – will remain mostly unchanged from last year. The one exception is in Ward 1, Precinct 2, which covers most of Germantown. Voters in that precinct will cast ballots at O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St., this fall, instead of at the Germantown Community Center on Palmer Street.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo said the new location was chosen because it is more suitable for voters.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes asked about a possible change in Ward 5, Precinct 2, which covers Wollaston Center, including the senior citizens buildings at 80 and 91 Clay St. Those residents currently vote at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church at 40 Beale St., which Hughes said can be difficult for the senior citizens to access.

"Those folks who are in that area that vote there from 80 Clay and 91 Clay express difficulty walking down the stairs into church," Hughes said. "That is a busy corner."

Crispo said she has been looking at other possible polling places in the precinct, but had yet to find one. She will continue to work on alternatives this summer in the hopes of finding a new polling place and will work with the council and Secretary of the Commonwealth William Galvin on the matter if a new one were found.

"So far I have not succeeded, but I have not given up. I felt the right thing to do was to move forward and should something become available over the summer, I will certainly let you all know and reach out to the secretary of the commonwealth and notify voters," Crispo said.

She noted 80 Clay St. and 91 Clay St. have community rooms, but they are on the upper levels of the high-rise buildings.

Acrylic Painting July 14th At Kennedy Center

Artist Janet Harrold will be at the Kennedy Center Friday, July 14th at 10 a.m. for a fun and relaxing "Paint in the Moment" session.

RED LIKE NO OTHER

The words "ruby and "red" are virtually synonymous. In fact, ruby derives its name from the Latin word for red, "rubeus." This rare and valuable July birthstone belongs to the same mineral family (corundum) as sapphire, but is regarded as an individual gemstone due to its allure and historical significance. While its red color varies with individual deposits, the most desirable color is the renowned "pigeon's blood," a pure red with a hint of blue. Beyond its beautiful color, ruby has the distinction of being the hardest mineral after diamond. Ruby also commonly has inclusions, which are not necessarily indicative of lower quality. Included rutile needles produce a soft sheen ("silk"), which creates a cat's eye when cut "en cabochon."

Rubies are used in bracelets, necklaces, rings, and earrings. They are used both as centerpiece gemstone in pendants and rings, as well as a secondary stone to complement gemstones like diamonds. Quincy Boy Scouts Attend Good Scout Breakfast

The second annual Good Scout Breakfast to support urban Boy Scout youth development programs was held recently at Aloft Boston Seaport.

This event, hosted by the Boy Scouts Spirit of Adventure Council, brought Boston business and community leaders together to raise money to support of the Boy Scouts' many youth development programs in the city. WCVB TV 5 reporter Nicole Estaphan served as event emcee.

The Boy Scouts Spirit of Adventure Council honored Boston Fire Commissioner and Chief Joseph Finn with The Good Scout Award. Commissioner Finn was recognized for being unselfish in serving others on an individual and community basis. The presentation of The Good Scout award allows the Boy Scouts to honor a leader who had made a significant contribution to his or her community and has given of themselves to the benefit of youth.

Mark Fortune, president of the Boston Building Trades and Business Agent for Sprinkler Fitters Local 550, was presented with

The George Meany Award, named for the union worker who provided exemplary service to youths and promoted the importance of laborers to the community. Trinh Nguyen, Director of Workforce Development for the City of Boston, accepted The Whitney M. Young Jr. Service Award for outstanding services and involvement with youth from rural or low-income backgrounds.

"The Boston Good Scout Breakfast is an opportunity for our organization to recognize those who exemplify Scouting values by giving back to the community," said Chuck Eaton, Chief Executive for the Spirit of Adventure Council. "Our inner-city programs have revitalized urban Scouting, and provides kids with opportunities to engage in outdoor activities and learn valuable skills in science, technology, engineering and math that can inspire them to pursue careers in the most relevant industries heading into the future."

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On July 14, 1789, Parisian revolutionaries and mutinous troops storm and dismantle the Bastille, signaling the start of the French Revolution. The royal fortress had come to symbolize the tyranny of the Bourbon monarchs.

• On July 11, 1804, Vice President Aaron Burr fatally shoots his long-time political antagonist Alexander Hamilton in a duel. Charged with murder in New York and New Jersey, Burr, still the vice president, returned to Washington, D.C., where he finished his term immune from prosecution.

• On July 16, 1935, the world's first parking meter is installed on the corner of First Street and Robinson Avenue in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Indignant opponents of the meters considered paying for parking un-American, as it forced drivers to pay what amounted to a tax on their cars.

• On July 12, 1957, Dwight Eisenhower becomes the first president to ride in a helicopter. Although helicopters had been tested since 1947, it was not until 10 years later that a president considered using the new machine for short, official trips to and from the White House.

• On July 10, 1962, the United States Patent Office issues Swedish engineer Nils Bohlin a patent for his three-point automobile safety belt. The National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 made seat belts mandatory on all new American vehicles from the 1968 model year onward.

• On July 13, 1978, Ford Motor Company chairman Henry Ford II fires Lee Iacocca as Ford's president. The following year, Iacocca was hired as president of the nearly bankrupt Chrysler Corporation, which ended up getting a $1.5 billion bailout from Congress.

• On July 15, 2002, John Walker Lindh, the "American Taliban," accepts a plea-bargain deal and pleads guilty to one count of supplying services to the Taliban and carrying weapons. Lindh was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

students from properly seeing their work as they transcribe their essay on to the computer. She opined the students could be forced to condense or drop words and sentences during the heat of the exam.

"I'm concerned about the small box students have to type in for a text-based essay," she said.

Colleague Barbara Isola agreed, saying that the textbox is much too small to allow quality writing on such an important assessment exam. She said the textbox hinders students from properly formulating their sentences.

"I do a text message (on a cell phone) and it goes off the screen and I'm not concerned about grammar and structure," she said. "An assessment not only tests what children know, they learn while they are doing the test."

A few of the students giving video testimonials noted they found the essay portion of the MCAS time consuming.

Lebo voiced frustration with the state, saying it is "inexcusable" they designed the textbox in this manner.

Isola suggested the committee contact the state expressing their concern over the textbox.

"I would like us as a school committee to discuss whether or not something should be sent to (the state) to express our concern about this," she said.

Lebo suggested the district's writing specialists weigh in on the matter and provide feedback to the committee before contacting state officials.

"I would like to hear from a writing specialist if they would really ask (students) to write like that if they couldn't look at their work easily," she said. "We wouldn't teach them in this way. I would like to get some expert advice so we could formulate a response to the state. We should ask if they are planning to improve it."

Committee member James D'Amicis concurred, saying that teachers should relate how the students are dealing with the issue.

"We should get an idea and hear the experience they have with their students and what we can do to improve upon based on their experience," he said.

Perkins explained that the students are given paper and pen to prewrite their essays and open responses and then transcribe the content on the computer. She said teachers work with students preparing them on how to prewrite and transfer their work.

Roy added that teachers instruct their students to write with "quality over quantity."

School committee Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli questioned how "students can access their work on the computer, organize their thoughts, correct, edit and get the final document presentable to the state" by prewriting and then transcribing the content to the textbox.

"There are so many flaws in this (exam)," he said. "I'll be curious to see how we do when the final results come in."

The committee will be looking into drafting a letter to the Massachusetts Association of Schools and the state education commissioner on the matter.

Perkins and Roy said this spring's new hybrid MCAS went well. They said teachers have been preparing students for the new "next generation assessment" exam that is more centered on the federal Common Cores standards.

Students featured in the video testimonials said they were prepared and most felt they did well on the test. A few found the math portion harder than previous MCAS and others found open responses challenging.

Students in grades 4 and 8 took the exam online this spring while the other grades used paper and pencil. The remaining grades will be phased in taking the test on computer over the next two years.

For the first time, all students could ask teachers for help during the exam if they had an issue such as not understanding a particular word or a problem with the computer.

According to Perkins, there are accommodations for students with disabilities including a dictation feature.

"Students can actually speak into the computer and the computer types the answer for them," she said.

Roy and Perkins said the new exam "assesses students' knowledge more deeply" and writing was embedded throughout the exam. They explained the test required students to present evidence for their answers on some portions.

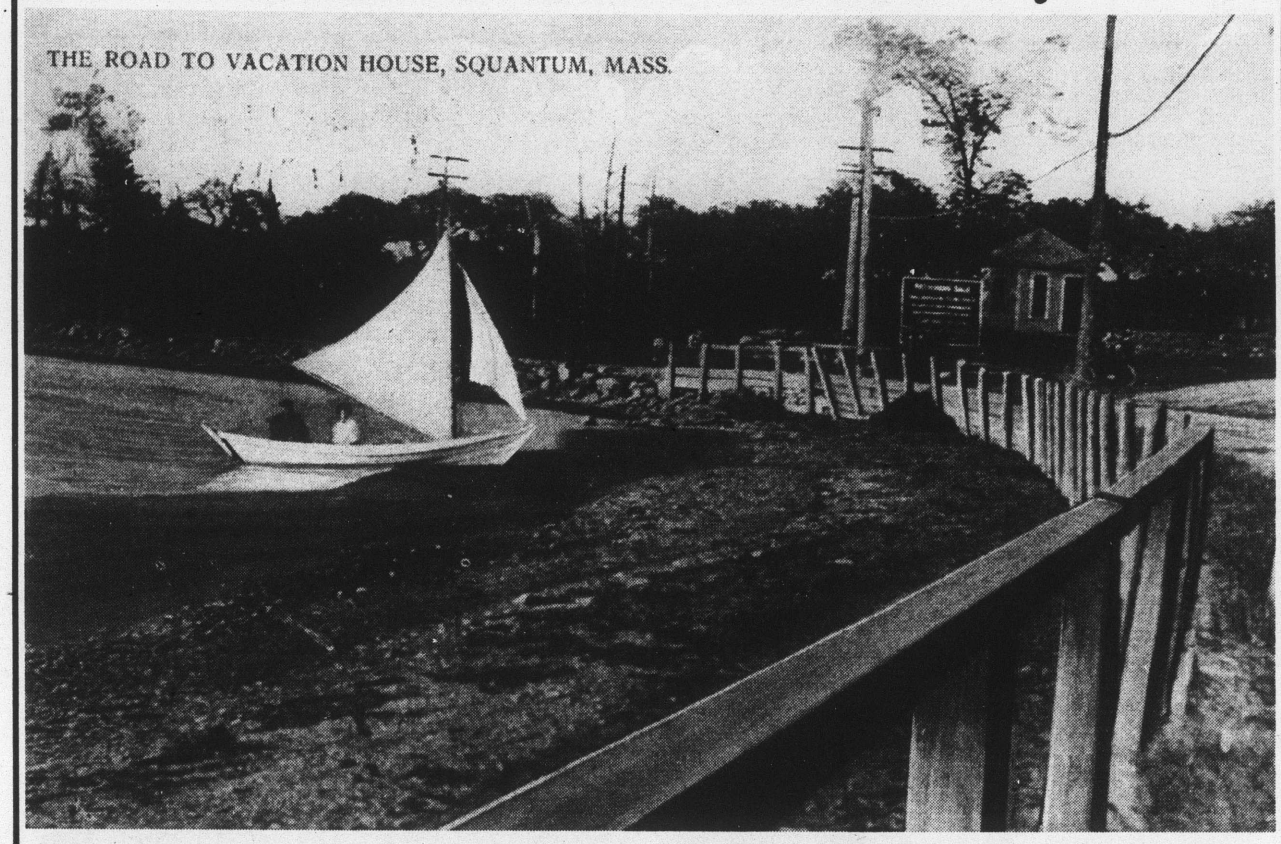
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1911 postcard view of the north side of East Squantum Street at the entrance to Squantum where it veers to the right and Dorchester Street goes to the left. Vacation House was a three-story summer home that was used for a time by the telephone company as a retreat house where they sent operators and other employees for vacations. It is now the site of the First Church of Squantum. The sign and small building was the office of John R. Nelson who was the sales agent for the 914 house lots created when then the 100 acre Titus estate on the north side of Squantum was subdivided and sold. Nelson later built a much larger office building on this site, now home to an apartment building. Today, in place of the fence, there is a seawall along this stretch of the roadway. Sustainable South Shore Advocacy Group Meets Sustainable South Shore, a thriving multi-town advocacy group committed to helping South Shore residents conserve energy, protect the environment, and live sustainable lives met for its second quarterly meeting on May 30.

The meeting of representatives from Quincy to Plymouth was held at Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm and included a potluck dinner and tour of the farm. The evening launched an initiative to advocate for 100 percent local clean energy on the South Shore.

Meeting attendees were treated to a tour of Holly Hill's 140-acre, certified organic farm by the farm's Executive Director, Cindy Prentice. The group visited the greenhouses, historic barns, and education gardens; and learned about some of the farm's innovative and sustainable practices.

Debbie Cook of Cohasset spoke to the group about what she learned about biochar on her trip to Peru and how biochar relates to stabilizing climate. As she explained, biochar is a form of carbon, made by burning organic material at high heat without oxygen, resulting in a porous, charcoal-like substance. This method was first developed thousands of years ago by indigenous people of the Amazon region.

The knowledge was lost 500 years ago, and has only recently been rediscovered. Biochar can be used to drastically improve soil fertility, protect plants against drought, remove toxins from soils, and help combat climate change by sequestering carbon within the soil.

Sustainable South Shore president Judeth Van Hamm of Hull went over the specifics of the new local clean energy project with the group, introducing the attendees to each other to share their expertise. Representatives from each of the South Shore towns will use the Local Clean Energy Checklist developed by the Mass Climate Action Network and Mass Power Forward to help understand how much progress their town has made toward energy efficiency, developing clean energy sources, encouraging sustainable transportation, fixing gas leaks, stabilizing sea level rise, and other sustainable actions.

The group is posting the results on its website, www.sustainablesouthshore.org, and will use the information gathered to plan and advocate for specific actions each town can make to move toward increased sustainability. Watch for updates on actions in Quincy.

If you are interested in learning more about the local clean energy initiative, contact Judeth Van Hamm at 781-925-5665 or one@hullportside.net.

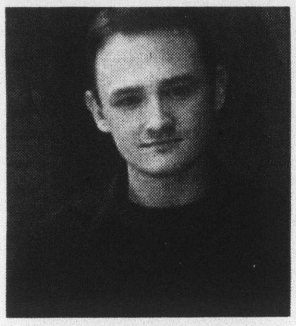
BSU Family Performing Arts Center To Present Shrek The Musical in July

Cast Includes Quincy's Christopher Spencer

The award-winning Family Performing Arts Center (FPAC) at Bridgewater State University will conclude its second season with a summer performance of Shrek the Musical during the month of July.

Christopher Spencer of Quincy will portray Lord Farquaad in his first production at FPAC. Previous credits include Emmett Forrest (Legally Blonde), Fred (A Christmas Carol), Robertson Ay/Valentine (Mary Poppins), Bobby Strong (Urinetown) Moritz Stiefel (Spring Awakening), and The Scarecrow (The Wizard Of Oz).



CHRISTOPHER SPENCER

Based on the Oscar-winning DreamWorks Animation film, Shrek the Musical is a Tony Award-winning fairy tale adventure featuring all new songs by Jeanine Tesori (Thoroughly Modern Millie; Caroline or Change) and a sidesplitting book and lyrics by David Lindsay-Abaire.

Shrek brings all of beloved characters from film to life on stage and proves there's more to the story than meets the ears. The leading cast, all of whom have featured singing roles and extensive stage time, include: Justin Grankewicz of Dorchester as Shrek; Emily Buckley of Fall River as Fiona; Dana Reid of Peabody as Donkey; Jordan Reynolds of Boston as Pinocchio; and Asha Hirsi of Boston as Dragon.

Artistic director of the FPAC presentation is Dr. Colleen Rua of Medford, assistant professor of theater at BSU, while Dori Ployer of Holbrook is the choreographer. Theater Professor Lisa Troy of Bridgewater is producing director and Brett Tiberi of Medford is technical director.

FPAC performances will be staged in the Rondileau Campus Center Auditorium on the following dates: Fridays, July 14 and 21 at 7 p.m.; Saturdays, July 15 and 22 at 2 and 7 p.m.; and Sundays, July 16 and 23 at 2 p.m.

Tickets, which range in price from $25.50 to $10.50, are available at www.BSUtix.com. Free parking on campus is available in the West and Harrington lots.

Summer Fun At The Crane Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

Want to encourage your family to read more this summer?

From June 23rd through Aug. 31st track their reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading game. Sign up, log books, and complete challenges. As you add books and complete challenges you will earn online badges and online raffle tickets.

We'll have a drawing for the raffle prizes the first week in September. We have two programs one for babies and young children up to age 6 and the other for ages 7-13. Teens and adults are invited to join our teen and adult summer reading program.

Looking for some good books to read? When you sign up for the online summer reading program you will begin receiving weekly emails with book suggestions. Parents of younger children will also receive an early literacy tip to extend your reading experience for older children these suggestions are a great way to find new books and authors to try. Don't forget to check out the book displays at all library locations for additional suggestions.

Are you looking for ways to keep busy this summer? Check out the dozens of programs available at the Thomas Crane Public Library beginning July 3rd as we participate in the nationwide summer reading adventure, "Build a Better World." The Thomas Crane Public Library's summer library adventure is two full months of fun for children of all ages

Meet some unusual animals from around the world, try your hand a LEGO and other engineering challenges such as building towers, blizzard proof houses and rockets that really fly, learn about Pyramids and Pharaohs, sing and dance with Rubi, hear a story at the Wollaston Beach Playground, visit with Mother Goose and Little Bo-Peep, show your creativity with crafts, participate in pajama storytimes, play with bubbles, watch movies and more all for free this summer at the library.

The library offers programs for children of all ages; details are available on the library's website thomascranelibrary.org.

Monday, July 3rd brings the start of two weekly programs. Every Monday afternoon stop by the North Quincy Branch Library at 2 p.m. for a movie matinee. This summer we'll be traveling the world with favorite Disney films beginning with Moana on July 3rd at 2 p.m. this movie is rated PG and runs for 110 minutes.

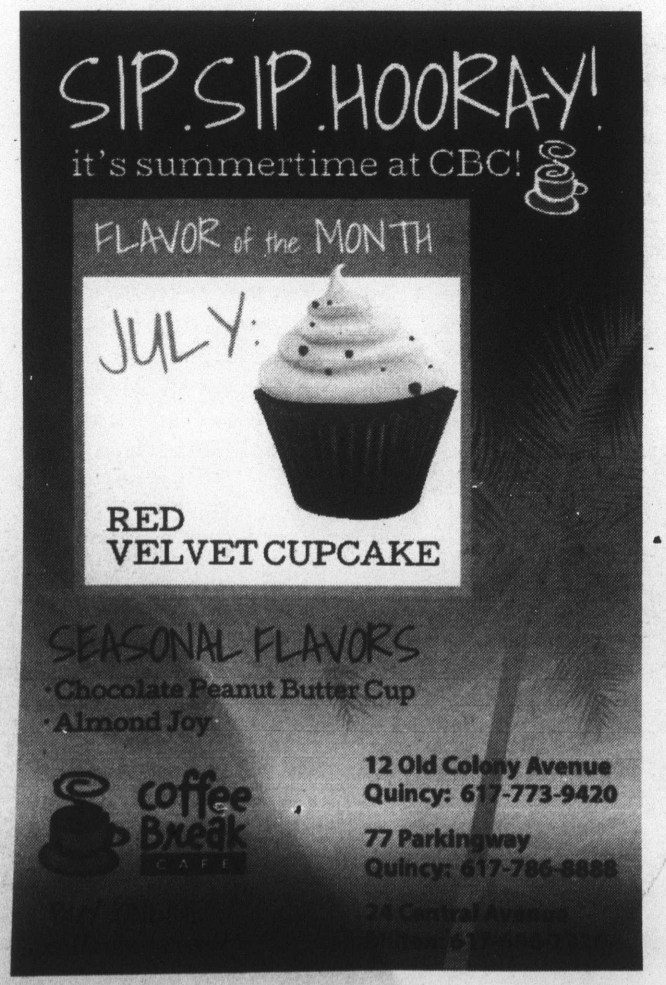
Also beginning Monday, July 3rd is the return of Art-to-go a 9 week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range.

They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 to 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

The weekly craft will be at the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. Our first craft will be a popsicle stick collage.

For a complete listing of all summer programs and activities check out the Events Calendar and Summer Fun section of our website thomascranelibrary.org

These programs are supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.



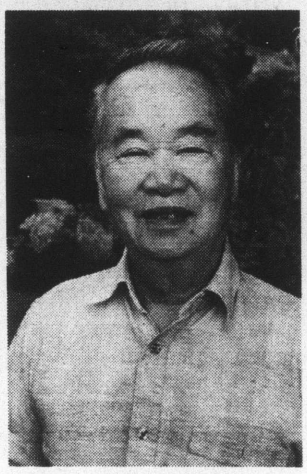
Chinese Brushpainter Mei Ching Featured At Art Exhibition

In its inaugural exhibition, the Pao Arts Center, 99 Albany St., Boston, presents the work of Chinese brush-painter, Mei Ching of Quincy.

Mei Ching was born in Taishan, Guangdong in 1938. From 1957-65, Mei Ching studied at the Hubei Institute of Fine Arts in the Department of Traditional Chinese Painting with a concentration in Birds and Flowers. He moved to Boston in 1980 with his family and has continued to study, paint, teach and share his love of Chinese art.

Mei said he believes that the essence of Chinese art is the emotional feeling that a creation evokes in those who appreciate the work and the lasting impression it instills upon those who has seen something they enjoyed. In his exhibit, Mei Ching celebrates the arrival of spring, as well as the beauty and reawakening that the season represents.

World of Flowers depicts a pavilion nestled into a mountainside covered with flowers in full bloom. Using foreshortening to highlight the branch above, Mei Ching invites viewers to enter the realm of the painting and imagine themselves surrounded by blossoming trees. One flower is just about to bud, signaling the arrival of spring.



MEI CHING

The philosopher Zhuangzi's famous anecdote on the happiness of fish left a lasting impression on Mei Ching, and his painting Song of Fish captures their joy, as they swim freely. Mei Ching hopes everyone who visits the gallery can experience the joie de vivre that the fish embody.

In Spring in the Qinling Mountains, a group of pandas gathers in the forests of the Qinling Mountains with the arrival of spring. Bathed in natural light and surrounded by lush nature, Mei Ching imagines them as a warm, welcoming family. As pandas serve as "ambassadors" for China, Mei Ching believes that art can play a diplomatic role as well, transcending ethnic and regional boundaries.

Quincy Oral Surgeon President Dental Society

David Lustbader, DMD, a Quincy oral and maxillofacial surgeon, has been elected President of the Massachusetts Dental Society (MDS).

An MDS member since 1990, Dr. Lustbader most recently served as MDS president-elect and vice president. He has also served as Trustee of the South Shore District Dental Society on the MDS Board of Trustees, as well as General Arrangements co-chairperson for the 2015 Yankee Dental Congress, New England's largest dental meeting.

"I am honored to be the next President of the Massachusetts Dental Society," said Dr. Lustbader. "I very much look forward to serving this organization and bringing together dental professionals in Massachusetts to tackle the major issues facing patients—especially the underserved—and the profession of dentistry in the Commonwealth. As dentists, we have a responsibility to continue to take a leadership role in the promotion of oral health."

Dr. Lustbader received his bachelor's and dental degrees from Boston University. He completed his residency in oral and maxillofacial surgery at Long Island Jewish Medical Center in New York, with an emphasis on reconstructive, implant, and pre-prosthetic surgery.

He served as clinical instructor for SUNY at Stony Brook School of Dental Medicine for two years and at Boston University Henry M. Goldman School of Dental Medicine since 1991.

Dr. Lustbader is currently chief of oral and maxillofacial surgery at Carney Hospital and Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton. He is also a clinical instructor at Boston Medical Center.

Dr. Lustbader maintains a private practice, South Shore Oral Surgery Associates, located at 270 Quincy Ave. in Quincy. He lives in Canton with his wife Wendy.

Ham Cakes

By MARIE

The ingredients for ham cake are very similar to a recipe that I use when making crab cakes. If you like this recipe you can buy two thick slices of ham and use them in this dish.

INGREDIENTS

1 1/2 cups of cold mashed potatoes
5 ounces of finely chopped cooked ham
2 scallions finely chopped
1 egg
1 tablespoon of Dijon mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
1 1/4 cups panko bread crumbs and
½ cup of vegetable oil

Stir together the mashed potatoes, ham, scallions, egg, mustard, salt and pepper and ½ of the panko bread crumbs and combined thoroughly. Put remaining panko crumbs in a shallow bowl and set aside.

Scoop out 1/3 cup of ham mixture roll into a ball and flatten slightly into a patty. Press both sides of the patty into remaining panko bread crumbs.

Make 6 more patties in the same matter.

In a 12 inch skillet pan-fry the patties 4 at a time in oil until golden brown and transfer to paper towel to drain.

Banana Strawberry Grain Free Bread

By SUSIE

I have lots of patients who love to bake, and get so excited when I provide them with healthier versions of their favorite things.

One of them recently was banana strawberry bread. Her recipe had tons of sugar and used good old white flour. This one has neither. Not as sweet as what most are used to, but once you take out all the sugar, your palate adjusts and what you used to think was "normal" ends up tasting far too sweet.

Here is a recipe for banana strawberry bread that is grain free and only uses a teeny bit of sweetener.

BANANA STRAWBERRY GRAIN FREE BREAD

3 organic ripe bananas, mashed
2 organic eggs
2 tsp baking powder
½ cup chopped walnuts
1¼ cup blanched almond flour NOT almond meal (Bob's Red Mill or Honeyville makes a great one)
¼ tsp baking soda
½ cup organic strawberries (chopped) oil to grease the pan (I use coconut)
¼ tsp cinnamon
2 tablespoons maple syrup or honey

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees and grease loaf pan with coconut oil
2. Combine the baking powder, soda, cinnamon and almond meal then stir in the strawberries, bananas, maple syrup and eggs and mix well.
3. Add chopped walnuts, mix and pour into the loaf pan.
4. Bake for 40 min or until toothpick comes out dry
5. Let bread sit for 10 min and remove to completely cool
6. Serve and enjoy.

GEORGE DOWNING HONORED – Former Harvard University police officer George Downing of Quincy was recently honored with the Harvard Varsity Club Award for the "outstanding accomplishment in preserving the traditions, fostering the ideals, and advancing the interests of the Club and of Harvard Athletics." Officer Downing spent a total of 40 years at Harvard, first as the supervisor of Building and Grounds before beginning his 30-year tenure as a member of the HUPD. Alumni student athletes remembered Officer Downing from his regular beat in the River Sector where he worked the midnight-to-8 a.m. shift. Many shared a fond story about Officer Downing and no doubt owes him a debt of gratitude. Here George is shown with his wife Mary, children Mary, Cathy, Denise and Denis and grandchildren.

The Founding Fathers had the radical idea that a government should be for the people.

Today, America's 400 plus National Parks represent this exact idea. Join Adams National Historical Park at the "Continental Congress" to debate, defend, compromise, and consider the meaning of independence.

Experience history through the performing arts as two of our nation's most celebrated Founding Fathers, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson and Founding Mother, Abigail Adams, are saluted in the stage play: Jefferson and Adams, by Howard Ginsberg.

There will also be a reading of the Declaration of Independence and a celebration of the 241st anniversary of the adoption of this historic document.

July 4 activities include:

Independence Forever: The Continental Congress
2 to 3:30 p.m.
The Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and re-enact the passage of the Declaration of Independence in the Adams Carriage House. This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the debate about whether to remain loyal to the British crown, or to create a new nation.

The Reading of the Declaration of Independence
3:30 to 4 p.m.

Join the delegates at John Adams's Old House at Peace field and lend your voice to the ceremonial reading of the Declaration of Independence.

Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play
4 to 6 p.m.
The Beale House, 181 Adams St., Quincy

Witness a compelling dramatization of the friendship between John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Abigail Adams. Colonial Williamsburg reenactors Bill Barker and Abigail Schumann join actor Sam Goodyear in bringing to life the 50-year relationship – often contentious, sometimes turbulent, and ultimately enduring – of this dynamic trio who hold forth on life, love, and loss in their now famous correspondence.

The play will take place under the tent at the neighboring Beale House.

The day's events are free and open to the public.

There is limited street parking. A free trolley from the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center (Presidents Place Galleria, 1250 Hancock St.) will be available. Validated parking is located on the 4th and 5th floors in the Galleria Parking Garage.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of the 2nd and 6th presidents of the U.S., John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with the Old House at Peace field, home to both presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

During the open season, April 19 through Nov. 10, tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy. A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field for a two and a half hour tour. The first tour leaves at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays.

Tickets are $10 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

For a listing of tours and events visit the park website at www.np..gov/adam, or call (617) 770-1175.

Powassan Tick Virus: Rare But Severe Disease

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-F

Powassan (POW) virus disease is a rare, but often severe disease that is caused by a virus spread by infected ticks.

Approximately 75 cases of POW virus disease have been reported in the United States over the past 10 years. Human Powassan (POW) virus infections have been acknowledged in the United States, Canada and Russia. In the United States, cases of POW virus disease have been reported principally from northeastern states as well as the Great Lakes region. These cases occurred predominantly in the late spring, early summer and mid-fall when ticks are most active.

POW virus disease is a nationally notifiable illness. Cases are reported to CDC by state and local health departments. While it is true that POW virus cases are rare, the reported number of cases have risen in recent years.

POW virus is one of a collection of arthropod-borne viruses (arboviruses) that can trigger inflammation of the brain (encephalitis). Humans become infected with POW virus from the bite of an infected tick. POW virus is not transmitted directly from person-to-person. Humans do not develop high enough concentrations of POW virus in their bloodstreams to infect feeding ticks, thus humans are considered to be "dead-end" hosts of the virus. Any person bitten by a tick in a region where the virus is frequently found can get infected with POW virus. The threat is greatest for people who live, work or recreate in brushy or wooded areas, because of a more significant exposure to potentially infected ticks.

POW virus is sustained in a cycle between ticks and small-to-medium-sized rodents. In North America this would include woodchucks, squirrels, and white-footed mice. The incubation period (time from tick bite to beginning of illness) varies from one week to one month. Numerous people who become infected with POW virus develop no symptoms at all. POW virus can cause encephalitis (inflammation of the brain) and meningitis (inflammation of the membranes that surround the brain and spinal cord), both of which can be life threatening conditions

Symptoms of Powassan Virus may result in the following scenarios:

- Many people who become infected with Powassan (POW) virus do not develop any symptoms.
- The incubation period (time from tick bite to onset of illness) ranges from about 1 week to 1 month.
- POW virus can infect the central nervous system and cause encephalitis and meningitis
- Symptoms can include fever, headache, vomiting, weakness, confusion, loss of coordination, speech difficulties, and seizures.
- Approximately half of those who survive have permanent neurological symptoms, such as recurrent headaches, muscle wasting and memory problems.
- Approximately 10% of POW virus encephalitis cases are fatal.

There is no particular medicine that is available to cure or treat POW virus disease.

It is important to remember:

- There are no vaccines or medications to treat or prevent POW virus infection.
- If you think you or a family member may have POW virus disease, it is imperative to contact your health care provider for evaluation and diagnosis.
- Persons with severe POW illnesses often need to be hospitalized for treatment. Treatment may include respiratory support, intravenous fluids, and medications to reduce swelling in the brain.

The best way to prevent POW virus disease is by protecting yourself from tick bites.

- Avoid contact with ticks by avoiding wooded and bushy areas with high grass.
- Apply insect repellents to bare skin, according to label instructions. Repellents containing DEET may be applied to exposed skin, but only last a few hours.
- Clothing and gear can be treated with permethrin, which continues to be protective through several washings.
- Locate and remove ticks immediately before they have a chance to bite and attach. Bathe or shower (preferably within 2 hours after being outdoors) to wash off and find ticks on your body.
- Conduct a full-body tick check. Parents should thoroughly check children, especially in their hair.
- Also inspect clothing, gear and pets.
- Tumble dry clothes in a dryer on high heat for 10 minutes to kill ticks on dry clothing after you come indoors.
- If the clothes require washing first, hot water is recommended. Cold and medium temperature water will not kill ticks effectively. If the clothes cannot be washed in hot water, tumble dry on low heat for 90 minutes or high heat for 60 minutes. The clothes should be warm and entirely dry.

If you are worried that someone you know might have Powassan virus disease consult a healthcare provider. Diagnosis is based on a combination of signs and symptoms and laboratory tests of blood or spinal fluid. These tests typically detect antibodies that the immune system creates against the viral infection. Initially, diagnosis is often based on the patient's clinical features, places and dates of travel (if patient is from a non-endemic country or area), activities, and epidemiologic history of the location where infection transpired.

RUTH JONES

All residents of and visitors to areas where POW virus activity has been previously acknowledged are at risk of infection. People who engage in outdoor work and recreational activities in endemic areas are also at increased risk of infection. While it is a wise initiative to take preventive measures against ticks year-round, be extra vigilant in warmer months (April-September) when tick activity is peaking. Reducing your exposure to ticks is the best defense against not only against Powassan Virus, but assists in avoiding Lyme disease, Rocky Mountain spotted fever and other tickborne diseases.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Newport Ave. Proposal, Two Others OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave its approval to a proposed 80-unit apartment building on Newport Avenue in North Quincy after its developer agreed to scale the project down.

The board also approved townhouse projects in Quincy Point and North Quincy at its meeting on June 21, and heard plans for a Buddhist learning center in Quincy Point.

Arista Development had initially proposed a 100-unit building with 100 parking spaces at 1-13 Newport Ave., currently home to an industrial paint facility. The original proposal was for a seven-story building – five floors of apartments above two levels of parking.

Ed Fleming, Arista's attorney, said the developer revised plans for the site following the first Planning Board hearing on the matter in March. As part of the revision, Arista lopped off the top floor of the building – reducing it to four stories of apartments above two levels of parking –lowering the total number of units to 80. Of those units, 51 will be one-bedrooms, 25 will have two bedrooms and the other four will be studios.

Arista also reconfigured the parking garage. Originally one level would have been accessible from Newport Avenue and the other from Arlington Street. In the revised plan, with 101 spaces between them, will be accessible from Arlington Street.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain signaled his support for the project in a letter to the board.

"This project overall will add a significant contribution and welcome improvement to the currently blighted and dilapidated property," he said, crediting Arista for the changes made to the proposal.

The new apartment building will be located across Arlington Street from a new 180-room hotel, which the Planning Board approved in February. The hotel will be located on a vacant lot at the corner of Arlington and West Squantum Streets, and will most likely operate under a Marriott brand.

The townhouse proposal in Quincy Point is located at 27 Mill St., where the Marion Group will tear down the single-family home on site to make way for nine new units. Each townhouse will have two bedrooms and two-and-a-half baths. Twenty parking spaces will be located on site – two for each unit, plus two guest spaces.

The North Quincy townhouses are located at 95 East Squantum St. There, the Gillan Family Trust will tear down the existing residence and replace it with eight townhouses. Each will have two bedrooms and two-and-half baths and 20 parking spaces will be provided – two per unit, plus four guest spaces. Members of the Gillan family, who have lived on site for more than 40 years, will purchase at least seven of the eight townhouses, Fleming said.

The Massachusetts Budhi Siska Society has proposed building the Buddhist learning center at 54 Massachusetts Ave./15 Glenwood Way. The existing residential buildings, which are used to house volunteers, will be maintained on site.

Rob Fleming, the applicant's attorney, said the new learning center would stand four stories tall. The first floor will house lobby space, a medication area will be located on the second floor, and floors three and four will be used for a library space for the Rev. Shi Kuan Yin's extensive collection.

"You have comparable libraries at Harvard University and Princeton University, and not much else throughout this entire country," Fleming said.

The learning center will not be open to the public; up to ten scholars will be invited to study the collection at one. There will also be a librarian on staff.

The Massachusetts Budhi Siska Society has owned a temple on Massachusetts Avenue for 30 years. Fleming said Quincy is important to the society – because of the city's demographics and its proximity to top universities in Boston.

"To pack it up and move elsewhere is difficult – Quincy has been very important to them," he said. "It's important for the promotion and the service of expanding their religion that it does move forward."

The Planning Board did not vote on the proposal June 21. The application was continued to the board's next meeting on July 19.

Social Security Matters

Will My Benefit Amount Ever Increase?

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: I'm still working right now, but everyone I talk to about Social Security seems to say that I should wait to take my benefits because once I start the amount will never go up. Problem is I really need the money now. Is it really true that once I claim the amount of my Social Security will never go up? Signed: Curious

Dear Curious: Well, there is a lot to be said for waiting as long as you can to take your benefits, not the least of which is that the longer you wait the larger your benefit amount will be. If you apply when you turn 62, you'll only be getting about 74% of what you would get if you waited until your full retirement age (which for most people applying today is between 66 and 67). And for the most part, that is the benefit you will receive for the rest of your life, except in the following circumstances:

• Cost of Living Adjustments (COLAs) are calculated annually by Social Security according to a formula using the Consumer Price Index to determine the rate of inflation. If the result of that calculation calls for it, your benefit amount will increase by a small percentage to keep pace with the cost of living. While the COLA increases your benefit in most years, no cost of living adjustment occurred in 2009, 2010 and 2015 and the 2016 increase was a mere 0.3%. So your benefit amount will usually, but not always, increase as necessary for inflation.

• If you work while you're collecting Social Security and you earn a significant salary, there is a chance your benefit amount could increase. That's because of the way that Social Security determines your benefit amount in the first place, which is by taking your 35 highest-earning years to arrive at your Average Indexed Monthly Earnings, from which your benefit amount is calculated. If you have, within that 35 year window, years in which you had zero earnings, or very low earnings, your current earnings could replace one or more of those years causing your benefit to increase slightly.

• If you collect benefits and work before reaching your full retirement age and you exceed Social Security's annual earnings limit, they will withhold some of your future benefits. But that doesn't mean that you'll lose those withheld benefits forever because, when you reach your full retirement age, they'll recalculate your benefit amount to give you time credit for any months they withheld benefits because you earned more than the annual limit. That means that your benefit amount will go up a little when they do that recalculation.

• If you are collecting benefits on your own work record, and you have a spouse who is not yet collecting Social Security, it's possible you may get a "spousal boost" when your spouse finally files for benefits. This would occur if the benefit you are entitled to as a spouse is higher than your benefit on your own record, which might be the case if your spouse is the higher-earning partner. The easy way to look at this is: if one-half of your spouse's benefit at full retirement age is more than your current benefit from your own work record, you should contact your local Social Security office to ensure you get the maximum benefit you're entitled to.

So, as you can see, the benefit amount you first get when you apply for Social Security isn't fixed because you will usually get an annual COLA adjustment for inflation, and it may also increase if any of the fairly common circumstances described above apply to you. There are a couple of other less common circumstances which could apply for those grandfathered from changes made by the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015, but those are outside the scope of this article. But, with the possible exception of a spousal boost, don't expect any increase you might get to be very large.

Committee Approves $105.9 Million School Budget

Includes Funds For Two New Elementary Teachers, Additional Staff

By TOM GORMAN

The school committee unanimously approved the 2017-18 school operating budget on June 14 that includes funding for two new elementary teachers and additional staff that will restore some previously lost programs.

The $105.9 million level services spending plan covers increased costs and $2.5 million in contractual raises. Thanks to an increase of $400,000 in state Circuit Breaker monies and an additional $2.9 million appropriation from the city, school officials had $1.2 million available to address staffing needs, academic programs and support as well as some non-academic areas.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said that the school committee and his leadership team worked with Mayor Thomas Koch in developing the budget. DeCristofaro said that he is appreciative for the additional appropriation from the city that is helping to restore some staff and programs that have been cut in previous years due to limited funding.

"We are thankful to Mayor (Thomas) Koch for again increasing our bottom line which has allowed growth over the past four years," he said. "This year in particular we are adding teachers that will give us high quality class sizes and adding new programs."

The budget is $3.3 million more than this year, representing a nearly 3 percent increase. Some savings was realized through teacher retirements and reductions in some non-academic expenses including utility costs.

School officials plan to add two teachers to address grade 4 class sizes at the elementary level. One will teach at Lincoln-Hancock School and the other at Clifford Marshall.

There will be two additional fulltime English Language Learner (ELL) teachers – one at Beechwood Knoll and one at Quincy High School to meet the increasing needs of the ELL student population. Also, an additional ELL aide will be hired as well as more translators.

The budget is also funding two new fulltime middle school library/media teachers that will fully restore the middle school library program where each middle school will now have full library support.

Adding a halftime middle school technology/engineering teacher will provide technology/engineering classes for all middle school students as well as grade 5 students at both Sterling and Point Webster middle schools.

Officials are planning to add a fulltime special education teacher for Quincy High School and a part-time music teacher to assist at the elementary level. A new prekindergarten CARES class will be established in the fall at the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center through a reallocation of staff.

An additional nurse will be shared by Parker, Lincoln-Hancock and Clifford Marshall schools to meet increasing caseloads by the nursing staff.

Also included in the budget is $35,000 to purchase more student assessment materials. During a recent presentation to the committee on the budget, the district's primary grade curriculum coordinator Madeline Roy explained that the curriculum and assessment team is proposing to expand the math benchmark assessment tool to grades four through six. The assessment is now used in grades two and three.

The tool measures student growth in math, language and reading. Broad Meadows Middle School is piloting the program this year in grades six through eight with the plan to expand it to the middle grade level in the future. The assessments provide information for administrators to measure student achievement and provide needed support.

Although special education tuitions are expected to increase by $1 million, officials have said the hike would be offset by an additional $400,000 in state Circuit Breaker funds coming to the city. Increases in special education transportation and student furniture will be offset by decreases in several non-academic areas.

The budget is realizing some savings through $456,000 in teacher retirements, $208,000 from four vacant teaching positions and $225,000 from reductions in non-academic line items.

Officials anticipate a savings of about $400,000 in electricity costs in the coming year due to solar arrays that have been installed on some schools to provide power for the buildings.

Business director James Mullaney told the committee that an estimated $300,000 savings is anticipated this year in electrical costs.

"We budgeted a $400,000 surplus for next year," he said.

Committee member Anne Mahoney had voiced concern that the electrical line item is being decreased based on estimates and not hard numbers. During a previous budget discussion, officials had said the city was having some issues with the contractor, SolarCity, but was working out the kinks.

Mahoney asked Mullaney to provide the committee with actual cost savings.

"It's important that we get information regarding SolarCity," she said.

In a related matter, the committee approved several transfers to cover deficits in this year's budget including special education tuition and transportation, teacher professional discretionary funds, natural gas and assessment materials.

Regarding the assessment materials, Mullaney explained that some would be purchased under this year's spending plan and the remainder would be covered by next year's budget.

Interfaith Social Services Honors Quincy Volunteers

Over 23,000 hours of service - that is how much time that hundreds of South Shore volunteers contributed via Interfaith Social Services' various programs this past year. Interfaith recognized this herculean accomplishment at the organization's Volunteer Appreciation Dinner June 15th.

The evening featured food, fun and recognition for some very deserving individuals. Twenty local volunteers were inducted into Interfaith Social Services' Volunteer Hall of Fame including Quincy residents Nancy Kearns, Linda Blais, Sarah Fong, Diane Leason, Fay Lee, Jack Patts, David DeBastos, Skip MacKinnon, Jean and Len Plante, Ned Pride and Kassie Purcell.

The Quarry Room at Quincy's Elks Lodge hosted this year's annual event. Guests enjoyed a dinner catered by Smokey Stax BBQ followed by an array of desserts prepared by Interfaith's staff and board members. Interfaith operates one of Greater Boston's largest emergency food pantries, a mental health counseling center, Thrift Shop, homelessness prevention program and other emergency assistance services. Since 1947 Interfaith Social Services has been a safety net for thousands of children and families from the South Shore who are struggling to make ends meet.

This year Interfaith is celebrating their 70th anniversary.

"For seven decades the principle of neighbors helping neighbors has guided our efforts. Volunteers are the heart and soul of that outreach" said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane.

Interfaith's Director of Development Paula Daniels further emphasized this point. "Whether they bag groceries for our food pantry clients or assist in planning our fundraising events, all of our volunteers are absolutely essential to Interfaith being able to deliver our programs. We would simply not be able to serve our clients without these caring individuals. Our annual Volunteer Appreciation Event is a celebration to recognize and honor each and every one of our incredible volunteers."

This year 20 volunteers were inducted into The Matti Lang Volunteer Hall of Fame. The Hall of Fame is named after one of Interfaith's most dedicated volunteers who gave decades of his life selflessly serving Interfaith's clients. The honor of being inducted into the Hall of Fame is bestowed upon those volunteers who have been serving within the organization regularly for at least one year. Their names are inscribed on a plaque which hangs in Interfaith's foyer.

This year's inductees are: Braintree resident Michelle Goldthwaite; Cohasset resident Jennifer Chu; Dorchester resident Allison Idris; Hingham residents Barbara Caron and Kim Johnson; Quincy residents Nancy Kearns, Linda Blais, Sarah Fong, Diane Leason, Fay Lee, Jack Patts, David DeBastos, Skip MacKinnon, Jean and Len Plante, Ned Pride and Kassie Purcell; Rockland resident Rhonda Lynch; Weymouth residents Wendy Cullivan and Sheryl Murphy.

With hundreds of individuals volunteering alongside civic, religious and corporate groups Interfaith Social Services has become one of the South Shore's most popular centers for volunteerism and community engagement. Interfaith's volunteers commit to at least one three-hour shift each week, some fulfill multiple time slots. Morning, afternoon and evening shifts are available Monday – Friday. Volunteers work in the food pantry, thrift shop, front desk, or Career Closet.

Serving in the food pantry includes assembling grocery orders for clients, restocking shelves and sorting food donations. Food rescue volunteers collect food from local supermarkets and other community sites. Volunteering at the thrift shop is similar to working in a retail store. Volunteers sort through donations of clothing and household goods. They assist customers, fold cloths and organize merchandise for sale.

Anyone interested in volunteering at Interfaith Social Services is encouraged to contact Interfaith's Director of Development Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28 or via email pdaniels@interfaithsocialservices.org.

Hancock-Adams Green Construction Commences

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction of a new $15.7 million park connecting City Hall to the United First Parish Church is now underway and is expected to take about a year.

The city plans to construct the new public park, known as the Hancock-Adams Green, in a former stretch of Hancock Street that closed to traffic last year. Funding for the new park was included in a $27 million bond requested by Mayor Thomas Koch and approved by the City Council earlier this spring. The bond will be paid for using hotel tax receipts.

Halifax-based WES Construction is overseeing the construction of the new park, which will take about a year to complete. The company, which was the low bidder for the Hancock-Adams Green project, is the same firm that built the new Creedon Stadium at North Quincy High School, which opened last fall.

WES began fencing off sections of the park space earlier this month and began excavation June 22. The contractor will complete site work for the park this year, with the park's features installed next year.

"This construction season, what people will see is primarily underground work and site work that is setting the stage for the final pieces next spring and summer," said mayoral spokesman Chris Walker.

Those pieces will include statues of John Hancock and John Adams, which were commissioned for the new park, cast in Italy and are now in storage awaiting their installation in the Quincy Center park. The statues will be surrounded by granite engravings detailing the lives of the two Founding Fathers. The park will also feature two water features, a promenade along what was once Hancock Street and new trees.

Walker said those features would make the Hancock-Adams Green a world-class park once it is completed.

Pedestrian access to City Hall and the United First Parish Church will be maintained at all times during construction, Walker said. The work is being confined to the now-closed area of Hancock Street, so disruptions to vehicular traffic, if any, will be minimal.

Matt Kerin Pitching In For Brockton Rox

By TOM JOYCE

Sometimes in order to face the best competition possible in the summer, college baseball players need to move around the country to find a summer collegiate league suited to their ability.

Matt Kerin, however, does not need to travel far to keep playing the game against fierce competition. The Quincy native and rising senior at UMass Lowell earned a spot on the Brockton Rox of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League this summer.

"It's nice, it's close to home," he said, of playing for the Rox. "I still get to see my friends and family every day and they get to see me down here.

"It means a lot being a South Shore kid," he added. "I used to come to their games. It's nice to be close to home and play for what's become our hometown team."

Over the past two seasons at school, Kerin has made eight relief appearances and owns a 3.38 ERA in 13.1 innings while striking out five batters. Pitching in the Futures League this summer presents Kerin with an opportunity to pitch on a more consistent basis, which could help him earn a bigger role for UMass Lowell next spring.

"I just hope to build innings,' he said. "I haven't seen a lot of innings at school, so it's just good to be here working on what I've got to work on. I'm just trying to throw strikes and do all the basics right which will hopefully get me in a good spot."

At the start of the week, Kerin had been throwing well as of late. He had allowed just one run on one hit over his last three outings spanning three innings while striking out three batters.

Last summer, Kerin also played summer ball, pitching for the Winnipesaukee Muskrats of the New England Collegiate Baseball League when a spot opened up during the second half of their season. Kerin said that experience proved beneficial in helping him know what to expect in the Futures League.

"It definitely got me used to playing every day and traveling every day," he said. "Up at school, we play three games in a weekend and maybe one or two during a week. It got me used to the grind it takes to be in this league."

Albeit he is a Division 1 pitcher in his second year pitching for a summer collegiate team, Kerin, who graduated from Archbishop Williams in 2013, did not pitch an inning on varsity over the course of his high school career. He was an outfielder.

After graduating from high school, Kerin attended Quincy College, a college without a baseball team. The summer after his freshman year there, he was a two-way player for the Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth team and excelled on the mound, so his coaches let him know of an open tryout for the UMass Lowell baseball team.

"I did well throwing that summer, and my summer coaches that year, Mr. (Steve) Reardon and Mr. (Bob) Griffin, encouraged me to try out as a pitcher," he said.

"I wasn't really ready to stop playing baseball," he added. "I got lucky they had an open tryout that year. I just wasn't ready to quit and (UMass Lowell) coach Ken Harring gave me the opportunity. I'm thankful for it."

Prior to his first season at UMass Lowell, Kerin made a stop in the Yawkey League, a competitive men's amateur baseball league in the Boston area. Albeit the players were, on average, several years older than him, Kerin emerged as his team's ace, posting a 1.80 ERA in 35 innings.

"That definitely got me used to the type of competition I'd face," he said. "It's a lot of ex college guys and a few ex pros. It got me used to that tough competition and helped me see what I had to do to get better."

Jaehnig Showcasing Talent In Futures Baseball League

By TOM JOYCE

Andrew Jaehnig earned himself some national attention with his strong performance at Assumption College this past spring, and he is once again in a position to showcase his talent on the baseball diamond this summer.

The Quincy native, 2014 BC High grad and rising senior at Assumption, batted .401 with five home runs and a 1.086 OPS as a junior for his Division 2 college team this past spring. Since he had a successful junior year to follow up a sophomore year where he batted .339 at school, he earned a spot on the Nashua Silver Knights of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League this summer. The league features a mix of quality Division 1, 2 and 3 ballplayers, many of whom are from New England.

"Playing for the Silver Knights is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Jaehnig said. "We've got great guys, a great coaching staff and we're playing some pretty good baseball."

This summer, Jaehnig has been the Silver Knights starting catcher and through 14 games in the wooden bat league, he was hitting .255 with three doubles and behind the plate, he owned a perfect fielding percentage (1.000).

Many summer collegiate baseball leagues attract the attention of pro scouts since the leagues can showcase talent from big schools and small schools alike. Since Jaehnig had a strong junior year and will be draft-eligible next year, playing in the Futures League presents Jaehnig the opportunity to give the scouts an idea of his ability.

"It's great that there's some scouts around and we get a chance to showcase our talent to them," he said. "When you do it, it's a good thing we've got wood bats, so they can see what we can do with them."

As much as it is an opportunity for players to showcase their talent, the league also serves as a tool for player development for younger players and non-Division 1 ballplayers who want to face the best competition they can in order to improve their game. This summer, Jaehnig said he is trying to improve his game all-around with no one point in particular standing out.

"I'm hoping I can have a pretty good year," he said. "It's just great to be here with the Silver Knights alongside some other great baseball players."

Coming off the strong junior year he enjoyed at Assumption, there is probably not much Jaehnig really needs to improve on in order to excel collegiately once again. Albeit he was the one hitting and putting up strong numbers, Jaehnig credited those around him for helping him put together a productive year.

"I think it was just playing free, loose and easy," he said. "I think playing with those guys and the great coaching staff at Assumption made me feel comfortable and helped put me in that position to succeed. They just carried to load for me."

For his strong performance, Jaehnig received a handful of awards but most notably, he was named an All-American.

"It was pretty humbling to receive all those awards," he said. "It was surreal to be an All-American when you see all the names you're alongside."

During his high school days at BC High, Jaehnig was named a Catholic Conference All-Star his junior and senior years. In addition to his duty behind the plate, he also pitched, albeit he has not done so in his college days.

"Catching was always my No. 1 thing," he said. "Coach (Norm) Walsh threw me out there on the mound and it worked, which was great. But I've always been a catcher first."

Local, State Agencies Offering Foreclosure Assistance Programs

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds homeowners who are in the midst of struggling to pay their mortgage or are facing a foreclosure that there are consumer programs available to help them out.

"While the eastern Massachusetts economy has been robust, some of our neighbors have faced economic hardship," O'Donnell said. "To help those having difficulty paying their mortgage, my office has partnered with reputable agencies by promoting their services when it comes to mortgage modification and foreclosure issues.

"Consumers can contact either the Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 or NeighborWorks Southern Mass at (508) 587-0950. Another option would be the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-3333.

"These agencies provide a range of assistance from helping with the mortgage modification process to providing legal services to stave off a foreclosure as well as offering several forms of credit counseling. Additional information can be found on the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org under the Support tab."

O'Donnell also had a cautionary warning for consumers. "Please be careful and utilize the right source for your needs such as a non-profit or state agency as cited above. Unfortunately, foreclosure rescues and mortgage modification relief are becoming a growing scam. Some unscrupulous private companies look to charge consumers outrageous prices for services and make unrealistic promises to them," he said.

Generally, during the past several months, a statistical review has shown foreclosure activity has been trending downward, particularly Notice to Foreclose Mortgage filings – the first step in the process.

"With that said," noted O'Donnell, "we realize that while Norfolk County is a destination location to both live and work, there are still some of our neighbors facing economic hardships. During the month of May, there were 22 foreclosures recorded at the Registry and 60 Notice to Foreclose mortgage filings initiated against homeowners."

O'Donnell concluded:

"The Registry is proud of its commitment to helping those facing a mortgage delinquency or foreclosure by directing them to the appropriate agency that can hopefully put them back on the road to financial recovery. I urge people who feel that they need such services to contact the agencies referenced above."

North Quincy MBTA Station Project Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction of a $205 million mixed-use project at the North Quincy MBTA – featuring 610 apartments and 50,000 square feet of retail space – is expected to begin sometime in 2018 after the Planning Board signed off on the project.

The Planning Board approved the proposal from two firms – Atlantic Development and Bozzuto Development – to develop the parking lot on the Hancock Street side of the station at its meeting on June 22. The Planning Board had begun its review of the proposal in January.

D.J. MacKinnon, the president of Hingham-based Atlantic Development, said the developers must still coordinate with the MBTA on construction of the project.

"It will be sometime next year before we start physical construction," he told reporters following the board's unanimous vote.

The project will unfold in two phases over three years. The developers will spend about a year building an 852-car garage – the same number of spaces that are currently on site. The project will include a total of nearly 1,600 parking spaces once completed.

The second phase will include construction of the mixed-use buildings with the apartments and ground floor retail. Construction of those buildings, which will envelope the garage, is expected to take two years.

MacKinnon said there is great interest in the retail space that will be built on site, but no specific use has been determined.

"There is a lot of interest in the retail because it is a great neighborhood, but nothing specific at this point," he said.

The North Quincy station will remain open during construction, and MacKinnon said at least 260 spaces on the Hancock Street side of the parking lot will remain available at all times during the process. There is additional T parking to the west of the train tracks off Newport Avenue.

Atlantic and Bozzuto will make $230 million in lease payments to the MBTA over the course of a 99-year lease with the transit agency. MacKinnon has said the project will provide Quincy with $1.6 million annually in property taxes; the city will also receive $2 million in permitting fees and a contribution to the Affordable Housing Trust Fund.

The project is expected to create 150 permanent jobs, and up to 1,100 workers will be employed during construction.

The MBTA first released a request for proposal for the 7-acre site at the North Quincy station in July 2015. MBTA officials awarded development rights to Atlantic and Bozzuto, which is headquartered in Maryland, in April 2016. Two other firms submitted bids to the T: Gate Residential and AvalonBay. The latter withdrew its proposal before T officials picked a developer.

The City Council in November 2016 approved the creation of a transit-oriented zoning district at the site, originally proposed by Mayor Thomas Koch, meant to allow for denser development on site with less stringent parking requirements. The change also made the Planning Board the only city board developers would need to go before for approval. The zoning rules were modeled on the requirements for Quincy Center.

Chestnut Place

developer will not pay property taxes on the Chestnut Place parcel but would pay the city 10 percent of all gross revenue generated by the project.

O'Connell will lease 130 spaces in the new 730-car municipal parking garage that will be constructed on the Hancock Lot, per terms of the land disposition agreement. The LDA also makes O'Connell responsible for constructing the city-owned garage; the City Council in the fall will be asked to approve final plans for the structure, including a guaranteed maximum price.

Financing for the garage is provided as part of an $80 million authorization approved by the City Council last week. The bond also includes funds for infrastructure projects in the vicinity of the Hancock Lot necessary for development on site, as well as the acquisition of two parcels of land –23 and 31 Cottage Ave. – which will become the home of a new municipal park. O'Connell is responsible for constructing and maintaining the park under his agreement with the city.

Chestnut Place is the second of two mixed-use projects approved for the Hancock Lot. The Planning Board in May approved LBC Partners' plans for Nova Residences – a 171-unit apartment building with 15,000 square feet of retail space at 1500 Hancock St. Demolition of the existing one-story commercial buildings in the 1500 block of Hancock Street is set to start this summer.

Like O'Connell's Chestnut Place plans, LBC first unveiled its proposal for the site in April 2015. At the time, LBC hoped to build a hotel on Hancock Street, but switched to apartments because of market conditions. The building's second floor, with 36 units, could be converted into a hotel in the future if the market would support it.

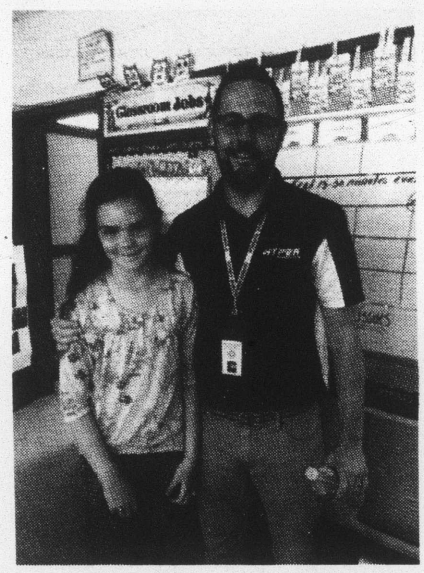
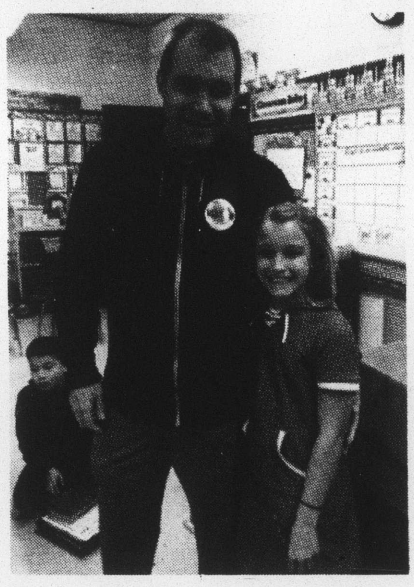
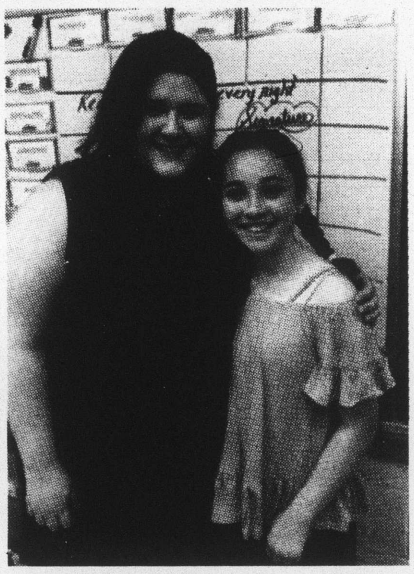
Beechwood Knoll School 'Share Your Career' Week







Beechwood Knoll Elementary School's fourth graders recently participated in their 2nd annual Share Your Career Week.

Both parents and family members enthusiastically participated in the event.

Fourth grade teachers Laura Mulcahy, Karen Kelliher and Leslie Coughlin hosted this event in their classrooms the week of May 22 through May 26. "It is so important to give the students the opportunity to explore different career choices while learning how education is connected to a successful future," Mulcahy said. "The response of our parents was overwhelming and the information and activities our parents presented both informed and engaged our students."

Students participated in many activities representing a broad range of careers.

Officer Sean Glennon of the Quincy Police Department spoke to the students about being good decision mak-

Two Quincy Girl Scouts Earn Scouting's Highest Honor

Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts (GSEMA) announces Quincy Girl Scouts Brianna Cristiani and Amy Trillcott have earned the highest award in Girl Scouting: the Girl Scout Gold Award.

They were recently honored with Gold Awardees from across the Commonwealth at a ceremony at the Massachusetts State House. More than 60 Girl Scouts from Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts earned the Gold Award this year.

Since 1916, more than one million Girl Scouts have made meaningful, sustainable change in their communities and around the world through completion of a Gold Award project.

Brianna wanted to teach students the history of Quincy, so she created an interactive program that highlights the city's history through games and activities. She also created a booklet for children to use while on a tour of a local homestead, where she hosted an event.

After conducting a survey of students at her school, Amy learned that most students know very little about personal finance. She worked with a representative from the Quincy Credit Union to create financial workshops, and implemented a financial literacy class in the freshman seminar, which will remain in the curriculum.

"When a Girl Scout earns her Gold Award, she has completed something truly extraordinary. She has harnessed her creativity, passion for helping others, and determination. She has challenged herself and others in order to take action and effect lasting change in her community," said Patricia A. Parcellin, chief executive officer of Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts. "This is more than an amazing accomplishment today; it is an achievement that sets these young women apart far into the future."

BRIANNA CRISTIANI, Quincy Gold Awardee, with her project.

The Girl Scout Gold Award recognizes girls in grades 9-12 who demonstrate extraordinary leadership through Take Action projects that have sustainable impact in their communities and beyond.

A girl must spend a minimum of 80 hours (completed over one or two years) working on her project, and must complete all seven steps. First she must choose an issue, then she investigates, recruits volunteers to help, creates a plan, and presents her plan. She takes action, improving her organization, problem-solving and leadership skills as she sees her project to completion. Girls achieve a true sense of accomplishment as they educate and inspire others, and see real change in their communities.

The Gold Award is an accomplishment that a Girl Scout can keep on her résumé, making her an appealing candidate to colleges and employers. In addition, Gold Award recipients who join the armed services enter at one rank higher than other recruits. The Gold Award demonstrates, beyond a doubt, that a Girl Scout is a G.I.R.L. (Go-getter, Innovator, Risk-taker, Leader)TM.

Each Gold Awardee receives a Gold Award pin and special recognitions from many individuals and organizations, including Girl Scouts of the USA, Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts, the U.S. military, the Department of Health and Human Services, NASA, the Department of Fish and Wildlife, the National Park Service, the White House, the governor, and both Massachusetts senators.

Central Wins Middle School Basketball Championship

For the second year in a row, the defending champions Central claimed the title in the City of Quincy Recreation Department all city basketball playoff middle school division by defeating a hustling Atherton Hough, 53-47. The tournament pool of nine teams from all neighborhoods of the city featured many talented players, and both teams had to win some tight games to reach the title match. In the end, Central's depth and tenacity were the difference makers, as they overcame a talented Atherton Hough team.

A sidebar to the game included, what was believed to be, the first brother vs. sister championship coaching match up in the long running history of the tournament. In this case the bragging rights went to big sister Emily Rooney over her brother Terence. Both are public school teachers and coaches who have worked as program supervisors in the department for a number of years.

Central capped off an impressive tournament run with a victory over a always tough Atherton Hough team. Central's ability to play team basketball and hit shots from deep carried them through their three matchups. In the championship, Central was led by the play of Charlie Clifford who scored 18 points to lead his team to victory. Declan Geary and Matt Kelly both showed their all-around games as they scored, rebounded and defended well for Central. They finished with 7 and 6 points. Jamal Maximilien effected Atherton Hough's offense with his great defensive play and hit three 3 pointers which tied a game high with teammate Ryan Tapper. Lily Scola did very well rebounding the ball both offensively and defensively and passed the ball to set up her teammates with chances to score. Dylan Clifford was a great defensive presence and contested shots that Atherton Hough would take around the basket. Patrick Webber and Sean Burns added energy on defense that helped lead to good offense for Central. Central was led by coach Emily Rooney.

Atherton Hough showed a great deal of heart and impressed many with their play. With Devin Desmond, the games' leading scorer who also led the team in scoring throughout the tournament, finished with 27 points in a fantastic outing. Robbie McClelland showed his great ability to drive and cut to the basket. While he would drive, he found open teammates which helped Devin take and make open baskets. As Central had an early lead, it was Devin and Zach both driving to the basket, it allowed Campbell Tierney to shoot and hit open three pointers which helped take the lead for Atherton Hough. Campbell was everywhere on the court with his impressive rebounding on both sides of the court. As the second half started, Ryan LaRoche led the team with his tenacious defense which caused Central to turn over the ball and the energy he was playing with rubbed off on his teammates. His defense helped Atherton Hough get numerous fast break attempts. Ryan McCarthy took control of the floor and helped the offense get set and to help his teammates find better opportunities to score. Midway through the second half, Drew Peterson hit a clutch three pointer to bring his team within 2 points which was assisted by Andrew Devlin who made tremendous passes and found open teammates. Andrew set screens that helped his teammates get open and get easier attempts to make baskets. Zach Lugelle was also everywhere on the court, set screens and helped his teammates get open and crashed the offensive glass, which helped his team get second chance points. Atherton Hough was coached by Terence Rooney.

The All-City Basketball Tournament is a Quincy Recreation tradition that is conducted annually at the conclusion of the winter recreation programs and has been held for more than 60 years. Teams are created from participants in the neighborhood recreation programs from all parts of the city. Recreation leaders, who were assigned their respective gyms when the program started in November, coach all teams. Participants regularly attend the gyms in their home neighborhoods and are from both public and private schools.

Both teams faced long roads on their way to the championship. In the semi-finals Central used a strong outside shooting performance to defeat Sterling in a nail-biter, 49-46. Jamal and Tyler Le each hit a three from long range to lead their team in scoring with nine points. Sterling was paced by the play of Amarian Robinson, who hit two three-pointers of his own on his way to score a game high 34 points. Kevin Pritchard showed off his offensive skills, chipping in with 9 points. Aby Lopes and Colby Lai both played stellar defense, and Olivia Skinner scored a late layup to finish the scoring for Point Webster. Sterling got great defensive efforts from Staryln Soto, James Devarie and Ciro Moura and they each showed their unselfishness, as they looked to make the extra pass and find teammates whenever they were on the court. Sterling was coached by John Grasseli. Sterling would be representing participants from the old Preston Carol Memorial Gym for the last time as the facility is be demolished to make way for a new Sterling school.

In the other semi-final, Atherton Hough toppled Snug Harbor 40-22. Devin Desmond gave a dominant performance, scoring 13 and pulling down as many rebounds in a great all-around game. Campbell Tierney scored 9 for the eventual runners-up, and Ryan McCarthy hit a contested three-pointer that got the crowd excited. Down at halftime, Snug Harbor didn't quit and played as hard as they could. Snug Harbor was led by Jack Barry, who finished the game with 16 points, showed an incredible amount of heart. Matt Foley knocked a 3 pointer down and showed his leadership by playing great defense. Johnathan Soares scored 2 points, but it was his passing and unselfishness that helped his team. Mohammed Al-Junebi, Jaffer Ahmed and Walter Bardon all played tough and effective defense. Anthony Viera, Maddy Caggiano, Sam McGann and Joel Deery each showed heart and determination after they went after every loose ball. Snug Harbor was coached by Pat Clifford.

In earlier tournament action, Central defeated Squantum 51-41. Matt Kelly started the game red hot and Tapper hit several clutch shots late to pace their team. Squantum played Central tough from the start, and they were led by the defense and scoring of big man Ayu Agwu, who finished with 15 points. Tom Roche scored 10 and Harris Atlaf hit a pair of long range shots and finished with 10 points. Danny Bellotti and Shane McDougall, both defended the perimeter well and forced Central to take tough shots. Brendan Glynn and Henry Cunniff each played big minutes off the bench and made an impact on the game with their defensive pressure. Brothers Carson and Cameron Douglas each played strong as they got every rebound that was near them. Squantum prided themselves on their defense and it showed. Pat Dooley coached the tough Snug Harbor team.

In a first round game, Snug Harbor showed off their defensive abilities, holding their opponents to under 10 points in the first half on the way to defeating Sterling Silver 43-17. Matt Foley and Jack Barry each played strong, scoring 10 and 12 points and swatting shots at the rim to lead their team. Sterling Silver never surrendered, and their persistence paid off as shots began to fall in the second half. Chase Morales knocked down 3 free throws to finish with 5 points, and Jeremy Costitan added a three of his own. Christain Monteiro and Jared Walker moved the ball well around the arc, picking up assists on the made baskets by Sterling Silver. Malik Justice, Makhi Justice, and Evan Devine all harassed Snug Harbor guards on the perimeter. Abby Lopes battled the bigger Snug Harbor team for rebounds all game long.Sterling White was coached by John Grasseli.

To reach the semi-finals, Sterling White defeated Merrymount 50-22. Sterling White was led by the scoring of Amerian Robinson and Kevin Pritchard, who scored 17 and 16 points. Starlyn Soto hit 2 three-pointers in the game. Merrymount was led by the smooth shooting of Tony Le, who finished with 12 points. Dylan Green, Joey Manton and Luke LaMonica each had a stong second half. Colm O'Malley rebounded the ball well both offensively and defensively. Tim Kelly, Cooper Hansen and Aj Samuels each set the tone with their tough defense. Merrymount was coached by Terence Rooney.

On the other side of the bracket, Atherton Hough faced Point Webster Yellow in a quarterfinal game, which resulted in a 31-28 win for Atherton Hough. Playing well for Atherton were Devin Desmond and Rob McClelland. Point Yellow fell behind early, but won the second half, outscoring Merrymount after halftime. They were led by the play of Devin Des, who showed he could score both inside and outside, finishing with 9 points. Drew Borrotti gave his team a jolt of energy in the second half and finished with 9 points. Owen Desmond also played well, especially in the second half, where he scored all 7 of his points. Shawn Kozlowski had a great game, grabbing rebounds on both sides of the court. Bryan Rodresuiz and Mike Potter showed intensity on defense off the bench, and played major roles in an improved second half. Point Webster Yellow was coached by Rich Turpin.

In their first game, Sterling got a strong performance from Amarian Robinson to help defeat Point Webster Green 45-26. James Devarie again impressed for Sterling, scoring 8 points and pulling down numerous amounts of rebounds to lead his team. Point Webster was down by double digits at halftime, but that did not stop them. They started the second half full of energy. Alex Pham led the way with 10 points while Luciano Keka chipped in with 5. Oscar Li showed his ballhanding and passing skills and Jaycee Ham played great defense. Brian Johnson, Tim Powell and Byron Keith displayed their toughness, especially late in the game. Reuben Charles, Eric Lomanno and Matt Najjar helped get the team going while encouraging them after every play. Point Webster Green was coached by Richie McAllister.

Recreation Director Barry Welch presented certificates of achievement to all finalists and trophies to the members of the Champion Central team. The game was videotaped for rebroadcast by the Recreation Department and can be seen on Q.A.T.V. The department extends its congratulations to all who participated and its gratitude to all staff members who coached, officiated, or otherwise contributed to another successful tournament.

20 Residents Riding In Pan-Mass Challenge

On Aug. 5 and 6, 20 riders from Quincy will cycle up to 192 miles in the Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) with the goal of raising $48 million for critical research and cancer care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The local cyclists are:

During PMC weekend of Aug. 5-6, more than 6,200 cyclists from more than 40 states and eight countries will return to Massachusetts to participate in the PMC, choosing from 12 routes of varying mileage that run through 46 towns. Cyclists are anywhere between 15 and 84-years-old and range from seasoned triathletes to weekend warriors who trained for this event alone and everything in between.

"We are thrilled to be approaching our 38th PMC ride weekend. Seeing our growth over the years has been truly incredible and we look forward to achieving our fundraising goal of $48 million for Dana-Farber," said Billy Starr, founder and executive director of the PMC. "We want to wish all of our riders and volunteers a safe and enjoyable ride weekend – I'll see everyone out on the road."

Many riders participate in the PMC to honor a family member or friend lost to, or being treated for, cancer. More than 600 riders and volunteers are cancer survivors or current patients, considered "Living Proof" of the PMC mission to find a cure. The average cyclist trains for three months, solicits 40 sponsors and raises more than $7,000. Volunteers, spectators, donors and sponsors are part of the camaraderie on ride weekend, all working together toward a cure.

No other single athletic event raises or contributes more money to charity than the PMC. Since 1980, the PMC has raised $547 million dollars for Dana-Farber through the Jimmy Fund, its fundraising arm. In fact, the PMC is Dana-Farber's largest single contributor, raising more than 52 percent of the Jimmy Fund's annual revenue.

The PMC is presented by the Red Sox Foundation and New Balance. To make a financial contribution to a rider from your town or become a virtual rider, visit www.pmc.org, or call (800) WE-CYCLE.

20 Residents Riding In Pan-Mass Challenge

On Aug. 5 and 6, 20 riders from Quincy will cycle up to 192 miles in the Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) with the goal of raising $48 million for critical research and cancer care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The local cyclists are:

During PMC weekend of Aug. 5-6, more than 6,200 cyclists from more than 40 states and eight countries will return to Massachusetts to participate in the PMC, choosing from 12 routes of varying mileage that run through 46 towns. Cyclists are anywhere between 15 and 84-years-old and range from seasoned triathletes to weekend warriors who trained for this event alone and everything in between.

"We are thrilled to be approaching our 38th PMC ride weekend. Seeing our growth over the years has been truly incredible and we look forward to achieving our fundraising goal of $48 million for Dana-Farber," said Billy Starr, founder and executive director of the PMC. "We want to wish all of our riders and volunteers a safe and enjoyable ride weekend – I'll see everyone out on the road."

Many riders participate in the PMC to honor a family member or friend lost to, or being treated for, cancer. More than 600 riders and volunteers are cancer survivors or current patients, considered "Living Proof" of the PMC mission to find a cure. The average cyclist trains for three months, solicits 40 sponsors and raises more than $7,000. Volunteers, spectators, donors and sponsors are part of the camaraderie on ride weekend, all working together toward a cure.

No other single athletic event raises or contributes more money to charity than the PMC. Since 1980, the PMC has raised $547 million dollars for Dana-Farber through the Jimmy Fund, its fundraising arm. In fact, the PMC is Dana-Farber's largest single contributor, raising more than 52 percent of the Jimmy Fund's annual revenue.

The PMC is presented by the Red Sox Foundation and New Balance. To make a financial contribution to a rider from your town or become a virtual rider, visit www.pmc.org, or call (800) WE-CYCLE.

O'Connell-Thomson Hoop Tournament July 15-16

The 12th annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament will be held on July 15-16 at the Fenno Street courts.

The event is held in memory of John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson, two standout athletes who graduated from North Quincy High in 2002 and tragically had their lives cut short in the past 13 years.

Their families have set up memorial scholarships in their names to benefit North Quincy graduates and the tournament serves to raise funds for these scholarships.

The weekend will feature a 16-team men's tournament and a four-team women's tournament, featuring a number of local college basketball players, as well as many former and current high school players from Quincy. Games begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday and will run throughout both days. There will be raffle prizes and concessions for spectators.

Hundreds Participate In Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race

Proceeds Benefit Angel Fund, ALS Research

Hundreds of runners and walkers participated in the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race to Cure ALS, a/k/a The Squirrel Run XX, held recently in Quincy, Massachusetts. The race is held in memory of Jimmy Kennedy who lost his courageous battle against ALS in in 1997 at the age of 31.

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run benefit The Angel Fund, a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

MAYOR THOMAS P. KOCH (left) attended the recent Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race to Cure ALS, a/k/a The Squirrel Run XX, where he presented a citation to Rich Kennedy (center), president of The Angel Fund, proclaiming June 10 as Rich "Ratt" Kennedy Day in Quincy. Joining them is world renowned researcher Dr. Robert H. Brown, Jr. (right), of the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at UMass Medical Center in Worcester. The annual race, which benefits The Angel Fund, a 501 (c)(3) independent charity and its ALS research at UMass Medical Center, is in memory of Rich's brother Jimmy, who lost his battle with the disease at the age of 31. Photos Courtesy The Angel Fund

Arbella Insurance Group Among 'Best Places To Work'

The Arbella Insurance Group has been recognized as one of the Boston Business Journal's "Best Places to Work" for 2017 in the extra large business category, marking the ninth consecutive year the company has been honored.

The award program acknowledges businesses with high levels of employee satisfaction and positive workplace cultures.

"It is such an honor to be named a BBJ Best Place to Work for the ninth consecutive year," said Ellen Mann, director of human resources at the Arbella Insurance Group. "At Arbella, we put employees first. It's one thing to say that, but we actually do it. Our strategy is to put employees first. The result is stronger relationships with our customers because engaged employees provide better service and hold themselves accountable. They truly care about the work they do."

Blue Hill Adventure, Quarry Museum Celebrates 15th Anniversary

Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum marked its 15th anniversary this June with a citation from Gov. Charlie Baker and Secretary of the Commonwealth Francis Galvin.

Congratulating the Museum, state Rep. Bruce Ayers of Quincy (representing part of the Bue Hills area) said, "The Blue Hills are an environmental treasure. Abundant with historic sites and natural beauty, we are fortunate to have a large portion of the Blue Hills in Quincy. It is important to preserve this natural resource and observe its historic value. I commend the Blue Hills Adventure and Quarry Museum for all their hard work and efforts to accomplish this."

Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum (http://bluehilladventure-quarry-museum.webstarts.com/) is a non-profit dedicated to preservation of the Blue Hills offering hiking, guided tours of world famous Quincy Quarries, canoeing on Neponset River (partnership with Trustees of Reservation) in the summer and nordic (cross country) skiing and snow shoe programs in the winter.

David P. Hodgdon, founder and president of Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum, put 16 historic sites in the Blue Hills on the state and National Register in the Blue Hills area. BHAQM has filed bills over the years through state representatives for preservation of the Blue Hills. It also participates in MA Archeology Month, celebrated by MA Historic Commission, every year.

BHAQM was started by David Hodgdon, who took part in all Winter Olympics from Lake Placid (1980) to Vancouver (2010), as part of the Nordic Si Patrol and is a certified National Ski Patrol instructor (offering certification through BHAQM). During the winter his Olympic pins, outfits and memorabilia were displayed in two display windows at President's Place in Quincy Center. National Ski Patrol (Colorado) awarded David Hodgdon with a Lifetime Achievement Citation and Hon. Lifetime Member when he completed 50 years with them.

Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum has organized Meet and Greets with Winter and Summer Olympics medal winners and celebrated International Olympic Day (International Olympic Committee) & the first ever World Snow Day (International Ski Federation, Switzerland) in Quincy.

BHAQM Canoe's Neponset Clean Up program (including kayaks) helps clean up the Neponset River. The Canoe Program can be found via MA Office of Travel & Tourism and Discover Quincy websites.

BHAQM offers guided tours of Native American sites in the Blue Hills and is partnered with Mashantucket Pequot Museum, world's largest Native American Museum, in Connecticut

At present Blue Hill Adventure & Quarry Museum is looking for a new home for the museum.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

FROM NIGGLING TO NAGGING LEG PAIN

When minor niggling pain in a buttock develops into a nagging pain that shoots down the back of the leg into the toes, the condition known as "sciatica" is probably the cause. As the affected toes become numb, walking gets to be difficult and limping ends up the norm. By favoring one side to avoid pain in the other, sciatica patients create a compensatory effect that puts pressure on the opposite knee, which then begins to ache. These increasingly painful symptoms begin with an impingement on the "sciatic nerve," the largest nerve in the body. By addressing the root of the problem, sciatica sufferers may avoid the domino effect that could otherwise lead to harmful pain medications and lost mobility.

Chiropractors take many factors—including size, weight, and muscle structure—into consideration when deciding on which adjustment to make. A sciatica treatment plan may include several different treatments such as ice/cold therapies, ultrasound, TENS, and spinal adjustments (sometimes called spinal manipulation). To schedule an appointment, please call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220. Our family-oriented practice is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy.

P.S. A thorough chiropractic exam can identify structural misalignment, muscle spasms, poor muscle coordination, and/or incorrect body mechanics that may cause impingements on the sciatic nerve that lead to sciatica.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening, otherwise you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now is the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- We told you last time that Lebanon had banned "Wonder Woman" because the film's title star, Gal Gadot, served in the Israeli Army and Lebanon is at war with Israel. But it's more likely that it doesn't want Lebanese women to see a woman strong enough to overpower men and be an independent force. We wondered if other countries in the region that suppress women's rights have done the same. True to form, it has begun. Now "Wonder Woman" has been banned in Algeria and Tunisia, with more to come, no doubt.

Meanwhile, the rest of the world, who've had the sexual revolution, have already brought in more than $400 million at box offices, with no sign of slowing down. "Wonder Woman" also has bested another woman, "The Mummy," which stars Tom Cruise and cost $125 million to make (up $45 million from the 1999 version with Brendan Fraser, which grossed $416 million). They must've paid Cruise a bundle to do this film because the script and effects weren't up to par.

While Cher splits her time between Vegas and Miami, she has given her blessing for a musical about her life to open on Broadway in 2018. It is being directed by Jason Moore of the film "Pitch Perfect," the Tony Award-winning musical "Avenue Q" and "Shrek, The Musical."

If you miss "The Good Wife" and Julianna Margulies, you're in luck. She's just completed filming "Three Christs," with Richard Gere, Bradley Whitford and "Game of Thrones" star Peter Dinklage, based on a real psychiatric case study of three patients suffering paranoid schizophrenic delusions who each believe he is Jesus Christ. Margulies is currently filming the comedy/drama "Last Flag Flying," directed by Richard Linkletter and co-starring Bryan Cranston, Steve Carell and Lawrence Fishburne.

Cranston also is exec-producing (with 10 others) the science-fiction anthology series "Phillip K. Dick's Electric Dreams," which is 10 (stand-alone) episodes with Steve Buscemi, Greg Kinnear, Geraldine Chaplin, Anna Pacquin, Vera Farmiga and others in some of the episodes. The show will be offered by Amazon Video in the U.S.

We thought John Hamm had given up acting to do that tax company's commercials, but a closer look reveals he's been very busy. Starting June 28, we'll see him in "Baby Driver," with Ansel Elgort, Kevin Spacey, Lily James and Jamie Foxx. Also coming soon are: "Nostalgia," with Tim Robbins and Geena Davis (which screened at Sundance in January); "Aardvark," with Zachary Quinto and Jenny Slate (which screened at the Tribeca Film Fest in April); and the political drama "High Wire Act," with Rosamund Pike. All this festival action proves he's not another "Hamm" actor!

Collecting

by Larry Cox

Q: I have a Polaroid Speedliner Land Camera, Model 95A. It was originally purchased in the 1950s and is complete with leather case and all the accessories. I would like to know its value. -- Kathleen, New York

A: Most Polaroid cameras have little or no value, due to the fact that film for them is impossible to find. According to several price guides I consulted, Polaroid cameras seem to be selling in the $10 to $20 range. As with most collectibles, there are always exceptions. For example, collectors generally focus on the 110 series, the 180 and 195. The SX-70 foldable cameras are selling for less than $20 in my region.

Q: My cousin had a large collection of Mayfair Depression Glass. I have two questions: When and where was this set made? -- Wanda, Flagstaff, Arizona

A: The Mayfair pattern was manufactured by the Federal Glass Company in 1934. The plant was located in Columbus, Ohio. Incidentally, the set came in three colors: amber, crystal and green.

Q: We have a 1939 Philco console radio. It is in a walnut cabinet and is the 39-116 model. I have been offered $600 for it. -- Ken, Kentucky

A: Take the money and run. According to the Collector's Guide to Antique Radios by John Slusser (Collector Books, $19.95), your radio is worth in the $220 to $250 range.

Q: I sent a letter to an expert you mentioned in your column. After three weeks I still have not received an answer. I thought you should know this. -- Bob, Texas

A: Many of the people I mention in this column are nationally and internationally known experts who receive piles of mail. Many have told me that they only answer letters that contain a self-addressed, stamped envelope. First of all, did you enclose a SASE? If so, be prepared to wait a reasonable time.

What is reasonable? That depends on the expert. I once received an answer from an art appraiser almost a year after I had sent my original letter to him. Keep in mind, the advice you're requesting is free -- except for your postage costs -- so be patient.

Write to Larry Cox in care of KFWS, 628 Virginia Drive, Orlando, FL 32803, or send e-mail to questionsforcox@aol.com. Due to the large volume of mail he receives, Mr. Cox cannot personally answer all reader questions, nor does he do appraisals. Do not send any materials requiring return mail.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was American civil-rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., who made the following sage observation: "We all too often have socialism for the rich and rugged free market capitalism for the poor."

* If you go on a road trip to the Northwest Territories of Canada, keep an eye out for the unusual license plates -- they're shaped like polar bears.

* When he was 66 years old, American novelist Edgar Rice Burroughs -- beloved creator of Tarzan and Mars explorer John Carter -- served as a war correspondent, going along on bombing runs during World War II.

* Did you ever wonder what makes French vanilla different from other kinds of vanilla? Evidently, French vanilla contains egg yolk.

* If you're like me, you have fond memories of a bookmobile visiting your neighborhood. For more out-of-the-way locales, though, there are other kinds of mobile libraries. For instance, residents of some parts of Norway look forward to the arrival of Epos, a library on a boat. In addition to space for 6,000 books, the boat has room for author readings and other literary events.

* In Vietnam, the conflict that Americans commonly call the Vietnam War is known as the Resistance War Against America, or just the American War.

* You might be surprised by the strength of the mantis shrimp. When it swings its claw at its prey, it doesn't have to hit the creature -- the shock wave from the attack is often enough to stun or kill the animal.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "A go-green and lose weight tip: Shut off your car and walk inside banks, restaurants, etc. You'll burn less gas than sitting in the drive-thru, and the walk will flatten your figure." -- S.S. in South Carolina

* "Here is my tip: When closing a plastic bag, use a clip-type wooden clothespin with a metal springform. It holds much better than a 'twist tie' and takes less time and effort to use. Keep a bunch in a kitchen drawer with rubber bands and other handy things. They're not expensive and can be used over and over again." -- S.L. in Illinois

* If you are sensitive to the smell of leftover coffee grounds, here's a tip from E.O'B. in Delaware: "Line a 34.5-ounce coffee can with a plastic bag and dump the filter and grounds in it every day. Keep lid on. At week's end, or trash day, tie up the bag and put in trash." (Or the compost pile! -- JoAnn)

* If you're watching what you eat, try food logging for a week. You may be taking in more calories than you think. Write down everything you eat and drink -- including tiny treats or spoonfuls you eat while cooking! -- and use an online calorie counter or get a book from the library. You might surprise yourself.

* M.A in Oklahoma has a novel tank for her fish: a coffee pot! It's economical -- most thrift stores sell glass coffee pots for $1 or less -- and easy to handle, too. She has two pots, and when it's necessary to clean one, she pops the fish right into the other pot with no fuss. She can even transport her fish easily around her apartment.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, June 15, at approximately 4:10 p.m., members of the Quincy Police Drug Control Unit were conducting surveillance in the Houghs Neck area. At this time, Detective Glennon observed a known heroin user drive out of a gas station.

The DCU received complaints about this particular male using drugs. The male drove from Houghs Neck to the Montclair Area where he stopped on Ardell Street. He exited his vehicle and walked into the driveway of a home and less then 30 seconds later, he returned to his vehicle. He then drove to the North Quincy MBTA Station where he picked up a male, also a known substance (heroin) abuser.

The two males were followed into Dorchester where they were stopped in traffic. The passenger then exited the vehicle and got into the front passenger seat of a Dodge Dakota which was directly behind the vehicle he was originally in. The license plate was queried on the Dakota and it showed it was registered to a man who had past drug charges on his record (heroin).The male then proceeded onto Hancock Street with Detectives Glennon and O'Brien following him.

The Dakota turned onto Hill Street and parked, being watch by Detectives Cassidy and Powers. The two occupants waited in the vehicle. The male suspect was followed up Hancock Street for a few blocks and then turned left onto Rill Street. He was approached by a male who entered the front passenger seat of the vehicle and they drove off. Detective Glennon then observed the vehicle on the next street with the male suspect as the sole occupant/driver.

As he approached the corner, Detectives Powers and Cassidy observed the male suspect pull up to the Dodge Dakota and the vehicles then drove off together. Both vehicles were then followed back towards Quincy, where the detectives elected to stop both vehicles. Once stopped, Detective O'Brien approached the male suspect's vehicle and announced "Quincy Police" with his badge displayed.

The suspect looked at the detective, immediately leaned away and made swallowing motions. The detective attempted to prevent the suspect from swallowing the drugs by removing him from the vehicle as Sergeant Tapper arrived to assist. Detectives searched the suspect's vehicle and located an open corner bag which had heroin in it tucked between the drivers seat and the center console. At the same time, Detectives Powers, Glennon, and Cassidy approached the occupants of the Dakota.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Cassidy observed one occupant holding a hypodermic needle and had a paper fold in his lap. Detective Cassidy had this suspect exit the vehicle and as he did this the paper fold and needle fell to the ground. Detective Powers then read suspect (2) his Miranda Rights to which he stated he understood.

Detective Powers asked where the drugs were and suspect 2 pointed to the ground. Detective Cassidy recovered the paper fold which contained heroin. He also possessed a bag of hypodermic needles. Detective Glennon approached the driver's door and observed the driver holding an uncapped hypodermic needle. Detective Glennon ordered the driver (suspect 3) to drop the needle which could be used as a weapon.

Detective Glennon read suspect 3 his Miranda Rights to which he stated he understood. He asked suspect 3 if he had any drugs and the suspect said it was in his hand. He gave the heroin to the Detective. Detectives Coen, Duran, and Keenan arrived after the stop. Detective Coen located an open corner bag in suspect 3's wallet which contained a light green powder. This was seized and will be forwarded to the State Drug lab with the other contraband for further testing.

The three suspects were all charged with possession Class A and conspiracy to violate the drug laws. Suspects 2 and 3 were also charged with a subsequent offense as they each have a prior guilty finding for possession Class A. All three were placed under arrest and transported to the Quincy Police Station in the prisoner wagon by Officer Watkins.

Suspect 1 was a 55-year-old from Dedham, suspect 2 a 47-year-old from Quincy and suspect 3 was a 52-year-old Quincy resident.

Nice Work!

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DOES NOT WANT YOUR BANK ACCOUNT INFORMATION:

The FTC sent out a bulletin advising people not to give out personal information to any federal, state or local agency just because "you" have been asked to. The latest example: Some people have received an email that claims to be from Maureen Ohlhausen, the FTC's Acting Chairman, however, it is not. The email asks you to provide your bank account information so that you can get money owed to you from the government's settlement with Western Union. The email is a scam to steal your financial information. In 2016, consumers reported more complaints about imposter scams to the FTC than any other fraud. If you get an email as described, do not respond or click on any links. You can forward it to the FTC at spam@uce.gov. The FTC is involved in a $586 million settlement with Western Union, but the U.S. Department of Justice will control the refund process, which has not started yet.

Scammers continue to create ruses like this because there are enough victims to make it profitable. They'll say anything or claim to be anyone to get your financial information – then they'll use it to steal from your financial accounts or commit other crimes. The FTC does shut down scams and return money to people who lost it to dishonest or unfair business practices. They will never ask for money, your Social Security number, or any banking information so you can apply for a refund or cash a check. If the FTC needs to get money to you, they will usually send a check through the mail.

Restore Christian Church Summer Block Parties Resume July 13

Restore Christian Church is sponsoring community parties in parks throughout the city this summer.

The free block parties will feature food, live music, inflatables and yard games for families to enjoy.

This is the third consecutive summer that Restore has hosted the block parties. Last year hundreds of people attended, and this year the church hopes even more people will come out to enjoy the festivities.

Jeff Oakes, lead minister at Restore Christian Church, said, "I've been waiting all year for this. These parties are a blast! My family loves inviting our friends and neighbors." He added: "I'm thrilled to be a part of a church that cares for the people in our city and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy themselves with their friends and families."

Block parties are scheduled on:

- Thursday, July 13, Safford Park, 166 Beale St., Wollaston Hill.
- Thursday, July 20, Beechwood Knoll, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston.
- Thursday, Aug. 3, Perkins Playground, 25 Narragansett Rd., Merrymount.

The parties begin at 6 p.m. and end at 8pm.

The public is welcome.

Blue Hills Bank Foundation Supports The Wonderfund

The Blue Hills Bank Foundation, in partnership with Hingham-headquartered UPPAbaby, a stroller and car seat manufacturer, support the Wonderfund, the 501©3 arm of the Department of Child and Families in Massachusetts that provides comfort and dignity to children in traumatic situations.

Through this charitable giving collaboration, the Blue Hills Bank Foundation is granting $5,000 to be used to purchase essential items for foster families, while UPPAbaby is providing $10,000 in strollers for foster parents and caretakers within the Massachusetts Department of Children and Families (DCF) Coastal Area Office. The office serves the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth.

"The Wonderfund is so grateful to the Blue Hills Foundation and UPPAbaby for providing critically-needed baby equipment to infants and toddlers involved with the Department of Children and Families' Coastal Area Office," said Jennifer Kitchenham, Executive Director of the Wonderfund. "This generous donation of strollers will go a long way to keep our kids safe and comfortable.

"We sincerely appreciate this vital partnership with the Blue Hills Bank Foundation and UPPAbaby. They are true leaders in the South Shore Community and beyond."

Pamela Manning-Ashmanskas

A funeral service for Pamela Manning-Ashmanskas of Quincy was held June 23 in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Manning-Ashmanskas died June 19 after a long and courageous battle with Diamond Blackfan anemia and leukemia.

She was a lifelong Quincy resident. She attended Quincy Public Schools, Deland, FL Schools and college. At the age of 2, she was diagnosed with Diamond Blackfan anemia and amazed family, friends and the medical community. Over her lifetime she had received over 200 blood transfusions and had doctors from around the world care for her. Mrs. Manning-Ashmanskas was the oldest Diamond Blackfan anemia patient in the US.

She loved seashells, the sun and the beach. She especially loved Wollaston Beach and Lauderdale By The Sea. Her love for "whimsical stuff" was admired, while her sense of humor and knowledge of politics, holistic health and world was amazing. In January 2017, she was diagnosed with leukemia with little chance for another birthday. Her final special memories were the American flag being raised on the roof at Mellon Brae Condominiums in Wollaston on Memorial Day and a surprise visit from a special friend, Dr. Carlos Sierra, who flew up overnight in June 2017 for a stay at the Custom House in Boston and provided Mrs. Manning-Ashmanskas with medical and spiritual care, it was her most recent "great time." Growing up she enjoyed the Old Wolly Theatre, Brigham's, Clam Box, swimming and laughing with the thousands of people she came in contact with.

PAMELA MANNING-ASHMANSKAS

Mrs. Manning-Ashmanskas was a very special person and all who met and knew her attest to that. She had a very special way with people of all races and lifestyles. Not a bad bone was found in her body, if you lost something she would help anyone until the item was found – no matter the length of time. She will be remembered by her saying "Go big or go out" and will be dearly missed by all who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Beloved wife to David Ashmanskas of Quincy for 26 years. Dear daughter to Marjorie Clay of OOB, Maine. Cherished sister to Julie Manning of Quincy and a loving aunt to Jade, who she helped nurture and provide guidance for many years. Adored sister-in-law to Joan Troup of Canton, Thomas Ashmanskas of Wollaston, Judy Koelsch of Hingham, Peter Ashe of Hanson, and Albert Ashmanskas of PA. Also survived by several nieces and nephews and her friends, Marlena, Donna, and Mary who were constant companions and caretakers.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

David F. Bouley, Jr., 47

Visiting hours for David F. Bouley, Jr., 47, of Braintree and Quincy were held Monday in McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Mr. Bouley died June 21.

He graduated from UMass Boston where he was inducted as a tennis player into the their Athletic Hall of Fame. For the last 15 years he worked for First Electronics as a cabling supervisor. Growing up in Quincy, he was known all around town as "Boobin." In his free time, Mr. Bouley enjoyed fishing.

Loving son of David F. Bouley, Sr. of Braintree and the late Xanthia A. "Sandy" (Verra) Bouley. Loving brother of Jennifer Doherty and husband Joseph of South Weymouth. Devoted uncle of Emily and Sarah Doherty. Also survived by a long time group of loyal friends.

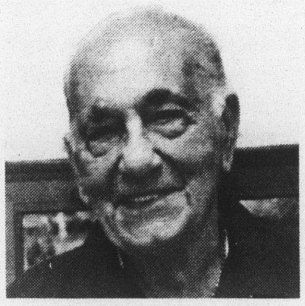
Memorial donations may be made to the Pat Roche Hospice Home, Norwell VNA and Hospice, 120 Longwater Dr., Norwell, MA 02061.

OBITUARIES

Anthony Cronis

Anthony "Tony" Cronis of North Quincy died peacefully at home, surrounded by his loving family, on June 24.



ANTHONY CRONIS

Born in Boston in 1918, Mr. Cronis moved to North Quincy in the early '60s. He owned a couple of businesses in the South End and for 20 years before retiring, worked as a carpenter in the Union Local 33.

The beloved husband of 35 years to Lena (Minichiello) Cronis, Mr. Cronis was the loving father of Douglas R. Cronis and his wife Regina of Weymouth; step-father of Brian and Kevin Weaver of Everett; grandfather of 5 and great-grandfather of 5; and is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Mr. Cronis split his time between Quincy and Naples, Fla. He stayed active by being a member of the Castle Island group, Ward 4 Senior Center and the Kennedy Center in Quincy. He enjoyed dancing, gardening, fishing and spending time with his grandchildren.

Services will be private.

Arrangements by the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Scott D. Rooney, 45

A funeral Mass for Scott D. Rooney, age 45, was celebrated June 23 in Christ Episcopal Church, Quincy.

Mr. Rooney died suddenly on June 16 following a car accident.

He was a lifelong Quincy resident and worked side by side with his brother Gerald Rooney at Rooney Electric for many years. Mr. Rooney enjoyed playing and watching sports.

Beloved son of Marion B. (Zubris) Rooney of Quincy and the late Philip M. Rooney. He was the beloved brother of Richard of Quincy, Janet Bean and her husband Allan of Fort Pierce, Florida, Gerald of Weymouth, and Patricia Rodriguez and her husband Reinaldo of Weymouth. Beloved longtime boyfriend of Robin Herrick. Survived by cousins, nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, and friends.

Arrangements by Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Debra A. Condon-Davis, 57

Funeral services for Debra A. (Zagami) Condon-Davis, age 57, of Quincy will be held at 10 a.m. Friday in Christ Church Episcopal, Quincy.

Mrs. Condon-Davis died Sunday at South Shore Hospital after a courageous, three-year battle with breast cancer.

She was born and raised in Quincy and was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 1979. Mrs. Condon-Davis was a lifelong resident of Quincy. She was a homemaker but as a young woman had worked in the financial industry for the former Scudder, Stevens & Clark Inc.

Mrs. Condon-Davis was talented with arts and crafts, loved animals, and enjoyed bowling and dancing. She was devoted to her family, always supporting the activities and accomplishments of her children.

Beloved wife for fifteen years of William F. Davis. Devoted mother of Kristen L. Condon and Cory L. Condon, both of Quincy. Step-mother of Andrew W. Davis of Waltham, Kristin L. Tonini, her husband Matt, and daughter Ella Rose of Cambridge. Loving daughter of Joseph and Judith (Crocker) Zagami of Quincy. Dear sister of Diane M. Rubin of Canton. Aunt of James E. Rubin of Holbrook and Danielle M. Rubin of Canton. Niece of Vincent Zagami of Quincy.

DEBRA A. CONDON-DAVIS

The Rev. Clifford R. Brown, Rector, will officiate the services.

Visiting hours are 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284-9168.

Edward A. Gillis, Jr., 61

A funeral Mass for Edward A. "Eddie" Gillis, Jr., age 61, of Wrentham and formerly of Quincy, will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Gillis died peacefully June 22, with the comfort of his loving family.

He was born in Quincy to the late Anne B. (Delforno) and Edward A. Gillis, Massachusetts State Police, Retired. He had lived at the Wrentham Developmental Center for many years.

Mr. Gillis enjoyed his many years of employment with the "Redemco" program at the Wrentham Developmental Center. He participated in Special Olympics events, including track and bowling. Mr. Gillis loved music and dancing and enjoyed watching wrestling and cowboy movies with his late mother, Anne. He was proud of his strong Catholic faith and was a former longtime altar server.

Devoted brother of Cheryl A. Gillis-Smith and her husband Bill of Braintree, Shawn M. Gillis of Pacific Palisades, California, Debra L. O'Neil and her husband Darren of Hanover, Erin M. Gillis and her partner Edward T. Quinn of Scituate. Loving uncle of Ryan Smith, Brittany Bigelow and her husband Cory and their daughter Hailey, Shawna Foster and her husband Jason, D.J., Devin, and Dylan O'Neil, and Effie Quinn. Also survived by his dear cousin, Michael Sadlier of Quincy and his cherished Wrentham family.

EDWARD A. GILLIS, JR.

Visiting hours were 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 9 a.m. Thursday, prior to the Mass.

Interment Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wrentham Developmental Center, 131 Emerald St., Wrentham, MA 02093.

The Gillis family would like to acknowledge and thank Mr. Gillis' many caregivers and friends at the Wrentham Developmental Center. Their love and caring support has been greatly appreciated.

Faulty Wires Blamed For West Quincy Fire

By SCOTT JACKSON

A two-alarm fire that caused $200,000 in damage to a West Quincy home was likely caused by faulty wiring.

Firefighters were called to the home 38 Branch St. – a dead-end road off of Centre Street – around 10:45 a.m. on June 21. Five engines, three ladders and the department's rescue truck all responded to the fire inside the two-story home, and it took 45 minutes to put out the fire.

The first firefighters on scene smelled smoke and observed it coming from the attic of the home. The fire spread from the attic to bedrooms in the back of the home because it could not vent out of the attic.

The homeowner, an 89-year-old woman, was home when the fire started and was at the front door when firefighters arrived. Fire Chief Joseph Barron said the woman was taken to South Shore Hospital Weymouth for an evaluation.

About twenty firefighters responded to the scene. One firefighter was treated and released from Quincy Medical Center after a portion of ceiling collapsed on him while overhauling inside the house to check for hot spots. Barron said that firefighter was taken there for precautionary reasons.

The chief said the fire was mostly likely caused by faulty wiring and was not suspicious in nature.

"It appears to be electrical in nature – faulty wiring," Barron said. "It was a very old house."

The house at 38 Branch St. was built in 1880, according to the city assessor's online database.

$167,000 For Sewer Repairs OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors approved a request to appropriate $167,000 for emergency sewer repairs at the intersection of East Squantum Street and Victory Road during a special session Monday.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi requested the $167,000 – which will come from the sewer rehabilitation fund – after crews responded to a collapsed manhole at the intersection June 5. Raymondi, in a memo, said an inspection of the manhole revealed a "complete structural failure/disintegration of the structure that receives the sewer discharge that includes Marina Bay and Boston Scientific."

Crews had to cover the roadway with steel plates following the manhole collapse, Raymondi said. The $167,000 will go towards creating an extensive sewer pump bypass structure, a new manhole and road repairs.

Councillors approved the appropriation in a 6-0 vote. Ward 6 Councillor William Harris said the location of the manhole collapse in the intersection makes it a safety issue that needs to be addressed.

"It's in such a spot that it really needs to be taken care of," he said. "It's a safety issue."

New Candidate In At-Large Field

By SCOTT JACKSON

Eight residents are now circulating papers to run for the three at-large seats on the City Council in this fall's municipal election, with less than a month to gather signatures to qualify for the ballot.

The most recent resident to pull papers for the at-large race is John Rodophele. A resident of Grenwold Road, he took out nomination papers June 22.

First-term incumbents Noel DiBona of Chickatabot Road and Nina Liang of Williams Street have both pulled papers to run for re-election. Two other elected officials are giving up their seats to run for an at-large spot on the council: Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, a Rock Island Road resident, and School Committee member Anne Mahoney of Ferriter Street.

Joining them are political newcomers Domenic Papile of Ridgeway Drive, Robert Ross of Howe Street, Stanley Dong Fang Xiao of Bicknell Road, and Rodophele.

The third incumbent Councillor At-Large, Joseph Finn, announced in May he would not seek re-election. Finn was first elected to the council in 2001 and is its longest-serving current member.

Residents running for the at-large seats need to collect signatures from 50 registered voters before July 25 to secure a spot on the fall ballot. Xiao is the only at-large candidate to return the requisite number of signatures as of Monday, according to the City Clerk's Office.

If seven or more candidates qualify for the ballot in the at-large race, a preliminary election would take place on Sept. 12 to whittle the field down to six. The final election is set for Nov. 7.

Quincy Man Guilty Of Bella Bond Murder

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy man was found guilty of second-degree murder Monday in the death of Bella Bond, the 2-year-old girl who became known as "Baby Doe" after her body was found on Deer Island two years ago.

A jury in Suffolk County Superior Court convicted Michael McCarthy, age 37, on the charge of murder in the second degree after four days of deliberations. McCarthy faces a mandatory life sentence with the possibility of parole after years and was to be sentenced by Judge Janet Sanders Wednesday.

Bond's body was found on Deer Island in Boston Harbor by a passerby in June 2015. She was dubbed "Baby Doe" as Massachusetts State Police attempted to identify her.

It wasn't until September 2015 that investigators were able to identify the body. At that time, Bella's mother, Rachelle Bond, and McCarthy, her then boyfriend, were arrested in connection with the death after Rachelle Bond told a friend McCarthy killed her daughter.

Bond, age 40, pleaded guilty in February to being an accessory after the fact for helping McCarthy dispose of her daughter's body. She testified against McCarthy at his trial.

McCarthy's attorney contended Rachelle Bond was the real killer who made up a "web of lies" to blame McCarthy.

City To Acquire, Raze 2 Quincy Center Buildings

car garage can be built on site – and widen that portion of Cottage Avenue to allow two-way traffic and provide access to the new garage.

The city has targeted the two buildings for acquisition since 2007, when the first Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center was put together, Geary said. The acquisition of the two buildings is also included in fourth revision of the URDP, which was approved last year.

"There was language in that that re-affirmed the need to acquire these two properties," Geary said.

"Both for the upgrading of subterranean infrastructure – a specific sanitary sewer line that needs to be relocated from underneath that building out into Dennis Ryan Parkway. Also, it was envisioned in the original URDP and its amendment number four that this area where the two buildings are located would serve as access/egress to the garage."

The city's land disposition agreement with Peter O'Connell – who will construct the 15-story Chestnut Place building on Dennis Ryan Parkway adjacent to the two parcels on Cottage Avenue – requires that the developer construct and maintain a new public park that will be located on part of the land where the buildings now stand.

Geary on Monday said that even if O'Connell were unable to move forward with his project, which received approval from the Planning Board June 21, the city would need to take the Cottage Avenue parcels to support redevelopment projects of the Hancock Lot. One other project – LBC Partners' Nova Residences at 1500 Hancock St. – will soon get underway, and the envisions two more developments on Revere Road on either side of the new garage.

James Masterman, an attorney specializing in eminent domain retained by the city, said the $3.5 million recommended by the administration as payment for the takings was based on the work of three appraisers.

"That number, that amount, that award, has been fully vetted not only by myself but by the appraisers that were hired to do so," Masterman said. "We have walked the building, we have talked to the land owners through counsel, we have talked to many of the tenants, we have seen the building, we have inspected every aspect of it – from the bottom all the way to the top."

Councillor Joseph Finn questioned Masterman about the difference between the assessed values of the properties – about $1.8 million combined – and the $3.5 million recommendation. Masterman said that throughout Massachusetts the assessed value and fair market value for properties that have had the same owner for a number of years would not be the same.

"You're going to find a disconnect between fair cash value for assessment purposes and fair market value in a taking," he said.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said Quincy Center needs a new garage for development to take off, and people need a way to access the garage.

"I think we all agree we need a garage downtown in order for the downtown to succeed, and the garage needs access, which is what this is about – these takings," he said. "This was always contemplated for a very long time…so this isn't anything surprising."

Councillor Noel DiBona said the acquisition of the two properties would help alleviate traffic in the vicinity of the Hancock Lot by providing a new access point to the garage.

"This taking is very important – an integral part of the design of how we're going to enter the garage," he said.

The city will take ownership of the two buildings within 30 days, Deputy Planning Director Rob Stevens said after the council's vote. The city will also begin working to relocate the 14 businesses – which includes Bistro Chi and Kama Lounge, Mondi's Pizza, The Bridal Secret, a hair stylist and barbershop, professional offices and others – that now operate in those two buildings. Those businesses will be able to say on site for up to four months and will be eligible to receive relocation fees from the city.

The $80 million downtown improvement bond approved by the City Council June 19 will cover the $3.5 million cost to acquire the buildings and their demolition, which will cost $500,000. The bond also includes $1.9 million to cover the cost of relocating the tenants, $111,500 for a relocation consultant who will work with the businesses on site, and $75,000 for legal costs related to the eminent domain takings.

Beechwood Knoll School 'Share Your Career' Week

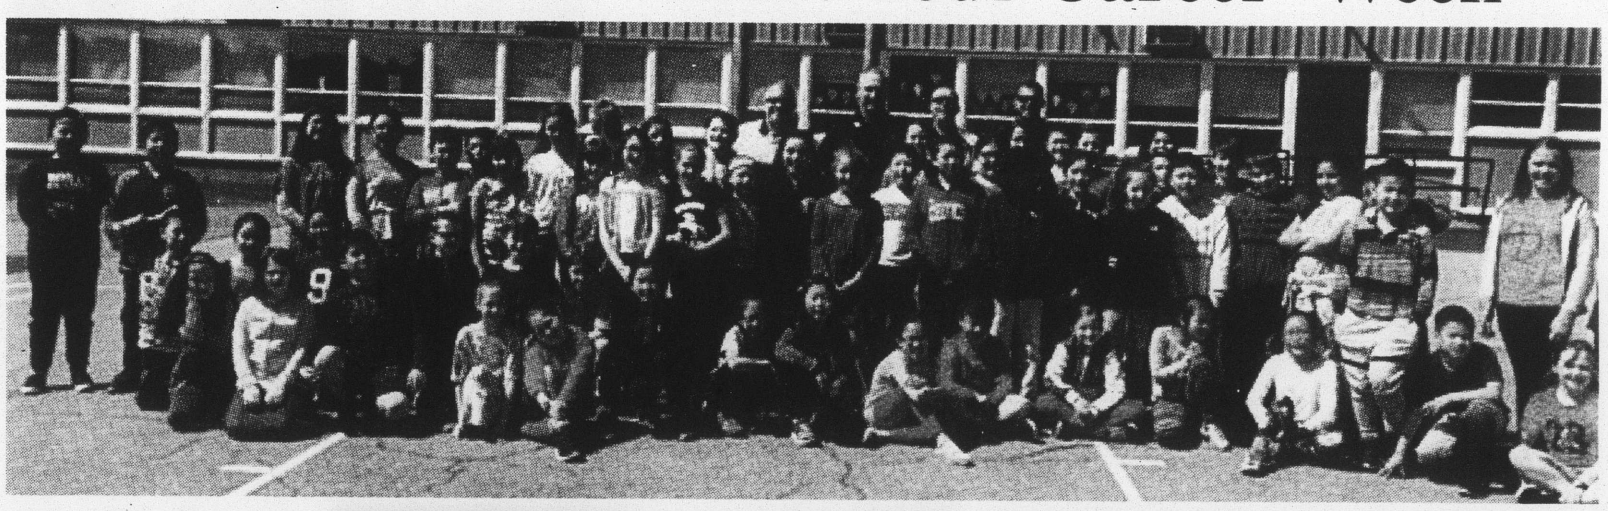
ers. "An important lesson is to be a life-learner, be good at what you do, be proud of what you do. Success is outed in good decision-making. My advice to you is to become good decision makers. Think before you act."

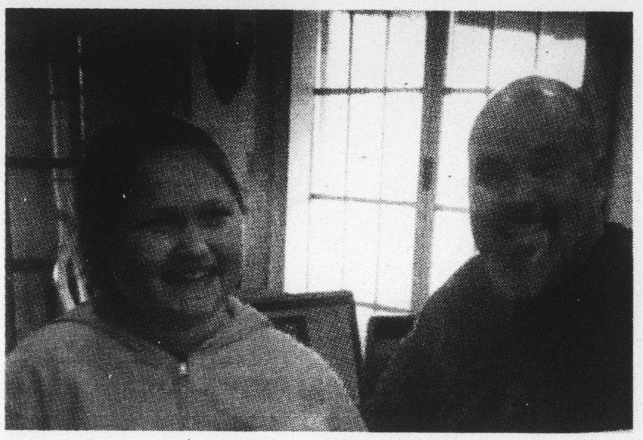
Officer Glennon also invited the Quincy Bike Unit and Police Dog handler Officer Dan Parisi with his partner "Rommel" to demonstrate daily responsibilities of the Bike Unit and Police Dog Team. Rommel performed an impressive search and rescue mission with a set of keys. Students enjoyed seeing law enforcement in action.

Mike Johnston, director of Facilities at Eastern Nazarene College, spoke to the students about multitasking and managing a budget. Students got to fill out their own work orders and experience what it was like to be director of Facilities.

Another ENC parent, Brad Zarges, spoke of his career as director of Athletics at ENC. Zarges hopes to facilitate a Beechwood Knoll Appreciation day at one of his future college sporting events. "This would be a great opportunity for our BKS students to interact with local college students while giving ENC students the opportunity to become student role models," Mulcahy said.

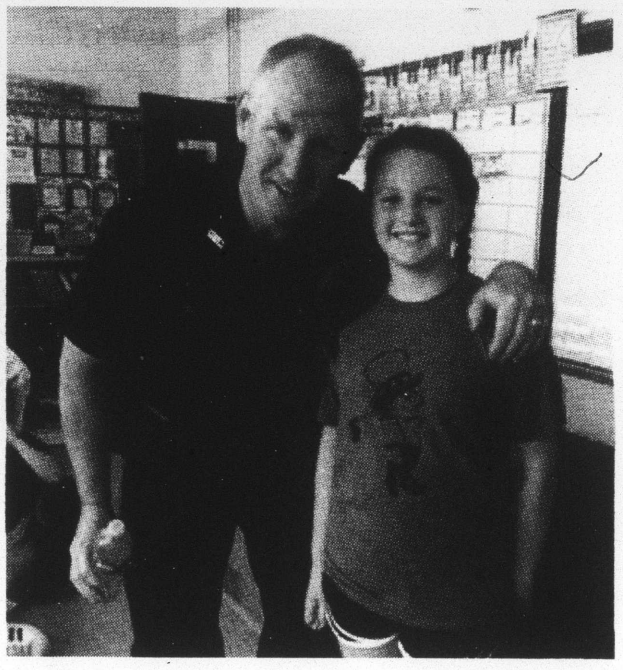


Another partnership BKS may be looking forward to is with the Quincy Water Department. Parent Paul Della Barba conducted an experiment with the students testing chlorine levels in the water. Students were amazed at the many roles Quincy Water Department takes on to provide their families with clean and safe water.



Della Barba said he hopes to have the Beechwood Knoll students participate in an "Adopt a Drain" program next year to provide students with the opportunity to be active participants in keeping our city's water safe and clean.

The Beechwood Knoll staff and students thanked the parents for supporting this special week and for being a resource to the school. The school is looking forward to the third annual event next year.



Participants in this year's Share Your Career week included:

Mike Johnston, director of Facilities at Eastern Nazarene College; Carole Ferolito, nurse manager Marina Bay; Ann Louise Welch, hair stylist; Michael Gendron, Quincy High Math and Programming teacher; Quincy Police Officer Sean Glennon; Brad Zarges, director of Athletics at Eastern Nazarene College; Gwen Hamilton, kindergarten teacher at Campus Kinder Hauss; Paul Della Barba, Quincy Water Department; Ed Lee, cyber-security risk management at Fidelity; Sinead Dolan, scientist at Novartis; and Patrick Carey, teacher/musician "Finians Son."

Having served a distinguished 10 year career as flagship of the US Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean and the Second Fleet in the Atlantic, the USS Salem served as served as a Lady of Diplomacy. Although she never fired her mighty guns in anger, her very presence served as a stimulus for peace during those troubled times that came to be called the Cold War. Imagine a small city placed in "mothballs", stored for 35 years, and then reopened for tours and restored to its former glory.
